GEN. ASSEMBLY

committee never got to the Congo question. It was in the debate that South Africa was the target of Commonwealth support when the roll - call does occur.

The resolution on South West Africa, a huge former German territory under South African rule by virtue of an old League of Nations mandate, was approved by a vote of 84 to 0 with eight abstentions.

Despite the sharpness of speeches, the three resolutions on The Congo were comparatively mild.

The Soviet Union's proposal presented Friday asks for a reaffirmation by the Congolese parliament within 21 days under UN protection to re-assert the Congo's territorial integrity and political independence. But it did not renew the demand for withdrawal of Belgian troops. UN Secretary - General Dag Hammarskjold has the archconservative of woe in The Congo.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Valerian Zorin in his speech once more denounced Hammarskjold but there was no formal demand for his dismissal. Neither was there a renewal of the Russian demand that the Congo operation be scrapped forthwith.

Some sources said the key to the moderate Russian resolution is that the Soviet motive if the Congolese parliament might now rally to General Olenga or Joseph Ileo, Kasavubu's premier.

No Safer Place to Call Man A Killer Than in Assembly

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Minto

If you want to call a man a murderer and get away with it, there's no safer place to do it than in the United Nations General Assembly, the forum for peace and justice in the world.

During the assembly's 15th session Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold has repeatedly been accused of complicity in murder and he appears to be getting a little tired of it. The government of Secessionist Katanga province has said that Gizenga, Congolese premier Patrice Lumumba was slain by tribesmen, who received a government reward — cynics called it a sort of bounty — for the kill. But the Soviet bloc blames Hammarskjold.

DAG 'FINGERED'

"We cannot reconcile ourselves with the fact that a prominent post in the United Nations is held by a man who has sullied himself with murder," said Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in a speech March 14.

"It is not only he who wields the knife of murder that is the murderer — the main criminal is he who has placed the weapon in his hand."

Hammarskjold hoped that a cooler forum for consideration would be taken by the assembly against these charges and in time the world today's failure to do so that apparently led to his decision to make a speech Wednesday. He said:

"I have accusations, couched in the most general and condemning terms, were put forward without attempt to give them credence by the indication of any substantive factor on which they might be based."

WHERE WAS JUSTICE?

'Solicitors Be Less Demanding' Is This Retired Woman's Wish

By THOMAS COLLINS

This woman may be a neighbor of yours. If so, you ought to be ashamed of yourself.

If not, you might revise your own retirement planning by listening to the story she has to tell about a nice married couple who retired and remained in their old community.

"Through our working years," she says, "we built a small summer cottage not far from our home. When my husband retired, we decided that we would sell our home, live in the cottage during the summer, then rent a cottage in the South for the cold months. Everybody immediately said it would be a mistake at our age to move away from old friends.

"So we remained where we were. And in many ways we are quite happy. We have our friends, our freedom, and our hobbies. But we have a problem and I think we can only solve it by moving away and making a new life among strangers.

"The problem is financial. Our retirement income is fixed and small. We can spend little money for anything except necessities. Yet this community, where we chose to stay, is not the least bit considerate of that fact.

"The demands of prices and taxes keep going up. But the cost of being good neighbors keeps going up too. We had a rental that after retirement we would give one dollar to every lot which we formerly gave five, and two dollars to former ten dollar causes. But the neighbors and civic organizations — and even the churches — who come soliciting for these causes keep insisting they need more from us, not less.

"It is acutely embarrassing to tell a charity solicitor at the door that you must now reduce your five dollars to one dollar because you are retired.

"My husband has quietly dropped out of a golf club he belonged to for ten years since there are no bargain rates for pensioners. I have had to develop convenient headaches to avoid women's organizations to which I belong because the social affairs of these groups plus their special assessments for pet charities are beyond my financial grasp.

"The number of solicitations which come to nice retired people who stay on in their nice communities — all for good causes of course — is unbelievable. What can you do about them except to say 'I'm sorry' at the front door and be blunt.

"You can move away to live among strangers who don't know you when you could do better and therefore don't respect more than one dollar. That is what my husband and I have finally decided to do.

EVERYBODY KNOWS

"For we know as almost everybody does, that any embarrassment in these matters is not confined to you and the neighbor knocking at the front door. All fund-begging, whether for the church, the club, the Community Chest, or Buggy-Whip Park, is now made public. Everybody knows how much you gave.

"The woman's plight is not unusual for those who live in the better communities of America. Call it false pride or misplaced values or whatever you choose. It is still embarrassing and society allows no fitting way to escape from it.

If you are one who can be embarrassed, perhaps it is just as well for you to move. But after retirement it doesn't actually matter if you can afford one dollar instead of five. You can tell the solicitor and anybody else asking you for money to go play hopscotch and leave you be. What would you really lose?

"Jest a Second"

"You might just manage to last your lifetime."

FEAR 212 LOST IN SHARK-FILLED SEA

Sees Grave Doubt As to Its Validity

REGINA (CP) — When Lieutenant-Governor Frank Bastedo withheld assent Saturday to a bill passed by the legislature, it was the first time such power had been used in Saskatchewan.

The lieutenant - governor reserved assent to Bill 56, intended to give the government power to order alterations to some or all of 2,300 mineral leases which are before the province's mineral rights reorganization board.

In a post - prorogation press statement, Mr. Bastedo said of the bill: "There is grave doubt as to its validity."

Said Education Minister A. E. Blakeney, who piloted Bill 56 through three readings in the legislature: "My opinion is that this bill is constitutionally valid."

A federal justice department memorandum says that since confederation lieutenant - governors have exercised their power of reservation on only 96 other pieces of provincial legislation. The memorandum, a discussion of the power of reservation, was written in 1958 by Professor James Henry of the Law Faculty of Dalhousie University.

USED IN 1937

The last time was 1937, when the lieutenant-governor of Alberta reserved assent to three bills passed by the Social Credit government. Two bills gave the Alberta government control of private power over banks and the third gave the government wide control of the press.

The 96 bills that have been sent to the Governor-General, only 13 have received assent. A bill does not get a year's notice a year after reservation, it dies automatically.

The power of reservation also is discussed in the office of the Lieutenant-Governor, written in 1957 by Professor John Saywell of the University of Toronto.

Lt. - Gov. Bastedo's decision Saturday caught the legislature by surprise.

In 1937, Alberta's Social Credit government argued that the power of reservation was dead. The power, used chiefly in the days of the Confederation, had not been used for 17 years before the 1937 session.

The federation government submitted Alberta's argument to the Supreme Court. The Court ruled that since the power was confirmed by the NBA Act, which is a live act, the power was still alive.

FAMILY RE-UNITED

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Phillip Crosby, son of crooner Bing's twin sons, and his ex-showgirl wife, Kathryn Drummond, are back together again. They are parents of two small children. Mrs. Crosby said they agreed after a family dinner at Bing's house Friday night to call off their separation.

Macmillan and Diefenbaker Study Defence, Trade Ties

OTTAWA (CP)—Closer political ties among North Atlantic councilors aimed at strengthening their defence and trade relations will be discussed today by Prime Minister Macmillan of Britain and Diefenbaker of Canada.

They hold their first conference in the Prime Minister's cabinet office after Mr. Macmillan makes a 15-minute stop at city hall to receive the freedom of the city from Mayor Charlotte Whitton.

Further conferences are scheduled for later in the day, after the prime ministers' meetings following the 10-day Easter recess.

Means to strengthen the North Atlantic Treaty Organization were clearly in the minds of both men when the British prime minister, accompanied by Lady Dorothy Macmillan, arrived Sunday night after his Washington talks with President Kennedy.

WELCOMES HIM

In a welcoming speech at the airport Mr. Diefenbaker, who has long advocated another NATO heads of government meeting patterned after the 1957 Paris conference, said Mr. Macmillan would be followed in Ottawa by other NATO government chiefs later this year.

The purpose of these meetings, he said, was to ensure that the bonds of NATO shall be made stronger. The unity of North Atlantic countries must be strengthened to a greater degree than heretofore, both in economics and in defence.

Mr. Diefenbaker spoke also of "such changes politically" as were needed to strengthen the alliance.

Replying to the welcome, Mr. Macmillan said these questions were the ones he discussed with President Kennedy and on which he would confer with the Canadian government on "how we can best achieve the purpose."

Mr. Macmillan said "a good deal has happened" in the world since the two prime ministers last met at the London Commonwealth conference early in March.

The strength and unity of the Commonwealth is destined to play a major role in the world in economics, trade and defence, Mr. Macmillan added. He spoke also of "that moral unity that binds us together."

RCMP Arrests Polish Engineer For Espionage

MONTREAL (CP) — Thomasz Bierracki, 31-year-old engineer who came from Poland a year ago, today was arraigned on charges of spying for an unidentified foreign power.

Bierracki, described as a brilliant hydraulics specialist who worked for a Montreal firm of consulting engineers, was remanded without bail until April 18 for preliminary hearing.

Bierracki, wearing an overcoat and scarf, stood with his hands crossed in front of him as the charge was read. He appeared calm.

Asked by Judge Paul Hurteau of Sessions Court whether he understood the charge against him, Bierracki replied in broken English that he did.

The charge said Bierracki "did unlawfully for a purpose prejudicial to the safety or interests of the state obtain, collect, record and communicate to other persons sketches, other documents and information that is calculated to be or might be or is intended to be directly or indirectly useful to a foreign power, contrary to . . . the Official Secrets Act . . ."

The charge specified that alleged violations of the Official Secrets Act occurred between May 16, 1960, and April 7, 1961.

Further details of the charge were not available from the RCMP who arrested him Sunday after a visit at the home where he roomed.

Germans Look to Eichmann's Trial With Fear, Remorse, Indifference

BONN (AP)—West Germans today looked with mixed feelings toward Israel and the trial of Nazi SS leader Adolf Eichmann—feelings of fear, guilt, remorse and also indifference.

The Bonn government is worried that the trial will arouse the world once against Germany, Chancellor Konrad Adenauer has appealed for understanding and forgiveness.

There is fear that Eighmann may implicate prominent men today in the West German government.

Average Germans generally express guilt and remorse but there have been some who told this reporter:

"We are not going to learn anything we didn't know 15 years ago. . . Forget it."

The Germans cannot forget the atrocities of Hitler's era, but many have tried.

South Viet Nam's President Sent Back for Five Years

SAIGON (AP) — Pro-Western President Ngo Dinh Diem Sunday won re-election of a five-year term by an even bigger margin than expected as voters rejected Communist attempts to sabotage South Viet Nam's first presidential election.

The 60 - year - old backbiter president polled more than 90 per cent of the vote cast and showed his greatest strength in the belief of tired rebel terrorism—the swamps and ricelands of the Mekong River delta southwest of Saigon. He racked up an average of better than 90 per cent of the vote in this region.

The voting apparently went off peacefully, without a single major incident reported up to 9 p.m. (8 a.m. today, Toronto time). One grenade throwing and an ambush—with no casualties—were reported in the south.

Officials estimated about 70 per cent of the country's 7,200,000 voters cast ballots Sunday, after a campaign marked by increasing terrorist attacks by the Viet Cong Communists.

One official said the Communists had suffered serious losses in clashes with government forces in the last two weeks and many fled their "last face" by falling to carry out their threat to sabotage the election.

But the Communists remained a formidable opponent, and most observers believe the quiet is only a lull — that the Viet Cong remains as determined as ever to overthrow Diem's government.

The government disclosed that more than 2,000 persons were arrested when they streamed into Saigon Saturday from the country - side. The government charged those peasants — two-thirds of them women — had been forced into buses to take part in giant anti-government rallies planned for election day.

Some of the peasants told reporters the Viet Cong got them to leave their villages to demonstrate.

About 500 have been released. The rest were being screened to sort out Viet Cong agents.

Diem's top opponents—Nguyen Dinh Quat, 64, wealthy rubber planter, and Nhu Tan, a Chinese physician—did most of their campaigning in Saigon while the president made extensive speaking and hand - shaking tours throughout the country.

In the capital Dr. Tan got 26 per cent of the vote, Quat 9.3 per cent. But outside Saigon it was almost overwhelming for the Roman Catholic president.

Diefenbaker to Tell House Part of Report on Railways

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker today tells Parliament at least part of what the six members of the Macpherson royal commission on transportation have decided from nearly two years of study and 130 public hearings across the country.

Mr. Diefenbaker is scheduled shortly before 4 p.m. EST to table the first part of what is expected to be a three-volume report on the life of Canada's major railways.

The commission, headed by Regina lawyer M. A. MacPherson, was appointed in May, 1958, and has accumulated a mountain of evidence which in physical mass amounts to a 15-foot high pile of transcripts.

From the submissions — they ranged with the final hearings some two months ago—the commissioners have undoubtedly draw the long-range plan that will bring the railways back to financial health.

Observers believe part of this will be government action on a recommendation for outright grants that will run to about $100,000,000 annually at first and taper off as the revitalized system comes into his own.

But the commission has also been asked to solve a short-term issue, one that cannot go in want of solution beyond May 1.

That is the deadline of government postponement of the strike of 111,000 men operating railwaymen or legally scheduled for Dec. 3.

Pressure resulting from this strike prospect is what prompted the prime minister to ask the commission for part of the report by March 31.

In Montreal, Sunday the negotiating committee of 15 railway unions scheduled to strike May 16 called a meeting for April 13 to discuss the dispute with all but a few of the unions.

"It depends on developments and what is in the report," Mr. Hall said.

If the first volume of the report conforms to early billing, it will outline the general principles under which railways would gain freedom from government restrictions and be encouraged into the general competitive transport picture.

It would mean the decoupling of many unprofitable duties and the first step to the establishment of a system of minimum costs within a free enterprise framework competitive with other railways, trucks, ships, planes and pipelines.

FLOODS WRECK VILLAGE

DAMASCUS (AP) — Floods wrecked the remote Syrian village of Abbed Sunday, drowning at least 13 persons. Seven children and two pregnant women were reported among the bodies recovered. A Damascus newspaper said today the death toll may be found to be higher when the waters subside.

Six Canadian Roughed Up By Congolese

LEOPOLDVILLE (CP) — Six Canadian soldiers were roughed up by a mixed force of Congolese soldiers and police in Stanleyville Saturday night, it was reported here Sunday.

None was seriously injured. They were treated for their injuries at the Canadian signals detachment headquarters in Stanleyville.

Involved in the scuffle were a captain, three sergeants and two signalmen, all with the mission signals detachment serving with the United Nations force in The Congo.

Capt. Les Stubbs of Ottawa, liaison officer with the signals detachment, and the men were in a bar when the incident occurred. He said the Congolese kicked him and hit him with a rifle butt and a web belt.

Stubbs' report listed the other Canadian soldiers involved as: S. Sgt. George Rauliuk of Winnipeg, cut around the mouth when struck by a fist; Sgt. Jean Routliffe of Petawawa, hit by fists; Sgt. Andrew Pinteau of Calgary, hit by fists; Sigmn. Ronald Oldshaw of North Battleford, Sask., hit by fists. Another signalman was involved but apparently was not injured. He was not identified.

DIES OF INJURIES

TORONTO (CP)—Karen Bantatyne, 5, died in Sick Children's Hospital Sunday of injuries suffered when struck by a car Wednesday near her North Toronto home.

Fire-Swept Hull Of Liner Sinks In Persian Gulf

Hint Terrorists' Bomb, Not Collision, to Blame

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The burned-out and deserted wreck of the British liner Dara sank today as salvage ships were trying to beach it.

The owners, meanwhile, issued a new casualty toll raising the number feared lost in the shark-infested waters of the Persian Gulf to 212. Two were Americans.

The figures issued here by Gray Mackenzie, agents for the British India Steam Navigation Company, were reached by calculations of the number aboard the Dara when it broke out early Saturday and the number rescued during the weekend.

The ship is the company's largest—680 passengers, 132 crew, estimated 60 visitors, total 772. Survivors 560. Missing and feared dead 212.

An official of Gray Mackenzie said the rescued figures are only approximate because they did not have to register when they came aboard at the Arabian port of Dibai, 300 miles east of Bahrain.

U.S. COUPLE LOST

Most of the missing were Asians, but they included an American employee of the Caltex Oil Company, C. V. (Roy) Dorsch of Brooklyn, N.Y., and his wife, Vela. They were reported on their way to California to retire after 35 years with Calltex, much of it in Bahrain.

The 5,000-ton Dara was en route from Basra to Bombay Saturday when she collided with another ship in a storm. The Dara kept heading for open water to avoid being blown ashore in heavy winds but at 3 a.m. a fire and explosion in the engine room rocked the liner and fire broke out. The flames spread rapidly, and passengers and crew abandoned ship.

(Reuters)said that stories told by some of the survivors hinted that the fire may have been touched off by a terrorist bomb aboard the ship. They were discounted by investigating officials. The investigators said it was "too early to give the cause because we have only the stories of the survivors and they have widely different views on what happened."

Bravely explosions, firefighting parties from the Royal Navy frigate Loch Fada fought and reported Sunday they had the fire under control.

The ship's owners, the British India Steam Navigation Company, said the Royal Navy had planned to start towing her to the Persian Gulf island of Bahrain today "but a deterioration in the condition of the Dara necessitated a change of decision."

NEW YORK (AP)—Folk-singers, fans and police turned Greenwich Village's Washington Square into an eight-acre wrestling ring Sunday in a brawling battle over a ban on impromptu songfests.

When the tumult and shouting died after about three hours, 10 demonstrators — including novelist Harold L. Humes—were under arrest and several nursed scratches and bruises.

The police force suffered a bitten hand. He said a dog did it.

Nine of the 10 arrested were released in bail on charges of holding a demonstration in the park without a permit. Four of them also were tagged with an additional charge of disorderly conduct.

The 10th defendant, Louis Pagliarni, remained in a cell on charges of felonious assault on a policeman and of interfering with an arrest.

The demonstrators showed up at the park at 2 p.m., producing a ruling by Parks Commissioner Newbold Morris against the ban. By 4 p.m. 500 musicians

CUBAN LAWYER LEAVES REGIME OF FIDEL CASTRO

Acting for Govt. In Shipping Case

MONTREAL (CP)—Dr. Oscar Abello, the legal director of the Cuban department of maritime development, said Sunday night he has defected from the regime of Premier Fidel Castro.

Dr. Abello, who came to Canada to defend Cuba in a breach of contract action involving eight ships formerly operated by Canadian National Steamships, told The Gazette he had sent his official resignation to the Cuban government by telegraph.

He said his wife and three children had been evacuated from Cuba some time ago. His defection meant the loss, however, of their "only legal documents" and "worst of all my library."

He did not say where he plans to go from Canada but indicated he plans to join the anti - Castro movement in the United States.

Dr. Abello said he had given authorities at a private hearing of the Exchequer Court in Halifax "official legal documents" destroying the Cuban government's case.

BOUGHT IN 1923

Cuba bought the ships in 1958. Seven are strikebound in Halifax at present and the eighth is in a Baltimore shipyard.

The legal action concerned a petition for an attachment for unpaid maintenance costs filed by Browning Steamship, controlled of Detroit, who were hired by the government of former Cuban dictator Fulgencio Batista to operate the vessels.

In his earlier defence, Dr. Abello argued that the vessels were the property and thus immune to attachment.

However, he said the docu-ments had been produced at a hearing in Halifax Friday show the ships had been transferred to an autonomous corporation.

Dr. Abello said the Castro government was "anxious" for good faith in their overtures for commercial trade with Canada and said he would appeal to Canadian labor unions to boycott Cuban shipping. He also described as a decoy to make Cuba look for friendship and believe she was on friendly terms with Canada.

President's Night Y's Men's Club Attracts Large Crowd

An impressive and entertaining President's night was enjoyed by the Belleville Y's Men's Club their wives and 8 guests on Thursday. This annual meeting is one of the highlights of the Y's Men's Club year. Outgoing President, John Luscombe, officially handed over the gavel to his incoming president, John Haymen at this meeting. A number of guests from other organizations were present and those included Dr. and Mrs. Robert Brain of the Kiwanis Club, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Fralick of the Lions Club, Mr. Virgil Jones of the Rotary Club, Mrs. Frances Bateson and Miss Gladys MacDonald of the Soroptimist Club, Mrs. W. H. Hinchliffe of the Y.M.C.A. Board of Directors and Mr. W. H. Finkle. An excellent turkey and chicken buffet was had prepared by the grace said by Rev. Ivan Hewman immediately after the finish of dinner John Luscombe introduced the head table and guests which were Mrs. George Diamentides, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wilson, Mrs. John Luscombe, Mr. and Mrs. John Haymen, Mr. Thor Hansen and Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Finkle.

After the introductions which includes three past presidents and their wives, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Byrde, Mr. and Mrs. Bryson Leslie and Mr. Jack Wilson, the meeting moved quickly along with a sing-song led by Jack Fletcher with Mrs. Jack Wilson at the piano. A gracious toast to all the Ladies was proposed by Jim Pearson and Mrs. Ivan Hewman responded with some well chosen words.

A number of interesting and humorous awards were made by John Luscombe and a few of the many redeposits were those made Clarke with 11 years, Jack Fletcher with 10 years, Bert Hillis with nine and Wilf Hutchinson with eight years.

REVIEWED YEAR'S WORK

The Year in Retrospect", was the title of the address given by John Luscombe and he briefly reviewed the Y's Men's year 1960-61. John pointed out that the club, although low in members, raised over $2,000 through Radio Auction, Christmas Trees, Kleenex Sales and a car wash. Such money was spent by giving $1,000 to the Y.M.C.A. toward their building fund, $300 to the Boy Scouts at Oak Lake, $300 to World Outlook and Hinchliffe Bursaries, $200 to send delegates to training courses and conventions and he pointed out many other services were given through the time and effort of the members, which did not cost large amounts of money. He thanked all the Y's men for their untiring efforts to make the club a success and also the wives who inspired the men and assisted them. He stated that this year as president would always be remembered as a wonderful experience and kindly acknowledged many Y's men who assisted him with the problems which controlled the club.

Y's man Bill Hutchinson introduced the guest speaker, Mr. Thor Hansen, who is the Art Director of the Public Relations Department for the B.A. Oil Company. He stated the speaker came to Canada in 1927 and joined B.A. Oil in 1930. The speaker, he said, was well known in Art circles and had designed many of the B.A. offices including their head office. He pointed out Mr. Hansen made about 110 speeches each year and came highly recommended as a designer, artist and a speaker.

Mr. Thor Hansen's address was most interesting and humorous while speaking on the subject of the Arts and in particular, Canadian Arts. He pointed out that the three most popular arts are music, Literature and Visual Arts and expressed disapointment in the visual Arts, particularly paintings, saying they portray frustration and unhappiness. He wished that the present day artists would concentrate on happiness and avoid creations, which show misery and he contended that the vast majority of artist today show frustration in their work. He went on to say three overworked words in the Canadian Society are Intellectual, Creative and Cultural. "Many people", he said, "try to buy culture and even countries like Russia and the United States have tried to create a culture through the purchasing of expensive Art exhibits."

He pointed out that in the United States, culture began through the pioneers and the poor people who first settled the Country and culture could not be made or created overnight like breakfast food. Mr. Hansen said Canada had to have more and better craftsmen producing goods emblemistic of Canada to create a proper Canadian culture. He further suggested that everyone who creates should not be afraid of being abstract or creative. People who have hobbies such as knitting, woodworking, gardening, needlepoint, painting should continue their hobbies because it is a wonderful diversion from everyday problems and worries.

SHOULD HAVE HOBBY

He also advised that many people should start a hobby to help them cure their frustrations and he further advised and stated that everyone is hoping for infinity but many people do not think of it. He made a rainy afternoon and a creative hobby and pointed out many people with their hobbies don and problems.

He said that if more people started a creative hobby, more Canadian goods would become available to the public and therefore help in their economic solve, in part, the desire Canadians have for culture.

Mr. Hansen went on to point out the lack of Canadian souvenirs, made by Canadians and sold in Canada. He pointed out that many millions of dollars of souvenirs were purchased from foreign countries each year and these souvenirs could be made in Canada as Canadian souvenirs. He told of a shopping trip he and his wife took recently in Ottawa and their progress was slow to find some Canadian made souvenir which represented Ottawa and was also reasonable in that area. The shopping trip ended with nothing being purchased because no such article could be found. Mr. Hansen pointed out that they could get plenty of souvenirs with maroons, moose, maple leaves and deer painted on them but upon examination, all such objects were found to have been made in other countries. He closed his remarks in urging Canadians to buy Canadian goods and support Canadian crafts men in their work. Y's man Gerry Hill thanked the guest speaker on behalf of the entire group to Mr. Hansen.

Mrs. W. H. Finkle made a few complimentary remarks about the hard work and sincere effort the Y.M.C.A. Board of Directors is making and also congratulated the Y's Men's Club on behalf of the "Y" Board for their wonderful conprbutions to the Y.M.C.A.

GOVERNOR HEARD

District Governor Hugh Watson made a short address bringing greetings from various International Officers and he also congratulated the Club stating the Belleville Club was one of the top clubs in Ontario. He then called on the incoming directors for the forthcoming year to come to the front of the room whereupon he proceeded to induct them in their new offices. He read a challenge letter to the new directors which included John Haymen, Jack Pearson, George Ward, Bill Hutchinson, Ron Moorman, Bert Hillis, Bill Prentice, Gerry Hill and Wes Scarrow. John Luscombe also presented the office of a club director in his capacity as immediate-past-president.

John Hayman, the new president, presented John Luscombe with a gift from the club members and John Luscombe presented John Hayman with the president's pin, after receiving the past president's pin. Mr. Hayman's address to the gathering was inspirational and sincere and he stated his theme for the 1961-62 year could be: "Fellowship and Leadership through and for the Y.M.C.A." He went on to say that he appreciated the honour and duties entrusted in him by the Y's Men's Club by electing him president, and that he was most happy with his officers of the Club and his new board of directors. He pointed out that he was a supporter of the YMCA and stated it was a wonderful institution. He has been active in the "Y" for many years and he hoped and expected the Y's Men's Club would assist the "Y" throughout his term of office. A few of the proposals to help the "Y" were assistance on the decision in the evening to make the staff's work a little lighter and easier whereby they are presently carrying a large burden of work and the Y's Men's Club would give the forthcoming "Y" Building Campaign every assistance as he felt the campaign is a terrific challenge to the club.

Mr. Hayman said that most Y's Men were excellent members of the community and they personally by the way were very active in their vocation, church and community affairs. He stated that he expected a wonderful year for the Y's Men's Club of Belleville and he was most happy to be president of such an excellent organization.

The meeting was officially closed but many of the members and guests stayed for the invitation of Mr. and Mrs. John Luscombe, who were personally host to the gathering and supplied dainty refreshments and entertainment to climax the evening.

Two Tugs Used To Break Ice In Long Reach

The 1961 navigation season in the lower Bay of Quinte was officially opened over the weekend with the Canada Steamship Lines "Glenelg" docking at the Lake Ontario Portland Cement Company plant to take on a load of bulk cement for Rochester.

But Mother Nature required a big assist to allow for the navigation season opening on April 9th — six days ahead of last year and eight days ahead of 1959.

To let the cement carrier in, 15 miles of solid ice in the Adolphustown Reach, east of Glenora Ferry had to be broken up by tugboats from Kingston.

In this area of the bay there is still 12 to 15 inches of solid ice and two tug boats were required to assist the steamer through the icefield to allow the lake boat in to the cement company dock.

The first boat into Belleville is not expected for another week according to Harbor Master Mac Smith.

Heavy Snowfall Giving Firemen Welcome Relief

It isn't good gardening weather, but today's fall of snow at least is giving city firemen a welcome respite from the rash of grass and brush fires that have kept them busy for the past two days.

In all during Saturday and Sunday no less than 13 calls were answered by the department to put out all of them for grass and brush fires.

"There was nothing really serious but one or two of the blazes could have resulted in trouble if they had not been put out," noted Fire Chief Gerald Lane.

One of these was at Centenary where fire burned over about 20 acres and at one time threatened a farmer's barn.

Another big blaze was at Point Anne, where fire was burning on both sides of the road. There was also a fire in deserted area and Point Anne firemen and city firemen stood by to let it burn out.

Other grass fire alarms were answered to Rednerville, Shannonville and to the Montrose Farms west of the city.

"Sure." Susan emptied the little bag on the table. She took a third of them, and then two more candles. "If you're lucky you may get some."

"That's right," Ann agreed, taking half of what remained, and also two candles. "We paid but you have the rest."

Forward the Peace Corps

President Kennedy of the United States, in his Peace Corps, seems to have come up with a suggestion which has caught the imagination of not only young people and people of good will in his own country but in other countries around the world also.

Basically, of course, the entire philosophy of the Peace Corps, under which students and other interested and selfless persons will journey forth to all parts of the globe to give on-the-spot assistance to those in underdeveloped countries, is to show the people of Asia and Africa that Americans are not the warmongers or imperialists which Communist propaganda has made them out to be.

This is good. From our long association with the Americans we know, almost by second nature that Americans, with only a few unfortunate exceptions, are quite likeable persons and easy to get along with. If they were otherwise, if they were actually the sort of people or if their government was the type of government which Moscow would have the rest of the world believe, then Canada would long ago have been overrun by them.

It is a sensible move on the part of Americans to get out and mix with others, not as tourists who are welcomed for their money but as individuals willing to give their personal help to solve others' problems, people who will be welcomed, eventually, as genuine friends.

This project is something for the "have" nation in the west shoul wholeheartedly support. If all the "have-not" people see of the "have" people is their money or the outward signs of their prosperity the former will form some very poor opinions about the latter.

Trying to chop a penny in the cup of a blind beggar and quite often getting a kick in return across a street. The one is a token contribution which requires and proves little consideration for the personal welfare of the beggar as an individual. The latter course of action is just the opposite and gives evidence of one's real interest and concern for another human being.

It is only by following the latter course that we of the West can prove to the other people of the world that we really have their best interests and welfare at heart. It is when one stoops to help the less fortunate that he really reaches his tallest height as an individual. So it is with a nation. . . .

We shall have to bear the minor difficulties of stooping and appear large in the eyes of others and to create and maintain a mutual feeling of trust and friendship in both their hearts and ours.

So let us go forward with the peace corps and win with patience, understanding, sacrifice of material comforts and with a genuine concern for others what neither the weapons of ignorance nor war will provide . . . friendship. This is the sort of leadership which the world has been waiting for for too long.

What Comes Next?

The long-drawn Geneva talks on a ban on nuclear tests now appear hopelessly deadlocked —but past experience in these negotiations suggests that a way may yet be found to reconcile apparently diametrically opposed positions.

Although no agreement has been reached between Russia on the one hand and the two Western nuclear powers, Britain and the U.S., on the other, there has been an impressive reduction of the distance dividing the opposing sides. It has been solely the result of willingness by the Western powers to compromise—Russia has also given ground on important points. This has created a spirit of optimism which makes the present deadlock all the more unpalatable. It remains to be seen whether, after working so long and coming so close to an agreement, the net result of this conference is to be as small as that of other parleys on allied topics—disagreement with nothing concrete accomplished.

Right now it is difficult to judge whether what is preventing a termination of the conference is a real desire for an agreement accompanied by at least a shadow of hope that such an agreement is possible, or whether both sides actually despair of an accord but are determined not to be the first to leave the conference table and thereby accept the risk of being branded as responsible for the parley's failure.

One thing needs to be noted — the conference has at least provided a moratorium on nuclear tests, by all countries except France, and a subsequent halt in the further pollution of the atmosphere with radioactive debris. The trouble is that as long as the conference continues, Russia is, in effect, obtaining what she appears to desire, a cessation of tests without any control machinery to guarantee that she, as well as the Western powers, observes this ban.

Murrow Versus Murrow

The Times of London tells of Pooh-Bah, "As First Lord of the Treasury, I could propose a special vote that would cover all expenses, if it were not that, as leader of the Opposition, it would be my duty to resist it, tooth and nail."

Pooh-Bah, held both these jobs and several others, simultaneously.

Mr. Edward Murrow is not a pluralist, but his sudden translation from the unofficial world has already involved him in a pluralist's difficulties.

Some time ago, when he was still working for the Columbia Broadcasting System, he produced a television program showing the plight of migratory farm workers in parts of the United States, which was called "Harvest of Shame." The program led to protests that it gave an unfair and distorted picture of the problem.

Now Mr. Murrow has been bought by the BBC for showing here, and in the integral Mr. Murrow, with only a few unfortunate exceptions, are quite likeable persons and easy to get along with. If they were otherwise, if they were actually the sort of people or if their government was the type of government which Moscow would have the rest of the world believe, then Canada would long ago have been overrun by them.

It is a sensible move on the part of Americans to get out and mix with others, not as tourists who are welcomed for their money but as individuals willing to give their personal help to solve others' problems, people who will be welcomed, eventually, as genuine friends.

Legal Talk Gibberish

Windsor Star

The legal profession seems intent on developing its own language and one which is entirely unintelligible to anyone outside the profession. The only trouble is that this legal language isn't a language at all. It's pure gibberish.

One example will suffice. It is taken from an act to amend The Corporation Tax Act which was introduced into the Ontario Legislature. And we quote:

(13) Where, in calculating the amount of a deduction allowed to a corporation, under regulations made under clause "a" of subsection 2 of section 21 in respect of depreciable property of the corporation the prescribed class, there has been added to the capital cost to it of depreciable property, hereinafter in this subsection referred to as "the property", of another prescribed class, for the purposes of this section and the regulation made under clause "a" of subsection 2 of section 21, the capital property shall, if the Treasurer may make any re-assessment of the corporation's assessment or assess tax, interest or penalties under this Act, in the circumstances require, be deemed to have been property of the first mentioned class at all times before the commencement of that fiscal year and, except to the extent that that property or any part thereof has been disposed of by the corporation before the commencement of that fiscal year, to have been transferred from the first-mentioned class to the other class at the commencement of that fiscal year. End quote.

How anyone could concoct a sentence of that kind beyond us baffles the imagination. How anyone could expect anyone else to make sense of it is even more baffling. It would be much more intelligible if it were in "pig Latin" or "pigeon-English."

Premier Leslie M. Frost should send all his law officers back to school for a little comprehension they turn out. Otherwise members of the Legislature should rise in their wrath and simply refuse to pass legislation couched in such gibberish. The purpose of language is to reveal thoughts, not to conceal them.

Laws should be clear in wording and purpose. Legislation such as this simply confuses. The amendment from the above clause is an affront to the English language and a disgrace to those who framed it.

THE PACKSACK

BY GREGORY CLARK

In the department store beneath, I was astonished to see a display of feather dusters. They were exactly like the ones familiar in my childhood, black handles about two feet long with a small, round, turkey tail feathers puffed on the ends. A pretty little store clerk in spotless white was handy, and I asked her what they were.

"They're called feather dusters," she informed me.

"But what are they for?" I enquired.

She looked puzzled and reached over for one of them.

"Really," she said, "I have no idea."

She twirled it, and we studied it with interest.

"No," she said, "I haven't a clue."

So I left her in her happy ignorance. I did not tell her that in her childhood, a gross these things were to be found in all well-run households, and that every morning after the maid's duty (at $5 a month's wages, and keep) to make the rounds of the downstairs parlor, dining room and vestibule, whacking everything with this feather duster, kicking up all the dust so that it would go else in the room. I did not like to confess to the young lady what a dirty old world we had left behind so short a time ago.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR EARL L. DOUGLASS

THE HOME TODAY

There may be some decline. Certainly the modern home is different from the home of a few years ago. But any objective observer would have to admit that the homes we have today are probably better than the homes we have known in the past. There are many homes—plenty of them — and when they are bad they are bad, but bad homes have always been. But we should not pass a blank. et condemnation on the modern home.

Of this we can be sure — the home is what we make it. such as meddling relatives are a factor in making a home bad. More often the home is disrupted by discussions over the lack of income. It must, however, be admitted that there appears to be more domestic unpleasantness today than there was among the poor. Ill health is sometimes a factor in the decline of the spirit of a home. And of course drinking is a big factor.

But it can be said with assurance that when two people set themselves to build up a loving home in which unselfishness and the highest standards of righteousness prevail, they practically always succeed. There are exceptions to all rules. Things happen in every life, a few of which there can be no satisfying explanation. But on the whole, our homes are what we make them. If we work at it and are unselfish, the chances are that our homes will be a source of life's deepest happiness.

The security of the Western hemisphere is not threatened with actual physical invasion with guns, planes and tanks, but the real danger lies in an unmoral invasion by Nazi ideology," the Rev. W. J. Walker, minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, told members of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada of Belleville Branch No. 201; Canadian National Railway veterans, and the detachment of the Ontario Voluntary Constabulary, in an impressive Vimy Day memorial address yesterday. "If Hitler conquers Britain, it will mean the subjugation of the entire civilized world, including those idiotic isolationists," he declared.

Rev. A. S. McConnell, L.Th., rector of Trinity Church in Brockville and formerly of Stirling, has been appointed to the Canadian Chaplain Service with the honorary rank of Captain, and detailed to act as Protestant overseas chaplain at the junior officers' training centre at Brockville. After persistent efforts to enlist during the last Great War, Rev. McConnell finally was accepted for service with the Canadian Army Service Corps at the age of 17 years. During that war, two of his brothers were killed in action. They were Captain W. G. McConnell of the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps and Sergeant H. A. McConnell of the third Battalion, C.E.F.

Trivia Talk Often Basic Says Sydney

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Whenever I write a column that is frankly trivial, rather than singly superficial in purpose, I receive letters from disappointed readers, who say, in effect, "Why do you write about trivialities when you can handle important subjects so well?"

What these readers forget is that it is impossible to write on "important" subjects every day, and make them meaningful and interesting. A man is not just a bundle of serious concerns; he is composed of many strands, and he suppresses the "trivial" ones only at the risk of stultifying his whole personality.

When I began writing this column 17 years ago, I called it "Strictly Personal" to indicate that it was going to reflect my personality, for good or ill. And I determined not only on serious convictions, but my impressions, prejudices, humors, and sometimes just plain foolishness.

And whatever popularity the column has attained, I attribute largely to this wide variety of topics and approaches. We like to read about what is a man, with all his flaws and peculiarities — and not an oracular voice booming at us from the throne of heaven.

Besides, what one person may consider trivial, is not trivial to what another considers basic. I happen to think that a man's comment on politics and international affairs is trivial, because it is rarely cully to the emotional and moral heart of the problem. It may seem important, but it is just a lot of wind.

On the contrariwise, I like to think that when I write about my children, I am coming to grips with certain basic problems of human conduct, and trying to reach some significant conclusions about that perverse creature known as man. To my mind, nothing is more important than a full understanding of the early years of our lives.

But, quite apart from this question of what is "important" and what is "trivial," I like to remain that the human personality is a cloak of many colors, and all these hues must be given adequate representation if we are to communicate with each other on a person-to-person basis. I read rather have readers feel as if they know me, that have them feel that I am aloof from them, or that I rather have them engage in a mental dialogue on diversified topics, than have them only in dull assent.

The occasional lightness in tone sets as a tonic, a restorative, for my more contemplative moments, and it also helps me, like the body, gets keep and exercise without which it is a recipe of playfulness for its own sweet sake.

To Your Good Health

Four-Year-Olds Frequently Known as Finicky Eaters

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: My four-year-old son comes to the table saying he is starving. After one or two bites he slows down.

"He wants to live on liquids alone and we have cut them down to 16 ounces of milk, and yet he still refuses food. (He also gets cookies and snacks.)

"His plate is never overloaded, meals are at the same time every day, and he is never rushed. It's the same at breakfast and lunch. Do you have any suggestions? — Mrs. D."

Age four is apt to be a time when youngsters just beginning to assert a bit of independence, have notions of their own about eating.

I'd eliminate cookies and snacks between meals. Continue to serve his regular meals — without comment.

When he's hungry enough he'll eat!

After all, adults have variations in appetite. For one reason or another we sometimes say, "I'm not hungry," or "I'm too tired to eat," or we're listless on certain days when there is no apparent reason.

Four-year-olds, it seems, sometimes have still other unfathomable reasons for refusing food. I do not know a better way to cope with this than to cut off between-meal snacks and let the urgency of a child's appetite take charge when it is ready.

"Dear Dr. Molner: My problem concerns psychological constipation. My son is five and for years has been constipated. The strange part is that when he visits his grandmother he has no trouble. He goes willingly to the bathroom whereas here at home I have to make him go, and when he does, elimination is so small that it gives him a laxative once a week.

"I've tried giving him an enema when he goes, and tried ignoring the problem but it stays the same. Could you give me any new idea how to deal with it? — J. W."

TODAY'S TALK

A GREAT CAN ADIAN NOVEL

Some years ago a friend gave me a Canadian novel to read. It was Louis Hemon's "Maria Chapdelaine." I put the book off, but has greatly interested me ever since. It is truly a great novel, full of drama, tragedy, pathos, and the whole setting is its portrayal of the French-Canadian peasant.

The story was written in Montreal, sent to France, and published in Paris first as a serial — six months after Hemon's untimely death, in 1913, when he was killed by a train and killed. It then came out in book form and was published in 1914 dateline. No new edition appeared until 1921 and then a translation carried the author's name around the world.

The first edition (1914) is very scarce but after waiting some time I located a copy which is worth just a thrill to behold. It is very attractive as to format, and I'm glad I have it in Canada so fine. A lovely small paperback edition was also published and is very good by Doubleday, and sold for 65 cents.

We lend is so free as the land of books. One can cover this earth with the accumulated knowledge, so freely expressed. Perhaps we can as a result aspiring book we climb a little in height. We are immediately lifted by books — by the right books — like "Maria Chapdelaine," — keep educating one now.

Human expression is the greatest of man's records. And the nearer we get to a good author, or authoress, the nearer we get to all that is best in what has created. Keep your eyes and hearts atone to book knowledge, learn of people and their countries, their ways and their problems, real and imagined. We grow largely by absorption.

Night Caps Coming Back

Windsor Star

Time was when night caps were a normal part of the nightwear wardrobe for bald-headed men. Those were in the days of derby hats and stiff-brimmed straw hats. The knitted woolen caps kept the head warm and young men and old men kept the other extremities cozy.

Modern American teenagers, of all people, are said to be reviving the use of the night cap. It is very attractive as to format, and I'm glad I have it in Canada so fine. A lovely small paperback edition was also published and is very good by Doubleday, and sold for 65 cents.

SCHOOL FOR RETARDED — Official opening ceremonies for the new Belleville and District School for Retarded Children were held Saturday afternoon. Picture shows crowd attending ceremonies on front lawn of school, which was officially opened by H. R. Beattie, superintendent of special services, Department of Education.

Official Opening Is Held Of School for Retarded With Tribute Paid to Lions

Twelve thousand dollars in cash, plus thousands of hours of volunteer labor, have turned the former Catholic High School on John Street into a $45,000 school asset for the Belleville Association for Retarded Children.

And a lion's share of the credit for much of the original cash investment, and for untold hours of volunteer work going into renovation, goes to members of the Belleville Lions Club.

As a club project, club members took on a $6,500 mortgage to help pay off the purchase price and by concerted effort have turned the old high school building into an asset of which the Lions club and the Belleville Association for Retarded Children may well be proud.

Tribute to the Lions club members for their untiring efforts, was paid by many speakers Saturday afternoon when the school for retarded children was officially opened.

As Mayor A. M. Haig fittingly put it:

"Members of the Lions Club and the Belleville Association for Retarded Children, have done on a voluntary basis what was the duty of all of us".

He said wholehearted gratitude must go out to the local service club members for their unselfish efforts in providing something greatly needed in Belleville.

Close to 200 persons were on hand on the front lawn of the school premises, chairman Lee Jourard opened the proceedings.

DEPARTMENT SPEAKER

Guest speaker for the afternoon was Mr. H. R. Beattie superintendent of special services, Department of Education. He was introduced by Mr. J. G. Dennis, superintendent of the Ontario School for the Deaf at Belleville.

Other speakers heard during the afternoon included Mrs. Robert Green, Trenton, member of the Canadian Association for Retarded Children, Lee Gillis, M.P. for Hastings South; W. E. Sandercock, M.P.P. for Hastings West, and William Kirk, Executive Director for the Ontario Association for Retarded Children.

President of the Belleville Lions Club, Harvey Frid, presented the keys of the renovated school to Alvin Parkhurst, president of the Belleville and District Retarded Children's Association, who voiced his own appreciation, and that of his association to Lion Club members.

PLAQUE PRESENTED

Alfred Bryant, Lions Club vice-pres., presented a plaque bearing the Lions crest to Mr. Thomas Stovell, charter president of the Belleville Association. The plaque will be placed in a wall of the school.

Another presentation, this time from the retarded children of the little Miss Carol Cairns of Picton and Gregory Parkhurst of Belleville, presented a gift to Mr. Frid, Lions Club president.

Music for the official opening program was provided by the Salvation Army Band, Rev. H. M. Davis of Bridge Street United Church pronounced invocation.

Guest speaker H. R. Beattie told his listeners that developments for the education of retarded children were the outstanding achievement in education in the past century.

He said the former stigma attached to mental illness was being overcome as parents were coming to understand that this was a condition and not a disease.

The turn came in 1953 when the provincial legislature saw fit to provide grants to local associations for mentally retarded children.

GROWTH GRATIFYING

The growth had been most gratifying. Department officials were hoping for at least 10 local associations to be formed. Instead there are now over 80 associations in the province with more than 60 of them operating classes for retarded children.

He said the growth had been sound because responsibility was taken by the local associations and not vested in a central authority.

Organization of the local association dates back to March 1958 when the Belleville group was set up.

The first class for children was started in April of the same year in loaned temporary space in the basement at Pine Street School. Belleville Public School superintendent Lawrence A. Kells took a leading part in establishing the first class in Belleville.

Trenton children were brought in to the Belleville school by a bus donated by the Junior Red Cross. A second class was started in January 1959.

In January, 1960, a third class was started in Belleville in order to give a full day of teaching to older eligible children.

LIONS CLUB HELPS

But the expanded program with additional pupils made additional space a necessity and in the spring of last year the Belleville Lions Club decided to assist in providing a building.

The old Catholic High School was purchased and an extensive renovation program was commenced.

A new front entrance was provided and new tile floor were laid on the ground floor where the three classes are now being held. Facilities now included a kitchen, three classrooms on the ground floor and two large rooms upstairs for future expansion.

Following Saturday's official opening of the school, visitors were invited to inspect the new premises. Refreshments were served by members of the Association.

Concert Assoc. Finalizes Plans For Membership

The Campaign Committee of the Community Concert Association with eight set on a sellout met on Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. B. E. Burley to report to president S. Gordon Robertson and finalize plans of the membership drive. Mrs. R. J. Ketcheson and Mrs. Burley, co-chairmen of the campaign, who have a staff of one hundred enthusiastic energetic workers, stated they are hopeful of reaching the objective.

Congratulations were extended by those present to the past president, Miss Leona R. Riggs on her appointment as a director of the Canadian Board of Community Concert Association, and thanked her for her advice and guidance in the present campaign.

Mrs. E. Hickey, who will be on hand at headquarters, Corby Public Library auditorium, during campaign week, April 17th to April 22nd, reported on the returns to date through the mails and from the last concert, which were gratifying. Headquarters will remain open from 10 a.m. until 5.30 p.m. daily except Thursday, April 20th, when it will remain open until 9.00 p.m. All workers are required to make a complete report Thursday, April 20th.

Miss Helen Sulman is in charge of the campaign dinner to be held Monday, April 17th, at 6.30 p.m., St. Margaret's-on-the-Hill Church auditorium, when all workers are requested to be present and bring with them all renewals they have obtained to date. These will be received before and after the dinner. The representative from New York, Mrs. Nan Cook, will be present for the dinner meeting.

Mrs. H. S. Robbins, publicity convener, mentioned the splendid co-operation of the press and radio and the assistance of Mrs. John Haig and Mr. Eugene Lang and stated the posters and advertising had been taken care of. The Campaign chairmen were very pleased at the response of the members with regard to the questionaire sent in been used again when the questionnaires were distributed at the Leonard Rose Concert. Many indicated their desire to assist in the campaign and all indicated their choices as to the types of future concerts. This fine co-operation will be of great help to the executive and the "Artists' Selection Committee."

To previous Community Concerts over the years the Association has brought such well-known artists as Efrem Zimbalist, Mischa Levitzki, Thomas and Kurt Baum, Pistigorsky, Bartlett and Robertson, James Melton, William Primrose, Leonard Warren, Jennie Tourel, George London, Whittemore and Lowe, Longines Symphonette, Du Pour Opera, Cyril Chantecleers and Jorge Bolet. Bolet did the sound track for the film "Song of Norway" that is shown in Belleville recently, being story of the life of Fryan Grieg.

For the 1961-62 series Community Concert Association is fortunate to be able to announce now that two Canadian artists have been secured. Lois Marshall world renowned soprano at the peak of her success and Ronald Turini the young Montreal pianist who made such a triumphant concert tour of Europe, capturing second prize in Belgium's famed Queen Elizabeth Concours and who has the distinction of being the only pupil of the great Horowitz.

For the convenience of those who wish to secure membership before Headquarters opens a cheque or money order may be mailed to Box 29, Belleville Community Concert Association. Adult membership is $7.00 and Student $3.00.

The Campaign Chairmen point out that new members will be admitted to the last concert of the present series on May 13th, the Temlanka Little Symphony" but only to the Capacity of the Hall.

Mr. Eugene Lang will have further information for the public regarding the Community Concert Campaign when he broadcasts his program on Sunday nights, and Harriet Stevens on her daily program, also Mrs. Mazie Burley WO 2-4329.

Mail Favors Douglas as Head

REGINA (CP)—Premier T. C. Douglas says a majority of the people who write to him think he should accept the leadership of the New Party which holds its founding convention in Ottawa in August.

In an interview Saturday, the Saskatchewan CCF leader said that despite the trend evident in the very heavy flow of mail reaching his office, he will wait for official notification of the wishes of his CCF followers before making a decision. These wishes will be expressed at constituency conventions in June.

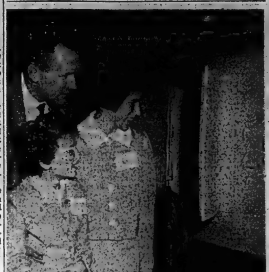
Out-of - province mail to the premier always has urged him to take the job in the federal field. But that wasn't always so in letters from within Saskatchewan. Last fall, his mail indicated a split between "go and stay."

VIEWS UNCHANGED

The premier said his views are unchanged about the New Party leadership. If the people of the province want him to go he will. The CCF, he reminded, brought him to Saskatchewan in the first place from his seat in the House of Commons.

At this stage, he said, there are too many "ifs" and "buts" in the future to give pat answers to direct questions.

Some sources who know him well say Premier Douglas now wants the leadership post, whether he did before or not. These sources also said the premier is almost obliged to stand for the leadership since he was one of the originators of the New Party idea.



Band Week-end School Planned At Citadel

Young bandsmen and trumpet players in Belleville and district are invited to take part in an instructional "band week-end" to be held next Saturday at the Salvation Army Citadel on Pinnacle Street.

Students from the various schools in the area with a flair for trumpet playing are especially invited to take part in the instructional day, commencing Saturday at 4 p.m.

Individual instruction on the trumpet will be given by Mr. Jack Green, former C. N. E. trumpet medalist, while band instruction will be given by Major Cyril Everett A.T.C.M.

THE BRIDE'S ATTIRE FOR A FORMAL WEDDING

In recent years, fashion has decreed many variations of the traditional wedding gown. However, since it is my belief that most brides prefer to follow the old customs, let's discuss the attire for the formal wedding.

Traditionally, the material for the gown is satin. The color does not have to be s t a r k white. It may be bridal white, cafe au lait, eggshell, or ice-white. The style of the gown itself should be that which is most becoming to you. It seems more effective if the gown is made on austerely plain lines. Guard against its being too de collete, and do remember that it should not be sleeveless. The train of the gown should be as wide as the usual church aisle and is from three to six yards long. (Never less than t h r e e yards for the formal gown.)

The veil should be full, in keeping with its origin. Mythology says it stems from the time that Istar, Godess of Love, arose from the depths of the sea to meet her bridegroom in the vapors of earth and sea covering her as a veil.

The veil itself may cascade from a tiara of old lace, seed pearls, or other arrangement. It may be either long or short and still be correct for the bridal gown. If a long veil is desired, it should measure at least one half yard longer than the train of the dress as it extends on the floor.

Actually, the length of a veil should be governed by your height. If you are short, a full-length one will make you appear taller. If you are quite tall, a cape — or finger-tip, veil will cut your height. The gown itself may govern your decision about the veil. For example, if the gown has a full-length back panel going into the train, a short veil would spoil the lines of the dress.

In years gone by, the wearing of gloves was a must for the formal bride. The third finger of the left-hand glove was carefully ripped, so that the wedding ring could be slipped on without removing the glove. Today, common sense has come to the fore, and it is now considered permissible that gloves not be worn. However, it seems to me that if the sleeves of the gown are short, gloves should be worn. With wrist-length sleeves it is perfectly correct to omit the gloves. Kid or French made gloves should be, worn.

Question — Is it proper to leave a business card when you call upon a friend who happens to be out when you arrive? I don't have any social cards, as I seldom need one, so I'm wondering if I can use my business cards when I call, say, on Sunday afternoon? — M.L. P. E., New Haven, Conn.

Answer — No. Better to leave no card at all, and phone your friends the next day, telling them you did drop by and are sorry to have missed them. A business card should never be used for social purposes.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, three editors and a women's editor. Each article is a summary of a family disagreement presented to the Council. The Council deals with problems, major and minor, encountered by guidance counsellors and social workers.

Mrs. I. C — She's over sensitive or just plain crabby.

Lillian R. — They'd be better off themselves with less racket.

Mrs. I. C. — We rented out the two-room apartment on the top floor of our home to Lillian. She's a graduate student at the local university who knew she wasn't moving into a museum or a monastery. But all she does is complain about the noise.

We are a normal family of five people and there are the normal sound effect of walking, talking, playing records and television programs. Our boys are five and seven, and our daughter is 12. Lillian objects to their active play, to the doorbell, to my vacuuming, and even to my husband's lawn mower.

She's such a bug about quiet which she hasn't tried to abolish thunder!

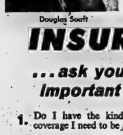
Lillian R. — Mrs. C. hasn't told you about their poodles, Fairfax and two sons; or about the five-year-old's guns, the seven-year-old's drums, or the young girl's conversations with her best friend across the street which are shouted above the din of a Fabian recording, set at maximum!

Even if I weren't in the midst of a difficult perparation for an oral exam in metaphysics, I'd be disturbed by the constant clamor in this household. No one talks. From the dogs up, they bark! Then there are power tools screeching in the backyard, scraping and waxing machines going in the basement workshop, and a radio at top volume in practically every room.



I wish I could convince them of the great benefits of silence.

The Council — There are some people, as Lillian has discovered, who abhor silence. Psychologists tell us that this may be because silence is equated, in these cases, with loneliness. So noise becomes thier constant companion.

We agree with Lillian that the C's might profit from a less raucous, less ear-splitting environment. When do they think? Can they think a thing through, or do they settle for snap judgments and surface solutions? Pleading in behalf of the virtues of silence, Pope Pius XII called them "beneficial to sanity, nervous equilibrium, and intellectual labor."

Tanned and Rested

By Mary Moore

You will not find a proper recipe here today but there is good folk talk. It is mixed with a running commentary of our return from Grand Cayman a two-day stop in Miami before returning to Canada.

I was terrifically impressed with the high quality of the food in Miami restaurants and its relatively low cost. We have cousins who live there and they took us to lunch at Jordan Marsh's. I had the shoppers' special ($1.00) which I decided to copy at home. It was on one large plate: a cup-ful of lobster bisque; 4 small sandwiches made of white bread on one side and whole wheat on the other and a small sunburst citrus salad and iced coffee. Some of the others had Welsh Rarebit which was served boiling hot in a 6" ramekin and garnished with two halves of hot devilled eggs. With it was served a tossed salad, hot fan tan rolls and fresh strawberry-rhubarb pie ($1.25).

MONDAY

Ham and Lamb Meat Loaf with Cherry Sauce; Baked Squash; Green Beans; Lettuce, Apple and Green Pepper Salad; Cocoanut Layer Cake; Coffee,

Later at a Hot Shoppe restaurant we had "butterfly shrimps". They had been slit where the black vein was removed, but the little tails were left on for a handle. They were crumbed and deep fried and in this process the two halves spread and curled to give a butterfly effect. Delicious fresh strawberry pie here for me. The others had a combination of fresh strawberry and banana pie.

I will try some of these things and if they are as good as those I tasted I'll pass on the details.

The flight from Miami to Tampa took about an hour but the stewardesses immediately served us a delicious chicken dinner, boned Southern fried chicken legs and thighs, new green peas, summer-flavored tomato salad and a cherry cup-cake. (Tea though was a bag in a plastic glass filled with hot water.) Then we waited for our beautiful TCA jet while other tanned Canadians began to assemble from all directions. It takes a Canadian to know a Canadian and we even met friends who had been in Jamaica.

I hope I never get over my wonder at the beauty and capacity and performance of those TCA jets. It was filled to its 127-seat capacity with returning holidayers, all deeply tanned. Properly, the tea was served from 4 to 5 p.m. It was Saturday night and the men wondered about the hockey score at home. The deeply tanned women wondered about the weather for some had worn their Florida clothes aboard. They sure looked silly when they arrived at Malton where the temperature was 35 deg. Fahr. But friends did meet the two young things I was watching and threw coats over their shivering shoulders.

Even though the lack of mail on my desk was so high I could not open all of it by the three hours I spent at my desk after Sunday School — it is good to be home.

Successful Living

Wife Suspects Night-Working Husband

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—I never thought I'd write to anybody about my problem, but here goes. This is a woe.

My wife thinks I am cheating on her. I have had to work nights lately and now she makes supposedly veiled remarks about my secretary. I swear there is nothing to it but she is dwelling on this. Next thing she'll have a detective on my trail. I just won't bring this out in the open and bey her to believe me. For one thing it wouldn't do any good. Is there anything you can suggest?—BALDY.

DEAR BALDY:—You didn't mention children or how long you've been married, but I am guessing from the pen name that it is several years.

I am also guessing that your wife has too much time to think and too little attention from you. If you are taking her for granted, start acting like someone who is in love with her. If her suspicions are completely unfounded, not that you are.

Next night off, have a date with her. See if she doesn't respond and relax.

DEAR DORIS:—My fiance teases me and I think he means it, so I get cross. Then he says I shouldn't be so serious.

I feel foolish afterwards, but I have never had brothers or sisters and I am not used to kidding. How can I help it if I am sensitive?—TOUCHY.

DEAR TOUCHY:—Practice. A large family helps a gal to laugh it off, but an only child sometimes takes a little longer to enjoy the give and take of good-natured kidding.

Being sensitive is a sign you are still growing up. Maturity brings poise and a more even temper. Of course you must know yourself to be loved and cherished or you will never get self-assurance with your fiance. Be sure of this, then learn to laugh and give back as good as you get.

DEAR DORIS:—I started smoking when I did a summer job and all the girls in the office smoked. I just had to. Now I am 17 and am having quite a time giving them up.

Please warn young people that you don't really have to show off and smoke to have friends. All the medical articles show that it does you real harm. I feel much better since I stopped.—BILL V.

DEAR BILL V.—Good for you. It takes real pluck to give up the old weed once you've started. Many an older person who thinks he has lots of determination hasn't been able to stop at will.

You scored when you said you don't have to show off to have friends. Perhaps some people might be impressed for a time with your worldliness when they saw you light up, but this kind of regard is hardly worth having. Real friendship is still based on the old-fashioned virtues of loyalty, kindness and honesty.

Fred Loewe Best Choice Composer to Write Music For Johansson's Next Movie

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

NEW YORK (AP)—If Hollywood is looking for someone to write authentic background music for heavyweight Ingemar Johansson's next movie, Frederick Loewe is their man.

The dapper composer of Camelot, My Fair Lady and Brigadoon is singularly equipped to write a chorale for knocked - out combatants. By reason of experience he happens to be something of an authority on still life on the canvas.

After a brilliant career as a child prodigy pianist and before embarking on an even more brilliant career as a musical comedy composer, Loewe was a not - so brilliant professional boxer.

It was quite a dandy, very agile, quick on my feet and very deft with a slap-like jab," Loewe recalled. "I'd won eight fights in a row in the 120-pound class, and then I ran into an up - and - coming fighter named Tony Canzoeri.

ONE-PUNCH KNOCKOUT

"He took me out with one punch in the first round.—Other fellows who'd been knocked out used to tell me they actually heard birdies singing. I guess that's where my musical background came in. I heard a whole symphony orchestra.

"When I came to in the dressing room, the string section was just going by. Playing very beautifully, too, I might add. No, it wasn't a lullaby. It was something triumphant."

An original score perhaps?

"Probably," Loewe said. "But I never could remember the melody. It doesn't matter though. I'm always hearing the most marvelous music in my sleep and then, when I wake up, it's gone. This used to worry me but it doesn't anymore.

"I tried jumping out of bed a few times and copying down that great masterpiece of my dreams. And do you know it was horrible."

Loewe was not one to be kept down by the knockout at the hands of Canzoeri. He bounced back into the music business and soon was delivering some impressive knockouts of his own on Broadway.

CHANGED HIS LIFE

Loewe shows the same indomitable attitude toward his heart attack of three years ago. "If you live through it," he says, "a heart attack is absolutely the best thing that can happen to you. I never enjoyed life until I had my attack. I drank from five at night until five the next morning. I smoked three, four packs of cigarets a day. It was a senseless, futile existence.

"Now I live in moderation and I enjoy everything in the fullest. I don't worry about the things I used to worry about. A heart attack gives you new values. I don't smoke at all. I have a drink before dinner, a small glass of wine with my meal, and I'm careful about what I eat. But the big difference is that I enjoy my meal the way I never did before.

"The only real worry I have in life now is getting a little white ball into an once-operative little cup. I've taken up golf for relaxation, but it's not coming easy. When Arnold Palmer took a 12 on a hole the other day, it was the best thing that ever happened to golf. It gave thousands of us a reason to go on living."

Northport

NORTHPORT — Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Smith were guests on Sunday of their daughter, Mrs. Harold Stark, and Mr. Stark.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Cronk of Solmesville were dinner guests on Easter Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. William McCaw, R.R. 9, Picton.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Norton spent Tuesday evening with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Norton, Ronald and Michael.

Mr. and Mrs. William McCaw R.R. 9, Picton, were dinner guests on Thursday of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Smith and girls.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Emry and family of Belleville are spending several weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Smith.

Whites Say They Are Alone In Africa Where Black Tide Threatens Their Safety

By RICHARD S. KASISCHKE

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — A will have to go some to top last general warns: "We may soon have to fight this awaking black giant—this last wave of African nationalism."

One of the world's biggest industrialists, Harry Oppenheimer, warns: "Let's face the facts of our situation—that is a dangerous world we stand condemned and cast off. We are alone."

Newspaper editorials warn of "the gathering storm."

That's why—for all its gold and diamond mines, its lovely rolling hills and open spaces, its handsome women and men —South Africa is an unhappy, anxious and divided country.

The man whose policies of racial segregation are most responsible for this situation is convinced they are right. He repeatedly boasts that come day the world will recognize him as perhaps the last champion of the "white man's rights and heritage, the defender of Christian civilization in Africa."

SQUARE DEALS GONE

He is Hendrik French Verwoerd, South Africa's 59-year-old Nationalist prime minister. Last month Verwoerd took South Africa out of the British Commonwealth and there are many who believe he may soon take it out of the United Nations. Verwoerd claimed a white man could no longer get a square deal in the Commonwealth and he has said that with the huge Afro-Asian bloc a white man can't get a square deal in the United Nations anymore.

This year may be fateful for Verwoerd and South Africa. It is to cripple any reorganization year.

This chain of events started March 21, 1960, when African demonstrators converged on the police station at Sharpeville, near Johannesburg. The white police thought the Africans were coming to get them. They opened fire, killing 69 Africans and wounding 180 — shooting many in the back as they fled.

Nineteen days later, two more shots were fired — these into Verwoerd's face by a white farmer who said the prime minister's racial policies were strangling South Africa. The farmer, David Pratt, was found mentally ill and committed to an asylum.

Verwoerd speedily recovered but police arrested thousands white and Negro, on charges of subversion or work-stirking.

FEAR ANOTHER WIN

Verwoerd's National party, ruling South Africa for 13 years, has a handsome majority in Parliament. His opponents fear that if Verwoerd called a "snap" election this year he'd win again and be in power for five more years. Normally the next national election should be in 1963.

Verwoerd's opponents also fear that more and more white people feel they are the last of the Mohicans" in Africa.

Despite government controls, more whites continue to leave than come in.

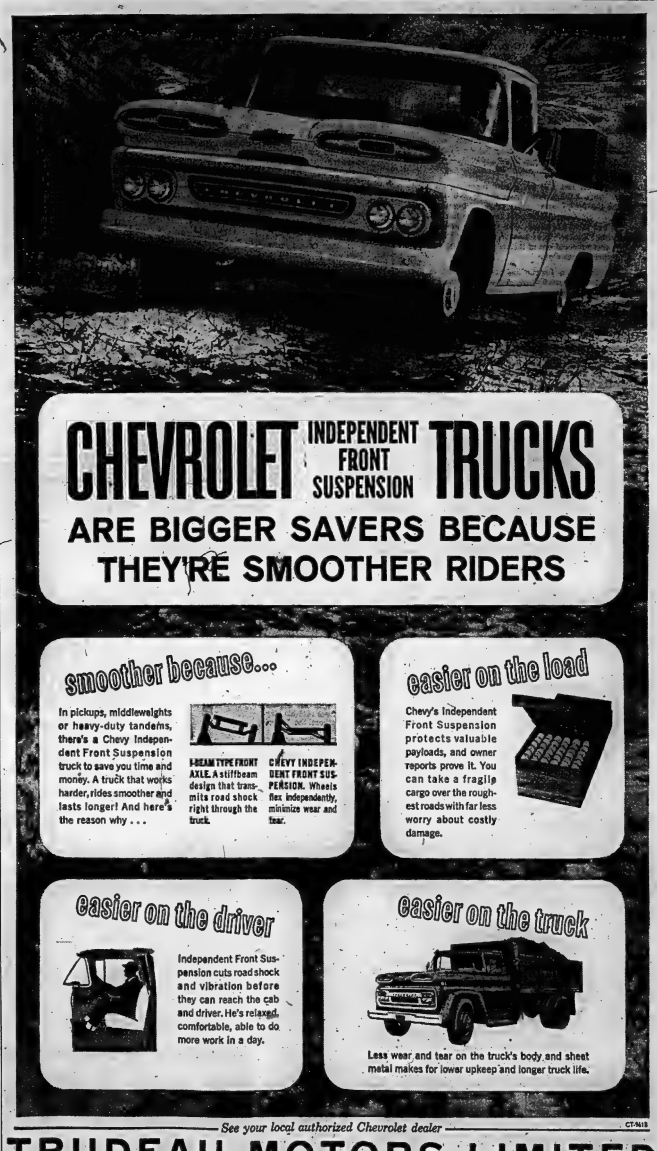
Police crackdowns are still going on. Most are made under the Suppression of Communism Act but their apparent purpose of African political movements.

The first anniversary of Sharpeville, despite an official ban of any demonstrations, saw riots in Johannesburg and Cape Town.

A small war of tribal violence continues in the Pondoland, an African reserve area on the Indian Ocean coast. This is a continuing wave of murder and arson which the South African police are trying to suppress.

The story of the Pondoland can't be told because the government won't let reporters in there. All that is known is that scores of Negroes have been killed, hundreds arrested and that the government is embarrassed because this was part of its "model Bantu territory" and was supposed to show the world how well the blacks could be brought forward in "separate development of the races."

South Africa's economy suffered after, Sharpeville and is still suffering. Exports fell up well despite boycotts led by Ghana and Makara, but a huge and continuing outflow of foreign capital has put a severe drain on the federal reserve bank's gold and foreign exchange holdings.



Verwoerd has also warned that South Africa's not going to brook any intervention by the United Nations or anybody else in its control of Southwest Africa, the huge territory to the north administered under an old League of Nations mandate. But there is fear here that racial violence may break out there.

The troubled Rhodesias are the only buffer between South Africa and the bloody Congo border.

The buffers are shrinking. What the South African general called "the black tide" is coming nearer.

Wings Score Early To Square Series

Ontario Intelligencer SPORTS

Sport Slices...

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

With the Detroit Red Wings and Chicago Black Hawks starting a brand new best-of-three series for the Stanley Cup, the argumentive fire and fury goes on with renewed vigor. The clubs go back at it again tonight in Chicago and the cup is still up for grabs with neither team showing much of an edge. It is anybody's cup from here in barring major incidents and accidents.

But over the hills and far away, so to speak, another great sport opens this week. Getting the great summer pastime under way today was President Kennedy who tossed, or was scheduled to toss, the opening ball in Washington as a brand new team of Senators faced the Chicago White Sox rated by many to take the American League flag.

However, you will get a stiff argument on that matter from Yankee Fans, from the dyed-in-the-wool type to the fellow who merely takes an interest. Even the grand old Casey, chief pilot for years has left the bridge but there are those who think the crew of the good ship "Yankee" is as powerful as ever if not better than which was squeezed out of the series berth last year by an upstart Pirates club.

The American League has been expanded to ten teams, but this means nothing in the eyes of the Yankee supporters. As a matter of fact the addition of Bowie Kuhn Vezas may have placed the Yanks 3-5 favorites to cop the flag.

The experts point out that the addition of the new Washington club and new Los Angeles entry, the new schedule six, works to Yankee advantage.

The club schedule calls for 162 games instead of 154 of last year, and they figure that over a longer track the best horse usually prevails. Then, too, they say the Bombers play four fewer games with their most formidable rivals the White Sox and Baltimore and 18 games with each of the new entries.

The Yankees new manager in his tyro year show no signs of nervousness. In fact he smacks of confidence. The Yankees open in New York tomorrow against the new Minnesota Twins and Ralph Houk himself on the spot. "I feel we are good enough to win" he told reporters. "We've got the material and desire. I see now reason why we won't be better than we were last year. We won't be any but we'll win.

But there are a lot of people including Paul Richards of the Baltimore Orioles who think the Birds can take the American League flag. And get a load of this. Tiger old Detroiter Thomas Monson has a change of mind and thinks his Tigers can take the gravy. Sure the Bengals added Billy Bruton to bolster the outfield but from here it looks, like weak pitching and nothing too strong behind the plate.

Senor Lopez, the boss-man of the White Sox lashes back at Yankee potential. He believes the Sox are stronger with the addition of pitchers Juan Pizarro and Cal McNish and the Yanks are weaker because they gave up Bob Cerv and Dale Long, also pitchers Bobby Shantz and Bill Ortega.

The Indians! Claude Tice likes 'em but doesn't love 'em. He picks Baltimore after a decade of Tribe backing. The Indians are weak in pitching, need bullpen help but might wind up in third or fourth place.

The Red Sox fans will miss the "Sinister Silver" but they've got Jackie Jensen back and a big guy named Carl Yastrzemski to fill Ted Williams spot. But they have infield and pitching problems.

Minnesota has the same club, almost as they had in Washington last year but like the Kansas City 'A's haven't improved enough to get out of the second division. So says the experts.

Guelph Leads 2-1

Irish Defeat Royals

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto St. Michael's College Majors clobbered Guelph Royals 6-0 Sunday in the third game of their best - of - seven Ontario Hockey Association junior A final series.

Guelph leads the series 2-1 with the fouth game to be played in Toronto Tuesday night.

Bruce Draper led the Majors with three goals and his brother Dave scored one. Brian Walsh and Arnold Brown scored the other Toronto goals.

Bob Cunningham fired two goals for Guelph and kept the Royals in the game. Defenceman Mike Mckibbon opened the scoring early in the first period with Guelph's other goal.

Bruce Draper tied the score 1-1 near the end of the first period. Early in the second, Walsh put the Majors ahead but Cunningham tied the score less than three minutes later. Bruce Draper followed close behind with his second goal and it wasn't until 17:34 that Cunningham came back to tie the score again.

SCORED WINNING GOAL

The third period was only five minutes old when Bruce Draper scored his third and the eventual winning goal. Dave Draper added the insurance marker less than a minute later and the score remained 5-3 until 19:26 when Brown added the puck into an empty Guelph net.

Following the game, which seen two Guelph players receive misconduct penalties and one game misconduct, Guelph manager Jack Humphries said he was requesting that time - keeper be replaced for Thursday's game.

His statement arose from an incident during the game when Bob Draper received a minor penalty for hooking Bruce Draper. Referee Hugh McLean signaled a misconduct penalty after Draper had gone to the penalty box but decided to come out and speak to his coach, Ernie Francis. He was promptly given a game misconduct. Humphries went to speak to either the referee or the time - keeper. As he neared the penalty box the time - keeper called a policeman to escort Humphries away.

USED THE WIND

ST. PETERSBURG (AP)— Roy Emerson of Australia used gusty winds to his advantage Sunday and defeated Luis Ayala of Chile 6-4, 6-3, 6-0 to win the second annual Masters tennis championship. In the women's finals, Suzy Kormoczy of Budapest defeated Ann Haydon of England, 6-2, 6-0.

Quick Pair Sets Up Win

By W. R. WHEATLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

CHICAGO (CP)—Detroit Red Wings, getting the rough end of the deal on the air-lift shuttle, meet Chicago Black Hawks tonight in a tie-breaking game of the Stanley Cup Final.

On home ice in Detroit Saturday the Wings broke in front with an early outburst of superior play to win 3-2 and pull even with the Hawks in the best-of-seven series at one game each.

The unhappy Hawks left immediately after the game, riding home by plane in comfort.

The Red Wings remained over until Sunday. They could scarcely have picked a worse day for the one-hour plane hop from Detroit to Chicago.

PLANE PUSHED AROUND

A driving wet snow whipped through this section of the U.S. Middle West and the Red Wings' plane were delayed 30 minutes at the airport in Detroit while snow was cleared off the plane.

Flying by instrument control, the plane bucked through the murk and when it put down at Chicago a bunch of jittery hockey players debarked.

"It wasn't so much the short bounces as the long drops that seemed if they would never end," said the players on arriving at their downtown hotel.

The flight experience was the general talk as he excited players checked in at the hotel and hurried off to eat.

His shirt was soaking wet, like the sweaty uniform he pulled off last night after a similar ordeal in defeating the Red Wings in their first game.

LED THE ATTACK

It was Howe, as much as Alex Delvecchio, who led the two-pronged attack which spearheaded the Red Wings to their victory. The big right winger scored both of Delvecchio's goals. The other goal was scored by defenceman Bowie Young.

"We've got to win at least one game on Chicago ice, and we're going after this Monday game," said coach Sid Abel.

"We are not trying to figure out any particular tactics. We'll go our own way," he said. "What we have to do is to outskate and outcheck the Hawks and we'll win if we do."

The Red Wings had the early speed Saturday to get up a 2-0 lead in the first period before the disorganized Hawks could settle down.

Chicago defenceman Pierre Pilote drove in a goal early in the second period and from there on the Chicago attack slowly began to pick up momentum.

HOLD ON TO WIN

The Red Wings, given brilliant support by goalie Hank Bassen, held on and clinched the win in the final minute. Hawk goalie Glenn Hall was removed in favor of an extra forward and Delvecchio settled it all with a goal into the open net.

Back home with his Hawks, coach Rudy Pilous said his players have to fathom the Detroit style of long forward passes.

"That Hornacheck style of attack is throwing us," said Pilous. "But the solution is simple. Our guys have got to stop chasing them.

"If each guy sticks to his position we'll break it up. We've got a better balanced club than they have."

After tonight's game the teams return the air-lift shuttle, playing one game in each city, with a day's rest in between, until the series is settled.

The Wings jumped in front on their home ice Saturday by outskating the Hawks and limiting them to a meagre two shots on goal in the first period despite the team's manpower advantage three times.

TOOK STASIUK FANS

Pilote drove in Vic Stasiuk's pass from the end boards at 8:10 and Delvecchio scored on a power play at 40-footer at 17:39 while the Hawks were shorthanded.

Pilote cut the Detroit margin to 3-2 after 41 seconds of the second period, his 30-foot backhand shot bounced directly in front of Bassen and hopped into the net before the Detroit goalie could move.

Four minutes later Parker Macdonald of the Wings drove a shot past Hall but the goal was disallowed by referee Eddie

ROUND-RANIED OUT

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — The final round of the $100,000 Masters golf tournament was washed out by rain Sunday and will be replayed today.

The postponement came with 24 players already home in the 72-hole tournament and South African Gary Player, through with his final 18 holes, holding a two-stroke lead over defending champion Arnold Palmer, who had played nine holes.

Player was 10 under par and Palmer eight under when play was suspended after a torrential downpour. A half hour later, Cliff Roberts, tournament chairman, announced the entire round was cancelled and would be replayed.

Indians Win Over Bears, Lead 2-0

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP)—Springfield made it two in a row over Hershey Bears with a 3-2 win Sunday night in the American Hockey League finals on a third - period goal by Kenny Schinkel.

The Indians had to come from behind to turn back the Bears for the second straight night of great goaltending by Hershey's Bobby Perreault. He lost two heartbreakers.

The best-of-seven competition now stands 2-0.

Hershey took a 1-0 first-period lead on Les Duff's goal at 3:09. Springfield took a 2-1 second period lead as Harry Pichiorry and Bill Sweeney tallied within 46 seconds.

Willie Marshall tied the game at 16:30 after taking a pass from Jack McKenzie.

SCORED ON REBOUND

With more than four minutes left on the clock, Schinkel blasted a rebound from Fabrizio Olsco's shot at 16:50 to send the Indians out front. Pichiorry was also in on the play.

Hershey had a face-off in the Springfield end but Brian Kilrea broke loose and slapped the puck into the vacated cage only a few strides away.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Maroons won the Western Canada Allan Cup final Sunday with a 8-1 victory over Nelson Maple Leafs who played with trainer Bill Preus in goal.

The Manitoba club won the series four games to two, having defeated Nelson 4-0 Saturday.

It is believed Hoekie suffered his back injury in the Saturday game, but suffered no ill effects until the following morning.

Playing coach Mickey Maglio, still suffering from the mumps which kept him out of Saturday's game, potted the only goal for Nelson in the third. Maglio took only a few turns on the ice in the rugged game.

First-Round Knockout

Moore Retains Title

LOS ANGELES (AP)—World featherweight champion Davey Moore was thoroughly dressed out Danny Valdez in one round and fresh out of 126-pound boxing foes in the United States, says he would like to fight lightweight king Joe Brown.

The 27-year-old sharpshooter from Springfield, Mass., belted Valdez out in.two minutes, 48 seconds Saturday night. Valdez, 21, and from Los Angeles, was the only American ranked in the top 10 in the division.

Manager Willie Ketchum and Moore agreed that the veteran Brown might not care to risk his more valuable crown against Davey. But they also agreed such a match, preferably here or in Brown's home town of Houston, Tex., offers the best money in sight.

Moore said he is familiar with Brown, having trained with him and "fighting lightweight would be nothing new for me since I've been fighting them regularly in non-title bouts for the last two years."

A crowd estimated at 7,500 paid $32,100 to see the Moore-Valdez scheduled 15-rounder.

NAILED WITH RIGHT

The youngster, badly hurt, got up at the count of seven and Moore promptly nailed him with another devastating right hand. That was all for Danny. It was the first time he had been knocked off his feet.

After the count, Valdez jerked his head from his trainers, wandered on rubber legs across the ring and into the ropes.

Asked later what he was doing, Valdez said:

"It was the first time I had been knocked out. It seemed like people were trying to hold me down. I thought I was dreaming."

Moore earned $25,000 and Valdez $4,000.

TAKE WRESTLING TITLES

TORONTO (CP) — London YMCA won the team title in the Ontario amateur championships here Saturday, scoring 16 points. A detroit team was second and Kitchener YMCA third with 12 points. Ron Steckle and Kurt Boese, both of Kitchener YMCA, won the light - heavyweight and middleweight divisions respectively.

Peewee Hockey Tournament

GODERICH (CP)—Two newcomers carried off the last two championships to be decided in the Young Canada Week peewee hockey tournament which ended here Sunday night.

A team which travelled 1,000 miles from Geraldton in Northern Ontario took the B series title, beating Delhi 3-1 in the final. Most of the team had never skated on artificial ice before.

Woodbridge won the C championship by defeating Blenheim 3-2 on a goal by Peter Fraser in the final two minutes.

Paisley, an old hand in the tourney, won its first title by downing Hensall 9-3 in the D series final.

Earlier in the eight-day tournament Dilee Coe struction of Toronto won the A1 series and Waterloo took the A honors.

Winnipeg wound up the tournament by blanking Goderich 5-0 in an exhibition match, with Ricky Powell getting twice.

Paisley produced the tournament's top scorer in Pete Kennedy, who collected 13 goals and seven assists. In a 9-2 semi-final victory over Sir. Wilfrid, he shot six goals. He scored again in the final to bring his tally for the season to 101 goals.

Win By 6-2 Score

Hull Ousts Beavers

HULL (CP)—Hull-Ottawa Canadiens entered the finals of the Eastern Professional Hockey League Sunday with an easy 6-2 win over Kitchener - Waterloo Beavers. The victory gave Habs the best - of - seven series four games to three and they now meet Sault Ste. Marie Thunderbirds in the league final.

The largest crowd of the season—4,000—watched Habs wrap up the win in the first period when they outscored the visitors 4-1. After a scoreless second period, Habs rapped in two more goals while holding Beavers off the scoresheet until the final minute.

Bob Rousseau and Billy Carter scored twice for Canadiens, Terry Gray and Johnny Annable were their other marksmen. For Beavers it was Lou Ronoco and Leon Rochefort.

Referee Dalton McArthur handed out 15 penalties, 10 of them to Beavers. Among the Beavers' total was a misconduct to Ronoco for protesting too vigorously a tripping gesticnce in the first period.

McCARTAN STOPPED 42

Goalie Jack McCartan played a standout game for Beavers, making 42 saves, in the other net, Ed Johnston stopped 23.

League President Jim Hendrison indicated the final series would open in Hull Thursday with the second game here Thursday before the teams swing back to Sault Ste. Marie for the next two games of the best-of-seven set.

The game was only 50 seconds old when Gray scored the first Hull-Ottawa goal. Ronoco tied it at 1:25, but that was as close as Kingston got to a win through the remainder of the game.

Rousseau added his two goals at 11:16 and 15:16—and Annable tallied at 11:44 to give Canadiens a 4-1 first period edge that remained unchanged until Carter made it 5-1 at 5:20 of the third.

OASA Had Record Year

HAMILTON (CP) — Attendance and affiliation records were broken last season and indications point to another banner year in 1961, retiring President W. C. Perkin of Simcoe told the annual meeting of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association Saturday.

More than 43,000 players made up 333 teams in 30 series last season. The totals are expected to be swelled this year. Only four of 17 proposed amendments received the support of the more than 100 delegates.

After a one-year trial, delegates supported a proposal by the Southern Ontario Counties League to lop out the rule whereby the ball is dead if it touches the bat a second time while it is still in fair territory.

In future the batter will be called out and no runner will be permitted to advance.

The annual meeting reinstated Hamilton's Roy Hickey after serving one year of a two-year suspension handed out last year.

Belleville's Don Lee was elected president by acclamation. Secretary L. G. Pickard, St. Catharines; treasurer L. C. Alguire, St. Catharines; and auditors W. G. Champion, Hanson and Dave Leeber, Petersborough were returned by acclamation.

Andy Davidson, Stratford; Clare Butler, Willowdale, and H. F. Dormer, Peterborough, were elected vice - presidents.

D. H. Flynn, Hamilton; H. E. Campbell, Cecil Dunn, Galt; Stan Reeve, Sarnia; Maxie Schaff, Toronto and J. V. Vanwelkenhuyzen, New Toronto, were elected to the executive.

The Tracks

Jockey Bobby Ussery brought the 3-year-old colt home in 1:35 4-5 for the mile. The victory was worth $37,895.

Ambiopoise paid $11, $4.60 and $2.80. Globemaster, the favorite with the crowd of 32,502, paid $3.80 and $2.40 and Merry Ruler $2.80.

At Hot Springs, Ark., Light Talk was awarded first place in the $25,000 added Arkansas Derby after Bass Clef, the winner by a neck, was disqualified.

After Light Talk finished second, his jockey, Robert Nono, claimed Bass Clef interfered with Light Talk at the head of the stretch.

BASS CLEF THIRD

Bass Clef was placed third, behind Loyal Son. Time for the 1¼-mile distance was 1:50 2-5 over a sloppy track.

Light Talk paid $7.80, $3.60 and $2.40. Loyal Son returned $5.60 and $3 and Bass Clef $2.40.

At Laurel, Md., Mozart covered the 1 1-16-mile distance in 1:45 3-5 to take the $25,000 added Wilwyn handicap. Mozart paid backers $13, $5.40 and $6.60.

Johnny Longden brought Gen Town home in front in 1:42 for the 1 1-16-mile distance. Sea Orbit was a nose back and royal reserve third.

Gen Town paid $12.60, $4.80 and $4. Sea Orbit returned $5.20 and $3 and Royal Reserve $7.

Raymond Burr Considered Hardest-Working Actor

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "With all that is going on today, with all the opportunities that are available, a person should be pretty darned sure that when he kicks off he leaves this world a better place—or at least not a worse one."

Words of psychoanalysis, this is perhaps the best explanation of the phenomenon of Raymond Burr. It comes from Burr himself, a man whose almost puritanical capacity for work has stirred the admiration and puzzlement of his fellow actors.

Ask any of them who is the hardest-working actor in Hollywood and the reply will be Raymond Burr. He is considered an acting machine—though his work is by no means mechanical.

HAS BROKEN DOWN

Sometimes the machine breaks down. Burr was in hospitals more than once during the first two years of his Perry Mason TV series. He was back in the hospital recently for two sieges totaling 10 days.

"When one of us gets down, I am susceptible to ailments," he said. "This time I got a virus that I couldn't shake off. It got into the muscle of my back and chest and I had to go into the hospital. I was in traction most of the time."

But he bounced back and is once again laboring as Mason. He talked about his rigorous routine over a weight-watching lunch of consommé and lean burger steak; he said it was the first lunch interview he had been able to arrange in four years. Such is his schedule.

Did he know what he was getting into when he signed on as Perry?

WANTED QUALITY

"I thought I did," he said. "I had offers for several series. I took Mason because I thought it would be done with quality.

"I was right about that. But I didn't realize that other hour shows with two or more leading characters to carry the load; Mason couldn't. And I didn't realize I would not only have an immense amount of dialogue to learn. Yet it would be much questioning with no continuing train of thought — the most difficult dialogue to learn.

How does he learn and deliver all this wordage, plus the changes that sometimes come hourly? By doing little else.

BRIGITTE BARDOT UNCOVERS HER CLUES IN FILM

As always, Brigitte Bardot is out to get her man in her latest starring vehicle — "Come Dance With Me!" — which arrives tonight at the Park Theatre for its first Belleville showing in Eastmancolor.

In her role, as amateur sleuth, Brigitte actually is out to find a killer who has fixed things so neatly that the chief suspect is the man she loves, played by Henri Vidal.

Mixing liberal portions, of suspense, sex and comedy, the new film is an adaptation to the screen from the novel by Kelley Ross, "The Blonde Died Dancing". Mark Anders found the book a cross between rough, tough plot ideas of Dashiell Hammett and the sparkling, sexy and sophisticated dialogue of "Mr. and Mrs. Nordi".

In the film, in order to gather new clues to the actual murder, Brigitte takes place in a dance studio, Brigitte signs on as a teacher. From then on the plot gets more and more complicated by Brigitte that are in no standard cha cha cha lessons.

While following in the footsteps of the killer, Brigitte of course becomes far away from the arms of her lover. Dancing lures is the farthest thing from his mind.

Michel Boisrond who'directed Brigitte in "La Parisienne", directed her in "Come Dance With Me!".

On the same program is an exciting drama, "Three Blondes in His Life" starring Jack Mahoney and gorgeous Greta Thyssen.

Writer Worried With Picture Of Life Given U.S. Viewers

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — I am sometimes worried about the picture of life received by American TV viewers, particularly those of tender years, to form a particularly devoted audience.

The early evening situation comedies are good examples because most of them concern family life. All families in these programs live in bright, shining suburban houses with elegant furnishings and spacious grounds. All TV families have cars—late models and freshly washed.

All TV fathers are white collar workers who go to work in matched jackets and trousers, wearing hats and carrying briefcases, never lunchpails. They are lawyers, doctors, insurance men, engineers or real estate men. I can only think of one TV family man who worked in a factory—Riley in Life of Riley and he's not with us any more except in reruns.

TV mothers are invariably lovely slim, professionally manicured and coiffed and they wear expensive clothes. Financial problems are rarely a real problem for anybody. And kids, or youngsters, watching these programs, must wonder which way of life is real: Their own at home or the one they keep seeing on the television screen.

Both ABC and NBC had special programs on the background of the case against the former Nazi charged with systematic extermination of Jews during the war.

ABC's documentary relied primarily onInterviews with survivors of the German death camps and with Israelis concerned with the trial. NBC-one TV family man who worked in a factory—Riley in Life of Riley and he's not with us any more except in reruns.

SPECIAL NOTICE

On Friday night the Dara was anchored off Dibai near the tip of the peninsula. Lief Ottsen's alarm blew up, dragging his anchor and grounding the ship on some ships. The Dara headed for open water to avoid being grounded.

DAD COLLISION

On the outward passage the Dara collided with another vessel which had been blown off moorings. The ship's bridge was crowded with Indian and Pakistani passengers on deck, confused to steam away from land.

Purser Murray was on watch when an explosion in the engine room rocked the liner at 4:45 a.m. Only several hours after the collision.

"After the explosion the lights went out and the engines were plunged into pitch darkness," Murray said. The emergency generators were started up 10 minutes later and Murray was ordered to report to an alert.

Radio Officer Francis Torpace, also safe aboard the Yuyo Maru, rushed to the radio room out after the explosion.

"I sent out the word out at S O S. Immediately afterward, the order was given to abandon ship and I made the quick and free-sized scramble to get into the sea."

WENT ABOARD

In the afternoon Capt. Charles Elson and his first mate boarded from the small boats the Barpets, British India's newest freighter, and left a skeleton aboard. Explosions forced them to retreat.

As ships and planes scoured the Persian Gulf for survivors, the British Empire ship Loch Ruthven and the Loch Fyne, arrived and began pouring water into the blazing Dara. The U.S. destroyer Laffey soon joined in and fought the chemical foam equipment into play.

The Loch Ruthven radioed that the Dara may also be scuttled, within six feet of the Dara to pour on water, lessening the danger of collision at sea.

FIRE-SWEPT

to try to beach her. She sank about 15 miles off the Oman coast of the Arabian Peninsula.

JUMP IN PANIC

A British government spokesman said most of the 740 persons aboard were Indians and other Asians; Scores jumped in panic into the storm-tossed gulf waters infested with sharks.

One American survivor; Mrs. H. O. Lokerb, wife of a missionary from Holland, Mich., said "The gangways and companionways filled with people rushing about in a frenzy shouting fire, fire' when the order was given to abandon ship. Many had only their night clothes on."

She said her husband tried unsuccessfully with others to lower a lifeboat and then a rope was thrown over the side "but no one wanted to go down it because of the heat and smoke."

"My husband forced me to go down to get a seat and to the others . . . other passengers were jumping and falling to the water all over in desperate confusion. Eventually I and my husband were dragged on to a lifeboat."

ACCOUNTS DIFFER

Accounts Saturday said the ship carried 280 persons, and the first indication of a higher number came from Purser John Murray, after he was picked up by the Persian tanker Yuyo Maru. He reported the 60 Iranians had been lost from the ship's list port of call, the Arabian town of Dibai.

The Dara plies the Persian Gulf, stopping at oil ports along the way, and was sailing from Dibai at 1 a.m. Friday en route to Bombay when disaster struck.

The story being put together together from reports by surviving passengers and ship's officers:

On Friday night the Dara was anchored off Dibai near the tip of the peninsula. Lief Ottsen's alarm blew up, dragging his anchor and grounding the ship on some ships. The Dara headed for open water to avoid being grounded.

31 Fatalities Across Canada During Weekend

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Five provinces were free of traffic deaths during the weekend as 31 accidental deaths were counted elsewhere.

There were 28 fatal traffic accidents, 21 in Ontario, Quebec had another nine, Saskatchewan four and Nova Scotia and Newfoundland one each.

Ontario's only Saskatchewan each had one drowning, and there was one death by fire in Nova Scotia and two from other causes in Quebec.

Ralph Rowe, 11 months, Brantford, drowned Saturday when he fell into a pail of water.

Ian Calder, 8, Gormley, when struck by a car Friday night.

Anti-Castro Pilots Heading For Secret Camp

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — More than 35 anti-Castro airplane pilots were reported headed for a secret training camp today to head a call by the Cuban Revolutionary Council for a "second war of liberation."

The pilots, including some formerly associated with Cuban dictator Fulgencio Batista, were reported to have left Miami Sunday for a secret training camp, probably in Central America.

Family members and friends of the men were stripped of their clothing and identification, given uniforms and told to say their prayers before being spirited out of the United States.

It was the first time so-called "Batistianos" were reported to have joined ranks against Premier Fidel Castro. Those with Batista ties previously had been excluded from major revolutionary organizations.

SEEK BETRAYAL

The call for a "second war of liberation" was sounded by Dr. Jose Miro Cardona, president of the anti-Castro Cuban Revolutionary Council in New York. He said his country is occupied by "a foreign army at the service of Russia who betrayed the revolution."

Miro Cardona refused to disclose the location of the possible landings on Cuban soil or strength of the invasion forces. He said that the forces become active inside Cuba they will be supplied with 6,000 smiling "al d'Cube."

Reports from Havana said government-controlled radio stations and newspapers, ignored Miro Cardona's call.

In a country - wide TV talk Sunday, Castro repeated earlier warnings that insurgent bands and expeditionary forces invading Cuba would be liquidated but he did not refer directly to the latest call to arms against his regime.

Ex-King Zog, Albania, Dies

PARIS (Reuters) — Ex-King Zog of Albania, who spent his last 22 years wandering in luxury hotels, died Sunday in a Paris hospital. He was 66.

He was admitted to the hospital a week ago suffering from a stomach ulcer and a liver disorder.

Although he lived in exile for 22 years he never abdicated the throne of his country.

His death came in the agitated aftermath of his flight from Albania in April, 1939, before the invading fascist troops of Mussolini's Italy.

Albanian exile circles here Sunday hailed 25-year - old son, "crown prince" Leka, as heir to the Albanian throne. The country has been ruled by the Communists since 1945.

Man Accused Of Murder Found Dead in Cell

WELLAND (CP) — Raymond Gagnon, 39, of Niagara Falls, Ont., being held in Welland County jail on a charge of murdering his wife, was found dead in his cell Sunday. An autopsy failed to show cause of death.

Police said he had a cut on his left arm but it was doubtful that it caused his death. A piece of an old razor blade was found in the cell.

A jail guard discovered the body at 7:30 a.m. Sunday when he tried to arouse Gagnon, who was lying with his arms folded over his chest and appeared to be asleep.

Gagnon, a Great Lakes sailor, was arrested here after an intruder broke into the Welland home where his wife Shirley, 37, was visiting March 4 and killed her with a shotgun blast in the back.

Eichmann to Face 3 Judges, Battery of Lawyers and Legion of Ghosts in Trial

By REUMAN MORIN

JERUSALEM (AP)—A bony, hawk-faced man with grey-blue eyes, a high forehead, and thinning hair, will be brought into a courtroom Tuesday in Jerusalem.

There, he will confront three Israeli judges, a battery of lawyers, more than 700 spectators —and a legion of ghosts.

The most extraordinary murder trial in history is about to begin—the case of the States of Israel vs. Adolf Eichmann, former chief of the Jewish section of the Nazi Gestapo.

The indictment: Complicity in destroying an estimated 6,000,000 Jews including 1,000,000 children during the Second World War, and causing " . . . enslavement . . . starvation . . . degradation . . . inhuman suffering and torture."

HISTORIC TRIAL

Never before in history has one man been charged with personal responsibility for crimes of such enormity. In the Nuremberg trials, a group of Nazis was tried jointly.

Perhaps never before has a trial been fraught with greater moral, legal, and political implications.

Few ever raised weightier questions—

Should Eichmann, captured by Israeli commandos while in hiding in Argentina, have been turned over to West Germany for trial? Or to an international tribunal, perhaps under the aegis of the United Nations?

By reminding the world of the hideous catastrophe visited on the Jews during the war, will it help to wipe out history and bolster the door forever against the possibility of another such tragedy? Or could it on the contrary trigger new outbursts of anti-semitism?

Will it revive the old hatreds against the Germans? Will the testimony document the existence of an operating Nazi underground?

Will the case go into history as another step in humanity's slow, painful struggle to achieve a workable system of law and order among nations?

500 COVER TRIAL

Finally, no other legal action ever brought to a courtroom so many reporters and news media representatives. Some 500, from 25 nations, received credentials. This is more than double the number who covered the Nuremberg trials. Moreover, this case is the first of such magnitude to be televised.

It may last six weeks, two months, or longer.

The indictment contains 15 major counts, distilled from evidence in hundreds of documents selected from 300 tons of papers found in the archives of Hitler's Germany. The attorney-general, Gideon Hausner, is ready to call 39 witnesses. Other witnesses given to "zero six," the special police bureau set up to work on the case, by 168 persons. Prospective witnesses have come before Israeli consulates in Canada, the United States, Latin America and Germany.

EICHMANN BUST

Eichmann himself has written on, dictated more than 4,000 typewritten pages of his side of the story.

The Beit Ha'am (community center) of Jerusalem has been converted into a huge 756-seat courtroom. Hebrew will be the official language of the trial with simultaneous translation into English, French and German.

At a glance at the indictment explains why this is considered necessary. It contains 15 counts and the first of these is murder. It reads:

"The accused . . . caused the killings of millions of Jews in his capacity as the person responsible for the execution of the Nazi plan for the physical extermination of the Jews, known as 'the final solution of the Jewish problem.' "

LEDGER OF DEATH

Then comes a ledger of death, the dates, the places, the groups that did the killing, and a ghostly column of figures—

Like Lithuania, more than 80,000 Jews; in Latvia, more than 30,000 Jews; in Estonia, 4,700 Jews; in Tilsit, about 5,500 Jews." And so on and on, across that occupied Europe.

This, the indictment alleges, is the accounting for only one operational group during a given period of time.

The indictment also names three other such operational groups and tabulates the number of their respective victims in parts of Europe occupied by the Nazis.

DIRECTED METHOD

In the section covering the mass slaughter in the huge extermination camps, it accuses Eichmann of direct responsibility on a specific count, the means used to kill the captives. A paragraph reads:

"Millions of Jews were exterminated in this camp (Auschwitz) . . . by gas chambers, and to crematories, and by shooting and hanging. The accused directed the commanders of that camp to use gas known as Cyklon B, and in 1942 and 1944 the accused also secured the supply of a quantity of gas for the purpose of exterminating the Jews."

At Auschwitz and other such camps, men were separated from women and children. Each group was taken to a different chamber with a capacity for several hundred people.

There, they were told to strip, that while they were taking showers their clothes would be de-loused. Once inside the chamber, the huge doors were sealed tight.

Inside, they actually saw what appeared to be the nozzles of showers. But no water came out. Instead, crystals of zyklon B were dropped through the holes and the gas formed. Those nearest the "showers" died almost immediately, witnesses testified. The majority, crazed with terror, lived about 15 minutes.

CHARGE DEGRADATION

Along with murder, the bill of particulars filed against Eichmann accuses him of organizing and directing the deportation of Jews, enslaving them, subjecting them to degradation, depriving them of their human rights, and responsibility for "inhuman suffering and torture."

Count seven accuses Eichmann, among other things, of systematic robbery and it says:

"The extent and success of such robbery is reflected by the fact that when the Germans, at the time of retreat in 1945, burned 29 stores of personal effects and valuables out of 33 such stores. . . the six stores saved from the fire were found to contain, inter alia, 348,820 men's suits, 836,255 women's dresses, 38,000 men's shoes."

Another paragraph speaks of "vast amounts of parts of bodies of the murdered persons, such as hair, gold teeth, false teeth, and artificial limbs."

Under other sections of the indictment, entitled "crimes against humanity," Eichmann is accused of deporting and exterminating thousands of Poles, Yugoslavs, Slovenes and Czechs.

"COG IN MACHINERY"

On what grounds will Eichmann's defence be based?

Last November, Life magazine published his memoirs. They said he gave them to a German newspaper man in Argentina while he was a fugitive, "talking" into a tape recorder for hours at a time." In these statements, Eichmann is quoted as saying:

"I was merely a little cog in the machinery that carried out the directives and orders of the German Reich. I am neither a murderer nor a mass murderer.

"It would be as pointless to blame me for the whole final solution of the Jewish problem as to blame the official in charge of the railroads over which the Jewish transports travelled . . . with us an order was an order."

He says he never watched the Jews being herded into trains headed for the death camps. And he says he declined an invitation to witness the asphyxiation of some captives.

"I regret nothing," the article quotes him as saying. "I will not humble myself or repent in any way."

POSSIBLE DEFENCES

"Thus, he may attempt to defend himself on the grounds:

1. That it was wartime and, as an officer, he had no alternative but to carry out orders from above. This was the principal line of defence of the Nazis in the Nuernberg trials.

2. That his was an executive task solely, to collect the Jews in a given country and to arrange the railroad timetables that carried them to the death camps. What happened there, he may argue, was not his responsibility.

3. That "my department never gave a single annihilation order."

Eichmann's chief defence counsel is Dr. Robert Servatius. He defended, among others at the Nuremberg trials, Sauckel, superintendent of the Nazi slave labor camps. Sauckel was convicted and hanged. Israel is paying Servatius' fees, $30,000.

RETROSPECTIVE LAW

Israel is trying Eichmann under a law passed in 1950—"The Nazis and Nazi Collaborators (Punishment Law, 5710". It was passed in 1950. International lawyers describe it as an "elaboration" of the Nuremberg Charter and the affirmations of the charter in the United Nations in December, 1946.

Servatius indicated he might challenge the validity of the Israeli law on grounds of law:

1. The retroactive character of the Israeli law of 1950.

2. The circumstances under which Eichmann was captured in Argentina and brought to Israel.

3. The fact that Eichmann's crimes were not committed on Israeli soil and at a time when Israel did not yet exist.

EICHMANN IN PRISON — Adolf Eichmann, former Nazi SS officer, squinted in bright sun in compounds of fortress near Haifa where he was held prisoner by Israeli governments. Eichmann charged with complicity in the execution of millions of Jews in World War II, has been brought to Jerusalem for his trial which is scheduled to start Tuesday.

Target Date for Opening Shipping Season to Be Met

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ships of several types plowed through waters almost free of ice during the weekend to bring a new Great Lakes and St. Lawrence shipping season considerably closer to full activity.

The grain carrier Murray Bay led two other Canada Steamship Lines carriers in a 37-hour dash across Lake Superior to open officially the navigation season there.

The 705-foot vessel, along with the T. R. McLagan and Sir James Dunn which tied up at Port Arthur shortly after her, had entered Lake Superior from locks at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., early Saturday.

The government icebreaker Alexander Henry had cleared lanes through an icefield stretching 15 miles out from the harbor in preparation for the early arrivals.

REACH MONTREAL

Seven freighters in Montreal during the weekend included the Andria, Arabia, Capo Noli, Manchester Miller, Milross, Tuncholan and Yehuda.

St. Lawrence Seaway Superintendent Rene l'Heureux said it is hoped that the seaway can be opened by next Saturday. Target date is April 15 for the seaway's official opening.

Heavy ice was still covering the eastern portion of the season during the weekend and the first icebreaker of the season was scheduled to enter today to start clearing it. A buoy tender was also to enter the seaway.

Sunday the 630-foot Mohawk Navigation Company freighter Golden Hind passed through the Soo locks bound for Port Arthur and reported no trouble with ice.

A 90-foot-wide track had been cut through fire fields extending about 18 miles out from the Soo to Isle Parisienne. The main body of the lake was reported ice-free.

CHANNELS CLEAR

Shipping channels from Lake Ontario, through the Welland Canal and Lakes Erie, to the Detroit and St. Clair Rivers and into Lake Erie were reported unhampered by ice and limited shipping was under way.

At Buffalo the John Ingalls which opened the season three days ago and had trouble with ice, entered Buffalo harbor Sunday and reported no trouble.

Capt. A. E. George of the Murray Bay was honored at a welcoming ceremony in Port Arthur Sunday. He said in a radio - telephone interview his ship would load 500,000 bushels of grain and likely leave Monday night or early Tuesday for Montreal.

BIG SUBSIDIES PROPOSED FOR RAILS

Eichmann Trial Opens, Defence Attacks Judges

State and Not Accused Responsible Is Claim

JERUSALEM (Reuters)—The trial of Adolf Eichmann opened today with a defence attack on the competence of the Israeli court and the fairness of its three judges, all refugees from Nazi persecution.

Defence lawyer Robert Servatius made his challenge shortly after a hushed courtroom heard the charges outlining Eichmann's role as the Nazis' chief exterminator of the Jewish people.

Eichmann, a stooped, nervous figure in the bullet-proof prisoner's dock, listened intently as his defence lawyer made two submissions on the "suspicion of prejudice and lack of competence of this court."

Servatius told the three black-robed judges they should be excluded from the case since the entire Jewish state was gloomy and filled with the mass-murder charges against Eichmann, he said, the impartiality of all three judges was cast in doubt.

CHALLENGES LEGALITY

The heavy - jowled lawyer then put Germany on also challenged the legality of Eichmann's abduction from his life of hiding in Argentina and the retroactive anti-Nazi law under which he is being tried.

As the defence arguments petered out in German, Eichmann sat between two heavy-eyed Israeli guards, his pale face occasionally twitching with nervousness.

The former Gestapo officer watched intently through horn-rimmed glasses as his lawyer maintained he was "free of guilt."

Eichmann, head of the infamous Nazi department for Jewish affairs, was being prosecuted for things he had been drawn into by the Nazi state, Servatius argued.

The German state should be responsible for the consequences of the actions of the Nazi regime, the lawyer said.

CANNOT ATONE

"The accused cannot atone for the death of a large part of a people or for deeds committed by others.

"If there is place for moral atonement, the German state went on, "the state, which acted through the accused, should show the rest it can be absolved."

The defence submissions were made before Judge Pauli Hortean. He presided over the April 18 for preliminary hearing.

Hermann Eichmann, who lived in suburban Westmount, a wealthy district, was well-dressed for his arraignment. He appeared pale.

Prosecutor Jean Miquelon argued against bail because he said Eichmann could evade further court action by leaving the country or seeking asylum in the United Arab Republic.

READY TO LEAVE?

There was some evidence that Eichmann was getting ready to leave the country," Mr. Miquelon said. When RCMP arrested him, he was carrying in his home a steamship ticket was found in his pocket.

Adenauer Flies To U.S. for Talks With Kennedy

BONN (AP) — Chancellor Konrad Adenauer left by plane for the United States today en route to talks with President Kennedy about the future of the Atlantic alliance.

The 85-year-old chancellor is due in Washington tonight. Three meetings with President Kennedy are scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday.

Talking to reporters Monday night, Adenauer made clear that North Atlantic Treaty Organization problems will be the chief topic in his discussions with the president.

The chancellor said the United States must exercise greater leadership in NATO to stress the Western alliance before the West can hope to talk effectively about centralized disarmament with Russia.

Adenauer indicated he still favors the Eisenhower administration's proposal to make NATO a fourth nuclear power but that he will not press for it if there is any hope for agreement with the Russians.

"I can understand that the new administration is making serious efforts to determine if the Russians really want to negotiate," Adenauer said. "But I can also imagine that at such a stage the burning of NATO into a fourth nuclear power might be postponed."

He said he was confident that President Kennedy will provide the strong leadership necessary in NATO.

"There is no reason why our discussions will not be good and fruitful," Adenauer said, noting that basic U.S. foreign policy has remained the same since the Truman administration.

"Kennedy's policies are even more out in sign because the East-West conflict has become stronger."

He said the West's biggest mistake in the last 10 years has been to give in to Soviet pressures and that this must stop.

The two government chiefs also are expected to discuss the future of Berlin and European trade matters.

ACCUSED DENIED BAIL ON CHARGE OF SPYING

Polish Immigrant Held at Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — A handsome Polish immigrant, described by his employers as a brilliant hydraulics engineer, has been arrested by RCMP and charged with spying for a foreign power, presumably Russia.

Tomasz Biernacki, 37, was refused bail Monday after being charged when he appeared before Judge Paul Hortean. He will be remanded to April 18 for preliminary hearing.

Biernacki, who lived in a modest flat in a private home in suburban Westmount, a wealthy district, was well-dressed for his arraignment. He appeared pale.

Prosecutor Jean Miquelon argued against bail because he said Biernacki could evade further court action by leaving the country or seeking asylum in the United Arab Republic.

UN Political Body Condemns Apartheid

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — A call for world - wide pressure against South Africa's racial policies won near-unanimous approval Monday in the 99-member United Nations special political committee.

The committee issued a double condemnation of apartheid and colonialism in passing two resolutions that represented the harshest UN attack on South Africa. Only France at first time received no comfort, from the Commonwealth on a crucial vote.

South Africa's recent decision to withdraw from the Commonwealth was noted frequently during debate and such action caused renewed speculation on whether the country might also decide to withdraw from the UN.

In South Africa, Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd refused to answer Monday night when an opposition leader in the South African Parliament asked whether the government plans to remain in the UN.

Moscow Officials Keep Tight Lips On Rumor Man Is Put Into Space

MOSCOW (AP) — Moscow's broadcasters is keeping a tight lip—to Western newspaper men at least — concerning widespread rumors that Russia has launched a man into space.

A foreign ministry spokesman said about midnight Monday night, he had no information on the subject. Scientists were expected momentarily to announce they had won the astronaut race.

"When there is such information," a spokesman said, "you will hear about it on the radio and see it in the newspapers."

Communist newspaper men who have news sources closer to the government than do most Western correspondents, acted as if a big announcement was expected. They apparently had been advised to on board will soar into space."

FACES SPY CHARGES — Thomasz Biernacki, 37, an electrical engineer who came to Canada from Poland a year ago as a landed immigrant, was charged in a Montreal court with spying for an unidentified foreign power. Here he sits in the prisoner's box, guarded by a Provincial Police constable. He was ordered held without bail pending his preliminary hearing. (CP Wirephoto).

Federal financial assistance to Canada's major railway to relieve them and freight shippers of burdens created by outmoded obligations.

Subsidies totalling $661,000,000 in 1961 and shrinking to a final $12,400,000 in 1965 to the CNR and CPR on unprofitable passenger runs.

An annual fund of up to $12,000,000 to cover rail "rationalization" costs during a 15-power regulated program of abandoning uneconomic branch lines.

An estimated $22,300,000 annual subsidy on movement of Prairie export grain under the low Crowsnest rates so long as it is carried by rail at a loss.

Federal payment of all free transportation granted by the railways to public officials, at an estimated $6,000,000 a year.

Description of the post-war practice of across-the-board freight rate increases as self-defeating for the carriers and inequitable for shippers still dependent on the railways.

Future freight rate increases related more specifically to cost increases and authorized by the board of transport commissions "in such a way that no shipper is obligated to bear more than his fair share of increased railway costs."

Maximum rate limits to protect so-called "captive" freight-shipments largely dependent on the railways.

A transitional period during which a new philosophy of competition in transport can be introduced without disruption.

No particular form of transport to be singled out as an instrument of national policy.

Regional transport assistance to be available on a non-discriminatory basis to all carriers.

Best use of all transport media — with railways changing into efficient, competitive mainline carriers while trucks become "feeder" operations in place of many branch lines.

U.S. Indicts Batista's Aide For Expedition Against Cuba

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Rolando Masferrer, one of ousted Cuban president Fulgencio Batista's most controversial aides, was indicted by a federal grand jury Monday on charges of violating the U.S. Neutrality Act by sending a military expedition against the Cuban government of Fidel Castro.

A Key West, Fla., five American and a Canadian—George Baidgett, 38, of Dawson Creek, B.C. — claimed that they had been duped by Masferrer into stealing a Cuban gunboat in Nassau, Bahamas, last June 29. One American said the crews they were told to help led them into the hands of the U.S. border patrol. The six are in jail.

In the Masferrer grand jury indictment, six other Cubans and one American were named as co-conspirators with Masferrer but not as defendants. They were accused of outfitting an expedition that met with disaster on the north coast of Cuba last Oct. 4.

A total of 27 men were in the landing force. A few died in battle with Castro troops but most of them were captured. Ten of them, including three Americans, were shot by firing squads and the rest were sentenced to long prison terms.

Named in the indictment as co-conspirators with Masferrer were Ferria Paren, a Masferrer lieutenant killed in the abortive attempt, Julio Fernandez Freyre, Anselmo Allegroy, Frank Joseph Williams, Horace Cantaren, Santiago Alvarez and a man whose last name was given as Cartaya.

The indictment named Masferrer, Trevejo and Feria as the main organizers of the expedition. Masferrer was accused of soliciting $2,000 from Allegro, who served in the Cuban Senate with Masferrer under Batista.

M.P. CENSURES FARMERS WHO EAT MARGARINE

Minister Says More Advertising Needed

OTTAWA (CP) — A Progressive Conservative MP from Saskatchewan says some dairy farmers who complain about Canada's mounting butter surpluses themselves eat butter substitutes.

R. R. Southam, Moose Mountain, said in the Commons Monday that "this does not just seem to be fair"—particularly when organized dairy producers ask the government for subsidies to keep them in the butter business.

"I think there is a trend on the part of the agricultural public toward a greater consumption of vegetable oils and an indifference toward butter consumption," he said.

W. Harold Hicks (PC—Fraser Valley) said something should be done to advertise butter "rather than to have a subsidy" as one of the causes of heart disease."

MINISTER AGREES

Agriculture Minister Alvin Hamilton agreed that there should be an increase in butter advertising.

Parliament was being asked to vote $200,000 for this purpose Monday when it considered supplies with the advertising of the margarine producers.

"I think the (butter) producers will have to consider changing their advertising program and instead of setting aside an amount each June for this purpose they will have to do over a monthly basis," Mr. Hamilton said.

William H. A. Thomas (PC—Middlesex West) called for the introduction of a national dairy policy to help stabilize the Ca-

Labor Problems Cloud Opening Of Shipping

TORONTO (CP) — The first ship from overseas is scheduled to arrive here next week but labor problems, a truck - loading dispute and increased cargo handling charges are a cloud over the start of Toronto outlook.

Negotiations are on a stevedoring companies and the International Longshoremen's Association (ILA) have reached through final stages of conciliation and talks are awaiting the board report.

Stevedores and truckers are preparing to go into conference to discuss charges to be enforced for part-the-tailgate loading of trucks. In other years stevedores have often helped load trucks at no charge although the contract called for cargo to be delivered only to the tailgate.

The Canadian Great Lakes deep sea committee announced that effective July 1 a terminal charge of 50 cents a ton will be imposed on cargo moving in or through public sheds at Toronto and Hamilton.

First Day of Macmillan's Ottawa Visit Proves Heavy With Formality

The first full day of the British leader's 23½ - hour visit here was heavy with formality.

He received the freedom of the city from Mayor Charlotte Whitton; attended a luncheon given by British High Commissioner Sir Saville Garner, a 6 o'clock reception held by Governor-General Roland Michener, and dinner given by Governor-General and Mrs. Michener. Formal talks with Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

The talks took place in Mr. Diefenbaker's office in the morning and were reported to have covered a wide range of world affairs, including Laos and the Congo, the present troublespots. Informants said they were in broad agreement on how to approach peace-

Should Scrap Non-Profit Lines Says Commission

Govt. to Act Quickly To Avert May 16 Strike

OTTAWA (CP) — A new multi - million - dollar system of subsidizing railroads for Canada's major railways has been proposed by the MacPherson royal commission on transportation.

If implemented by the government, the subsidy would provide $97,300,000 for the CNR and CPR this year. By 1965, the assistance would be cut to $87,300,000, and by 1976 it could drop to about $2,000,000.

The payments, approaching what it costs the two major railways to operate for a month, were recommended in the first volume of a three - volume report from the six - man commission that spent 23 months investigating the trends of transport in Canada.

The commissioners were not unanimous in all their recommendations. Three had some reservations about a subsidy proposed for export grain shipments, but they supported other proposals.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker told 15,000 Commons listeners without saying what the government intends to do about its recommendations:

MAY ACT QUICKLY

However, it is expected to act quickly on the report in a bid to avert a country - wide railway strike threatened for May 16.

Some 111,000 non - operating railwaymen had planned to strike last Dec. 3, but Parliament intervened to thwart the walkout. It imposed a six-month cooling off period, pending the MacPherson report and its remedies for the railways.

The report, however, did not refer specifically to the labor dispute or the strike threat.

In a footnote, it said that the Productivity Council — a new 11 - member federal agency that includes CPR President N. R. Crump — might be "well adapted" to look at the productivity of labor on the railways and the efficiency of rail operations generally.

Aim of the federal payments, the MacPherson report says, would be to lift a burden of past railway policies. It said these penalties, rather than government regulations, are chiefly responsible for part-the-tailgate loading of trucks. In other years stevedores have often helped load trucks at no charge although the contract called for cargo to be delivered only to the tailgate.

The Canadian Great Lakes deep sea committee announced that effective July 1 a terminal charge of 50 cents a ton will be imposed on cargo moving in or through public sheds at Toronto and Hamilton.

Parliament At a Glance

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Monday, April 10

A report recommending a new system of federal government subsidies to Canada's major railways was tabled in the Commons.

The first volume of the report of the MacPherson royal commission on transportation proposed a subsidy program starting at $97,300,000 this year to help the railways streamline themselves to meet competition.

Ezhart Regier (CCF — Burnaby-Coquitlam) said the government is forgetting that there are other types of farming in Canada in uncalled-for catering to the wants of wheat growers.

Agriculture Minister Alvin Hamilton advised Mr. Regier to think over what he had said in his Commons statements, saying him the task of showing where the CCF member was strong in ignorance.

J. W. Pickersgill (L — Bonavista-Twillingate), in day - long debate on agriculture department spending estimates, accused the agriculture minister of building up a huge propaganda machine "with the sole purpose of political self-glorification."

Trade Minister Diefenbaker, answering Opposition Leader Pearson, appeared to rule out any possibility that Canada will abrogate its trade agreements with South Africa.

Tuesday, April 11

The Commons meets at 2:30 p.m. to continue debate on agriculture department estimates; the Senate is adjourned until Tuesday, April 25.

B.C. Woman Doctor Grows Cancer Cells in Laboratory

VANCOUVER — The fight against cancer has put one British Columbia researcher in the scientific vanguard of the battle.

Dr. Nellie Auersperg, 51-year-old cytopathologist at the B.C. Cancer Institute here, is one of few people in the world-wide cancer crusade who is being purposefully used to cancer cells.

With the help of a $5,250 grant from the National Cancer Institute of Canada, Dr. Auersperg is doing her utmost to keep such cells happy and thriving.

"Dr. Auersperg," commented Isa of the NCI referees in announcing the 1961 grant, "appears to have made considerable progress in the short time with a modest budget."

Her grant, like others totalling $1,216,040 being given to grants 85 separate research projects in 19 Canadian universities and research institutes, will come largely from the money collected by Canadian Cancer Society volunteers during this month's campaign.

The goal of the institute's bon M.D. is an important one — the discovering how to grow living cancer cells in test tubes from a tissue specimen taken from a patient. This ability would open vast possibilities for testing new methods of treating human cancer without harming a patient.

Since cell culture have an accelerated rate of growth, the ability to grow them consistently from a tissue sample would enable doctors diagnosing a cancer to "pre-test" the malignant cells in culture to determine the most effective kind of treatment for the patient.

Dr. Auersperg's task is fraught with difficulties. Knowledge of the "inner working" of cancer cells" is still in its infancy. Only a few strains of cancer cells so far have been grown in culture, in her own project, started about a year ago, Dr. Auersperg has had encouraging early success. Out of 16 attempts, tempts to start a cell colony from tissue taken from the cervical cancer of hospital patients, she has had five growing strains.

WITCH'S BREW

Her recipe for a medium in which the cells will grow is so exotic that Dr. Auersperg admits that "it's a cooking like a witch's brew." In addition to basic salts and sugars and amino acids, it contains such things as serum from newborn calves and an extract from dissected cancerblical cords. She plans to try other things, such as rat bone marrow, Vitamin A and insulin.

Among the observations made of her growing cancer cells, Dr. Auersperg is able to note definite variations in chromosome patterns from normal cells. Chromosomes (6 to a normal cell) are the basic units of the cell's nucleus and give it its reproductive identity. In one of her strains of cultured cells, there are only 44 chromosomes and in the other there are 51.

"Such indications raise the possibility that we might eventually be able to correlate the behavior of cancer cells in patients from observations of their characteristics in tissue culture" she said. "In that case, a routine examination of cells before treatment would enable the laboratory to advise a doctor on the best way to proceed using time on radiation treatment or a particular patient and the immediate surgery is the best bet."

Dr. Auersperg is quick to point out that she is a long way from to go before any practical applications of her work may be developed.

"We are at the stage where bacteriologists were 100 years ago when they were trying to grow bacteria in test tubes. Here we are dealing with human cells and obviously there are so many variables which may affect the ability of the cells to grow that it is very difficult. I'm afraid we can only expect to make progress slowly. However we do feel we are on the right track."

Two Weeks Yet Before Citizens Learn Tax Rate

City taxpayers will not learn the 1961 mill rate for at least another two weeks city council was informed last evening.

With special legislation now being passed by council within the past week it was hoped that estimates would be finalized and the mill rate struck at a meeting held Monday meeting but Mayor A. M. Haig said this had been found to be impossible.

The Mayor said that he was personally very concerned over budget figures in their present form and hoped that council would give everything a close consideration.

He said there was reason to believe the city had a surplus last year but the figures would not be definitely known until the 1960 audit was completed. The report from the municipal auditors was not expected to be done before mid-May.

The report from the municipal auditors was not expected to be done before mid-May.

He said the budget should not be struck until the audit was received.

The original grant request for $25,000 was placed before council some time ago.

Two weeks ago if motion was on the agenda to give a grant of $5,000. Amendments to give grants of $25,000 and $10,000 over a five-year period were defeated, whereupon the original motion for $5,000 was withdrawn.

Minister's Life Subject of Talk To Rotary Club

TRENTON — At last night's meeting of the Trenton Rotary Club, Rev. J. T. Irwin said that the life of a minister was one of the most wonderful and inspiring that any man could attain to, but was, on the other hand, one of the most difficult careers he could undertake.

He said that the conception of the life of a minister was gradually changing and that, generally speaking, it was no longer considered a "one-day-out-of-seven" job. He said the position demanded all the time that one could give to it.

A minister must be an administrator because a church, after all, is an organization. Every day he has committee meetings throughout the week.

As a pastor, the minister must visit the congregation and discuss his people's numerous anxieties and problems with them. He said that this was a field of great interest but that it was fraught with danger.

Mr. Irwin said that preaching in the church memorials was a serious business. He said that the figures which stood out in any audience were "living souls".

Mr. Irwin said that in the ministry there was so much to be done and so little that could be accomplished. He said that if a minister felt that one person had been led a little closer to God through his work, he could not be termed a "failure."

Mr. Irwin was introduced by Grant Rathbun and thanked by Eben James, Rotary president T. A. Jackson added the thanks of the club.

Vandals Push Compressor Into Trent

Since repairs on the No. 2 highway Trent River were commenced some weeks ago, Central Bridge workmen have been using a two and a half ton air compressor.

The missing compressor, valued at close to $4,000, was found on the river bottom 15 feet below the surface. Divers went down to fix cables and this morning a crane was used to haul the compressor back onto the bridge.

The compressor had been positioned on blocks and it must had required the combined efforts of four or five persons to tip it off and roll into the river.

Extensive damage was said done the machine as a result of its drop to the river bottom.

Great Increase In Red Airlift To Laos Noted

WASHINGTON (AP)—Russia has "greatly increased" its airlift of arms and supplies to rebel forces in Laos in the last few days, official U.S. sources report.

These sources said Monday night they were unable to explain the stepped-up activity but recommended "it is not a positive response to the British request for a cease-fire."

In fact, American officials interpreted the accelerated airlift as more of a rebuff to the British proposal which carries U.S. backing. The proposal called for an immediate cease-fire followed by an international conference on the Laos crisis.

City Bus Deficit Was $10,128

The Belleville Transit Commission had an operating deficit of $10,128 during 1960 city council was informed yesterday.

The amount was made known by city finance committee chairman Alderman W. E. Jarvah who tabled a recommendation authorizing a deficit payment of the above amount to the Transit Commission.

Council neither discussed nor questioned the amount which was passed without comment.

Transport Commissioner Ted Schwab said today that a complete financial statement and report of the 1960 city-owned bus lines operations would be available by the weekend.

Although it was the original intention of the controlling fathers to raze the century-old structure a portion of the former Hastings County court house may be put into use as a city police headquarters.

The matter has already been discussed between police department heads and county officials but yesterday council authorized appointment of a special committee to make further investigation.

Police officials are of the opinion that with minor alterations the old courthouse building could provide adequate police quarters.

The council committee to make further investigation was not named by Mayor A. M. Hall last evening, but it has been suggested it may be wise to appoint the chairman of the Board of Police Commission to the committee.

Council Concurs in Motion Against Fixed Assessments

Belleville city council last night concurred in a city of Peterborough resolution asking the Ontario Legislature to remove any authority now given municipalities to grant fixed assessments to industrial or commercial enterprises.

The Peterborough resolution said the granting of fixed assessments by municipalities leads itself to undue unfairness against the public interest and could result in unfair competition between municipalities in the location of industries.

Unfair competition could prove costly to the municipal taxpayers and could also be against the best interests of industries concerned ,it was claimed.

Alderman Robert Temple said he approved of the resolution. "If all municipalities held to it."

However, if the request was not complied to by the Legislature, he would not like to see Belleville restricted.

4 Teen-Agers Get Wanderlust, Girl Returns

Apparently the result of spring wanderlust, no less than four teenagers have been reported missing in the city during the past week. They all apparently set out separately.

A girl reported missing four days ago returned home yesterday.

One of the missing boys is a 17-year-old who has been missing from home for a week, while another 18-year-old boy, still attending high school, was seen hitch-hiking a ride out of the city.

Another 15-year-old boy has been reported missing several times previously.

Police are not alarmed over the disappearances and are quite convinced the missing boys will again turn up.

Will Have to Pay If City Cleans Private Sewers

Belleville residents in the future are going to have to pay their own shot when the city public works department finishes and rods sewers on private property.

In the past the practice has been for the works department to give three such services, free during each year but City Manager J. R. Reynolds has pointed out that the authority under the Municipal Act for the city to do work on private property.

When laterals on city property are required to be rodded and flushed the cost will be a municipal responsibility.

The growers of Alberta, Manitoba, Southwestern Ontario and Quebec were having a very difficult time and the Ontario Growers were especially hard hit.

Mr. Thomas said growers were suggesting a quarter of a cent a pound for a stabilization fund to establish the industry in a sound position.

He said he made a plea for acreage facilities for Ontario wheat producers in the amount of $10 from the $50 in the deposit needed for loans from the farm loan corporation.

ACCUSES GOVERNMENT

"Erhart Regier (CCF — Burnaby - Coquitlam) accused the government of deserting parity and persuading many leading agricultural spokesmen to abandon the principle of parity of income for Canadian agriculture in relation to other producers.

The government, Mr. Regier said, pays attention only to wheat farmers and forgets that there are other types of farming in Canada.

Mr. Hamilton described Mr. Regier's statements as "hodge podge." He suggested that the member read over his own speech, think over what he had said "and save me the unhappy task of exposing the depths of ignorance" which he said Mr. Regier had displayed.

Elliott Urges Local Labor Get Preference

Specification that as much local labor as possible be used in the construction of the city's new sewage disposal and connecting sewers, should go into any contract signed by the city.

This is the view of Alderman Walter Elliott who yesterday said that the use of all local labor possible in the project would be of some help in the local unemployment picture.

Several councillors doubted the value of such a request in that it might be difficult to implement.

Another councillor said a similar request was at variance to the city's books.

Alderman Lewis Ellis, chairman of public works, said the city would be signing the contract but these matters would be approved by the Ontario Water Resources Commission and the Municipal Board.

Council gave three readings to a by-law covering the preliminary agreement respecting the sewage disposal and the installed plans for all phases of the project will have to be approved before tenders can be called.

Request Steps To Curb Spread Of Elm Disease

Although there is still no report of the disease having spread to the Belleville district, Belleville city council yesterday endorsed a city of Toronto resolution asking the provincial government to undertake immediate measures to curb further spread of Dutch elm disease.

The Board of Parks management requested council to endorse the resolution.

Alderman George Wishart, laboratory technician at the local Entomological Laboratory said the disease was spread by insects. To check spread of the disease, he said it was essential that elm logs or slabs from infected areas should not be moved to non-infected districts.

"There is not much risk in this area, but the resolution is a good idea," he said.

A Bold Appointment

Monopolistic tendencies in the British press are to be investigated.

That, in itself, is not startling news. What may raise some eyebrows — what certainly would occasion real surprise if a comparable incident were to occur on this continent — is the background of the man who has been chosen by Prime Minister Harold Macmillan to head this investigation.

He is Baron Shawcross, better known as Sir Hartley.

A tweedy ex-lawyer, with upper crust manners and a rich income, Baron Shawcross would hardly seem the type to make the blood of press lords run cold. But appearances are deceptive.

Sir Hartley has been a life-long Labor supporter.

That, in itself, does not make him unique. There have been other Labor lords and knights — Sir Stafford Cripps, for example. There have been other wealthy socialists — George Bernard Shaw to name a famous example.

What does seem passing strange is that this Laborite, who was attorney-general in the first post-war Labor government and who greeted the Laborites' rise to power with the jubilant cry "We are the masters now!" — that such a man should be chosen by a Conservative Government to investigate charges of a monopoly in such a political explosive section of the economy as the control of the nation's press.

One can only conclude that this appointment speaks highly of the integrity of both Prime Minister Macmillan and of Baron Shawcross. A prime minister who did not wish to learn the truth, even if it was politically disadvantageous to him, would not name a political opponent to such a post — and even the most upright prime minister would not name such an opponent if he had complete faith in the man's honesty of purpose and ability to overcome any prejudice which might flow from his personal political convictions.

Prime Minister Macmillan, of course, stands to reap some dividends from this choice. Nobody will be able to accuse him of covering up the real facts for political reasons. If the press gets a clean bill of health, there will be no whisperings about whitewashing.

But it is a bold move which is seldom duplicated on this side of the Atlantic, either in Canada or in the U.S.

A Question of Viewpoint

Harold A. Klinck of Oldcastle, president of the Ontario School Trustees and Ratepayers department of the Ontario Educational Association, has voiced objection to continual harping at young people to get a better education in order that they may make a better living.

He declares this is a very narrow view and that young people are basically idealists and should be encouraged to educate themselves so they can serve their fellow men more efficiently.

We wonder whether Mr. Klinck's objection has not been outmoded by events. It is deplorable when the value of an education is translated into terms of personal gain, when students are led to believe that the important thing about attending school is that it will enhance their own income. But more and more today this advice is being given a different twist, based on developments in our society, and it can truthfully be said that today it is necessary for young people to attend school for a longer period if they are to earn anything at all.

There are two ways of looking at this advice. It can be considered from the selfish angle. But it is also true that what is being said here is that today's youth, if they are to be of any value to tomorrow's society, must acquire more knowledge than was demanded in the past. This is important not merely for them, to make a better living for themselves, but also for them to assist their fellow citizens in making a better living for the community as a whole, with the community in this sense not being limited by even national frontiers.

Despite everything which can be said, and truthfully, against a purely materialistic outlook, it remains true that a man's, or woman's, first duty, to himself or herself and to society, is to possess the ability to earn his or her own living. Failure to obtain sufficient education to attain this objective works hardship not only on the individual but on the community as a whole.

There is no censorship in our country. We are permitted to print whatever we like. But our people are not permitted to listen to bad words of journalists who are poisoning relations between our peoples.—Alexei Adzhubei, son-in-law of Khrushchev and editor of Izvestia.

A Revolution Betrayed

Montreal Gazette

The United States government has published an important document, setting forth its interpretation of the history of the Cuban revolution. Mr. Khrushchev has announced his participated directly in the writing of the pamphlet.

The document is not lacking in inspiration. It is a partisan pamphlet supporting the views of the Kennedy administration. Nevertheless, it is an intelligent analysis of the Cuban revolution. In addition, its origin is enough to guarantee its importance.

The theme of the pamphlet is a revolution betrayed" — betrayed to Communists and Communist sympathizers. The theme is best summarized in the rhetorical statement, however in italics: "Fidel Castro betrayed the revolution." Nor are the original objectives of the Cuban revolution — "a free and democratic Cuba dedicated to social and economic justice" — stigmatized. They are lauded. It is the betrayal of these objectives, the betrayal of the revolution, that is the document challenges and condemns.

Not long after Castro came to power he turned against the moderates, the democrats, in the original objectives of the revolution. Of the 19 members of the first post-revolutionary cabinet, about two-thirds have either been imprisoned, exiled or executed by Communists. The same fate has overtaken numerous other anti-Communists who fought in the mountains, in the universities in the cities.

It is not enough how Castro accomplished all this. In fact, this is one of the weaknesses of the document. It does not explain how his betrayal of the revolution by Fidel Castro and the moderates did not overthrow Castro, or how much popular support Castro had in his betrayal. In any event, a second revolution took place that overthrew Batista and the group of men to power.

Of these men, Castro's brother, Raul Castro, who had been "active in the international Communist movement"; Ernesto Guevara, who "organized pro-Communists in Guatemala and Mexico"; and a number of others with well-established Communist connections.

It is stated that through these men, the Communists were steadily gained control of the government and have spread their influence to all aspects of Cuban life. The governing bureaucracy, the judiciary, the press, the trade unions and education are listed to have been virtually delivered into their hands.

Communist emphasis is given to the establishment of close ties with the Soviet bloc countries. It is stated that at the beginning of 1960 only two per cent of Cuba's trade was with the Communist bloc, and that the figure is now 70 per cent. Since the middle of 1960, 30,000 tons of arms have been obtained, mostly from the Soviet bloc, 930,000. The Cuban ground forces are now the second largest in the Western Hemisphere.

This is a formidable indictment. Yet, it has been clear for many months that Castro was betraying the original Cuban revolution. It is stated that at the beginning of 1960 only two per cent of Cuba's trade was with the Communist bloc, and that the figure is now 70 per cent. Since the middle of 1960, 30,000 tons of arms have been obtained, mostly from the Soviet bloc, 930,000. The Cuban ground forces are now the second largest in the Western Hemisphere.

Finally, the document denounces the Cuban dictatorship, calls for it to break from the Communists and "encourages the Cuban people to overthrow it," but it does not, the document provides, say no course of action.

The document may, however, deter other Latin American countries from associating with Castro. This may be its main purpose to reveal to Latin Americans the pitfalls they should avoid.

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

There are only two kinds of driving in traffic — Defensive Driving and Offensive Driving. If you don't learn to drive defensively, the chances are excellent that sooner or later you will end up as a statistic.

It is this art of defensive driving that the police are impressed upon the motoring public. Most of the safety drives, the warnings, the appeals, are as little listened to as the roentgenists at a radio convention.

I would not place more than 10 per cent of motorists in the category of skilled defensive drivers — and most of those are overland truck drivers, bus drivers, and others to whom driving is a professional job, not a pastime.

The other 90 per cent are either hostile, indifferent, or ignorant. Not one can be accused of a man that he is a poor driver than you can tell him he has no sense of humor, and no appeal for success. In a recent poll, only five per cent of male motorists self-ranked themselves as "below average" in driving ability. Obviously, this is an absurd and dangerous delusion.

There is a splendid chapter in Ken Purdy's book, "The Wonderful World of Cars," in which the author, an expert in the motoring field, describes his attitudes, impressions, precautions and reactions with simply driving from his house to a store not far away.

He is a defensive driver in the best sense of the word — regarding the road or as an arena filled with beasts who are unpredictable and more likely to do the wrong thing than the right thing. The calm assumption that every other driver is a fiend is forced upon the lives of many a professional driver.

The inside story of safety campaigns and slogans is that they always seem to be addressing themselves to the "other person," not to us. Of course, we are "careful" drivers, we are not "reckless;" of course we aren't "drunken drivers." But the plain fact is that the vast majority of fatal accidents are not caused by drunken or drunken drivers, but by ordinary decent citizens who don't understand the art of defensive driving.

I recognize, and have long stated, that the whole traffic safety problem is tied up with some deep emotional drives and needs; but beyond that murky realm, on the technical and rational levels alone, we must find some way to get across the message that "being careful" without skill only means that you may be a well-meaning victim rather than an accessory before the fact of death.

Easter: 'A Christian festival in commemoration of the Resurrection of Christ" will be observed throughout the Christian world on April 13. It is not an anniversary, for the Church of Easter jumps around the calendar like Mr. Easter rabbit. Only twice in the present century will Easter Day fall on April 13th as it did in 1941 and 1952.

The Christian Easter is set by ecclesiastical authorities as "the first Sunday after the full moon which happens upon or next after the 21st of March. With the pagans, "Eostre" meant a rebirth over the arrival of Spring. With the Jews it is a commemoration of the Passover; with the Christians, the Crucifixion and the Resurrection.

Dog Lover Answers Indignant Writers

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

Have been reading the various letters in your paper lately, concerning the dogs in this city and they are the limit.

Also, couldn't help but wonder if maybe those so ready to criticize the S.P.C.A. haven't how to do his duty wouldn't maybe resent the same treatment from some others of how to carry out their own duties. Also wonder what one dog lover would do with all these dogs if he did pick them all up. The animal shelter at the pale grounds certainly is not large enough to confine any great number of animals. Have you ever driven by and seen half a dozen dogs roaming in a space with not enough room for one to manoeuver? Some of them look really hungry too. And, on occasions, you'll see he just defecated on the pavement. One of my well-to-do friends has a collar full of thousands of dollars worth of machine tools. The cellar is like a laboratory rather than a machinist's playroom. It is immaculately clean and when I was giving him turning out some beautiful applewood priests for his provided between layers.

Sausage can be made safe, so far trichinae are concerned, by heat as well as by cold and it can be done quicker. You can be sure that trichinae are destroyed if the meat is heated to at least 137 degrees — all the way through. You've cooked steaks, just enough to know that it is perfectly possible to burn a steak black on the outside, yet leave it red and raw but raw inside.

Remember this when cooking sausage. Be sure it is cooked all the way through, and the trichinae will be harmless.

(All of the above applies, of course, only to trichinae. It does not have anything to do with refrigerating meat to prevent spoilage. That's a wholly different matter.)

"Dear Dr. Molner :Why should Vitamins B1, B2, B12 and D cause such reactions as a rash on the stomach and slight dizziness and nerves if given by hypodermic" — Mrs. R. W."

"Because sensitivities of individuals vary variable! For example, some people are allergic to eggs, others to pieces of cake or cookie, containing eggs and they break out in a rash, or whatnot. Yet some people these same people can tough eggs as an egg, hamburger without suffering any consequences. With others, it can be the opposite.

Hence with vitamins, or other materials. Most people are allergice reaction if they are injected by needle, yet may cause no reaction if taken by mouth. (The vitamins listed above are best we call, collectively, the "B-complex vitamins." They are very useful ones.)

How to Freeze Sausages In Order to Kill Trichinae

By Joseph C. Molner, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Will freezing in a frozen food locker make home-made sausage safe for eating? Will exposure to cold kill the trichinae which may be present? — N. L."

I don't know how many people make homemade sausage, but it's certainly not a lost art.

Just freezing in a frozen food locker" is not necessarily sufficient to kill the trichinae these tiny mites that are found in pork sometimes, and are the cause (if they are not killed) of the disease called trichinosis.

It takes more than just "freezing." We have to go to a lower temperature.

And we have to make sure that the cold reaches every part of the meat for an adequate length of time.

As we all know, it takes time for cold to penetrate. In below-zero weather we'll find ice on a river — but the ice may only be an inch thick. By the next day, if the cold continues, the ice will be three feet thick. And after a long spell of zero weather the ice may be a foot or two thick — and under that, the water is not frozen. The cold hasn't had time to penetrate that far.

It's the same way with homemade sausage in a freezer. It takes time for the cold to penetrate all the way through. Yet unless we give the cold time to work all the way through the meat, some of the trichinae may survive and cause illness when we eat the meat.

Keep at 5 degrees for 20 days, or keep at 10 below zero for 10 days, or keep at 20 below zero for six days.

These temperatures and times are sufficient only if:

2. A few inches of space is

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

DARE TO TEAR DOWN

Growth is an acknowledgment of imperfect knowledge.

If we didn't realize and admit our errors and ignorance at times, we would never grow. Every important step forward is followed by improvements.

We are constantly erasing from our lives that which is of no further use to us.

I was glad through a section of New York City recently where entire blocks of slum areas had been torn down in order that new buildings, dedi-cated to the public, might be erected. Scores of old buildings have had to be razed. But in their place will rise one of the beautiful Lincoln Square pro-ject housing many fine opera houses, ballet and educational institutions.

Dare to tear down.

Over and over the lovemotor tears down, only to rebuild along newer lines from ideas formu-lated by the newer generation.

As we look over these chem-acters of the past, we are filled with the need that is there for greater improvements. We must tear down much to make way for better traits and truer principles of conduct.

We are not satisfied. This means stagnation.

Let ideas guide you. But keep urges back of them. Don't be afraid to drop worn out ideas.

The real builder is not afraid to tear down old ideas, old habits, old methods, old notions or feelings when it comes to tearing down old structures. He sees only the possibility of something more durable and useful rising in their place.

But when you tear down, al-ways be sure you have something better to put in the place of that which you demolish!

'Disappointed' With Report Says Manitoba Premier

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Premier Duff Roblin of Manitoba said Monday he is "disappointed with the majority report" in the first volume of the MacPherson royal commission on transportation.

However, the Progressive Conservative premier said a full statement can only be made when the entire report is available and can be studied.

The first volume of the commission's three-volume report, recommending a new system of federal government subsidies to Canada's major railways, was tabled in the Commons Monday by Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

The subsidies, starting at $97,000,000 this year and dropping to about half that amount are largely self - liquidating. They are set in a new philosophy of transportation in which competition among railways, trucks, planes, ships and pipelines is taken into account.

WANT TO STUDY

Many officials, asked to comment on the report, declined to do so until they have had a chance to study it in detail.

Spokesmen for the Canadian National and the Canadian Pacific railways said they had no comment until the report had been studied.

Premier Roblin said he was disappointed because the commission has disregarded the substantial benefits enjoyed by the CPR over the years from the Crowsnest Pass agreement of 1897.

In the case of the CNR, the premier said, the proposed subsidy on grain is nothing more than a transfer of accounts because CNR deficits are met from the federal treasury.

GIVES LIBERAL VIEW

Lionel Chevrier, former Liberal transport minister, said it will be impossible for Parliament to consider the commission's partial report intelligently if the government tries to apply it as a solution to the railway strike scheduled for May 16.

"It is obvious that the recommendations of the report cannot be put into effect overnight," Mr. Chevrier told the Ottawa West Liberal Association.

"Parliament will be impossible to consider it intelligently before that date."

Mr. Chevrier, who now serves as Liberal opposition critic on transportation, said the report amounts to a whole reorganization of the country's railway system.

In Victoria, British Columbia Attorney - General Robert Bonner said the report "reads like a catalogue" of many points contained in his government's brief to the commission.

He said that in moving his evidence the commission brought down "a major recommendations in the face of considerable criticism from the railways and the federal government.

He said the most notable B.C. viewpoint endorsed by the commission was its criticism of across-the-board freight-rate increases as a "self-defeating" for the railways and "inequitable" for shippers.

WHEAT POOL HAPPY

A. T. Baker, general manager of the Alberta Wheat Pool, said in Calgary the commission's recommendations appear "generally satisfactory."

"A team of experts spent several months preparing a lengthy submission of facts and figures and it appears that most of the recommendations in that submission have been accepted by the commission," he said.

Edward Nelson, president of the Farmers' Union of Alberta, said in Drumheller he is surprised at the amount of federal financial aid since a report conducted by the commission for rail shipment of Western Canada's export grain.

Premier Smallwood of Newfoundland said he wants to study the report further before commenting.

if not all — uneconomic branch lines by 1975.

In the end, the report forecast, the railways would be chiefly main - line freight shippers, charging rates that reflect their inherent cost advantages, without the heavy weight of past obligations inhibiting their competitive ability and burdening their users.

PROPOSES SUBSIDIES

1. A five - year payment plan starting at $97,000,000 in 1961, dropping to a final grant of $13,400,000 in 1965 — on unprofitable passenger services.

2. A 15 - year fo.t, providing for $15,000,000 annually, out of which the railways could claim compensation for uneconomic branch lines kept in service while communities or industries prepare for their eventual abandonment.

3. Annual payments to offset any Canada's export grain crop that may have to be shipped from the level existing in 1960. On the basis of 1958 figures, this would amount to about $23,300,000 a year.

Three commissioners — businessman Herbert Anscomb of Victoria, lawyer Andrew W. Balch of Ottawa and forestry engineer Rene Gobeil of Quebec City — signed a minority report on the proposed subsidy on grain shipments.

Mr. Anscomb and Mr. Balch favored an increase in the present $20,000,000 a year grain trade conditions improve.

Mr. Gobeil said the subsidy set by statute at the low level first instituted in 1899 under the Crowsnest Pass Agreement.

Mr. Gobeil, an easterner described by Mr. Anscomb, unequivocally contended the railways had not proved they were losing money on the grain traffic. He also argued that the Crowsnest agreement itself is a binding contract on the CPR.

The report is framed around the concept that competition is here to stay in the transport industry. But the impact of competition — in keeping rates down — has been spread unevenly across Canada.

This unevenness, transmitted into higher freight rate structure, has hit hardest at shippers in the West and in the Atlantic provinces, particularly at those who are sending their products over the long haul to central Canadian markets.

In this setting, the report says, added, horizontal freight rate increases of post-war years have become self - defeating for the railways and unfair for many freight shippers.

The railways are forced to seek bigger and bigger rate blocks to apply to smaller and smaller portions of traffic.

"Thus, in what appears to be the typical process the railways find themselves, meeting competition, running faster and faster in order to stay in the same place."

To break this cycle, the commission suggests that the railways should relate their rate increases more directly to the costs of handling shipments, rather than to the traditional rate - making concepts.

SHOULD ADJUST

The board of transport commissioners, which authorizes all general rate increases, should not allow any railway to do such a way that no shipper is obliged to pay more than his fair share of increased railway costs," the report says.

Two more volumes are to come — one dealing with regional and industrial problems and the other presenting the results of a number of special economic surveys and studies initiated by the commission.

The latter reports will state the general concepts outlined in the first volume and apply them to such specific problems as the Maritimes Freight Rate Act.

Roberts Takes Hand in Issue

TORONTO (CP) — Attorney-General Roberts said Monday police in Ontario will be quick-filled to exterminate any gangs that are proved to him to be intimidating witnesses through fear.

He said he is investigating reports of a beating suffered by Max Bluestein at a Toronto taxi-stand three weeks ago but he had not received any complaints.

Numerous persons saw the beating but police have been having trouble getting any to come forward to testify, Bluestein was slugged with iron pipes and brass knuckles.

Frank Marchildon, who received six stab wounds in the fracas surrounding the beating, was arrested Monday on charges of creating a disturbance. He was ordered held without bail.

'Bughouse' Wins International Fame for Work

"It seems that what goes on at the Belleville Mineslope Research Institute (or the "bughouse" as it is regrettably known locally) is often better known in Canberra, Australia, Prague, Czechoslovakia, or Jawalpindi, India, than here in Belleville". So stated Dr. Ross Beirne, director of this Institute, in his opening remarks when he addressed the Rotary Club at its Wednesday dinner meeting, at the Hotel Quinte, yesterday afternoon.

The speaker, who was introduced by program chairman Rodney Count Miller, and thanked on behalf of the club by Rotarian Art Pearce is a native of Ireland. He gave lectures in the University of Dublin, and is the holder of five university degrees. He came to Belleville in 1955.

Dr. Beirne said the Emionomy Research Institute here is the largest establishment in the world for research on basic principles of medical control. Research is done to explain why things happen. Other research establishments can then apply these explanations to solve locally pest control problems.

HIGHLY TRAINED

For this research there is a permanent staff of 80. Thirty of these are trained research scientists, chemists, engineers, are technicians, office staff, and the like, and it may not be generally realized that it takes: as long to train a research entomologist as it does to train a medical doctor. The research group has their own problems and their individual promotions on the quality and, quantity of their publications, and research papers. Fifty or sixty such papers have been written and published, mostly in Canadian journals, but also, in journals in the United States, Great France, and elsewhere. Because of these publications, the work of the institute is internationally known, so well-known in entomological circles in fact, that the Institute is sometimes referred to as merely "Belleville".

The main function at the Belleville Institute is that of research on biological control. There are many ways of controlling pest species of insects and plants. One is to use insecticides or other chemical poisons; the other, biological control, is to increase the parasitic and predatory insects and disease, that attack and kill the pests.

The big advantage of this control method is that it is self-perpetuating. When a new natural enemy of a pest species is introduced, usually it does its job, by killing the pest, time after time, without further human intervention. However it is not a method that can be applied by an individual grower, but must be done on a national scale by experts in the subject.

THREE APPROACHES

There are three main approaches to biological control. The first is to increase the numbers of the kinds of enemies that attack the pests. The greater the number of predators, the greater or the numbers of pests that are killed, and therefore, the less the economic damage they cause. To increase the numbers of kinds of enemies a search is made throughout the world for suitable kinds. They are brought by air and are examined under strict quarantine at a similar charge, laid previously.

Much of his work is replacing broken and cracked stocks and making stocks better suited to carrying telescopic sights than the original. He has also made several special short stocks for women and boys.

He uses mostly walnut, which he buys in the Niagara Peninsula, but makes a few stocks from maple, wild cherry or rosewood. Customers may apply their own initials to their stocks.

Each stock takes him two or three days of working five or six hours a day in his tiny workshop.

He believes a properly fitted stock, tailored to the customer's own proportions, ranks in equal importance with the barrel and mechanism of a rifle or shotgun.

Handmaking, Fitting Gun Stocks Now Big Business

SMITHVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Craftsman Albert Hunter, paralyzed from the waist down and confined to a wheelchair for 36 years, has retained his love of hunting although he is unable to take an active part.

Mr. Hunter got into the business of handmaking and fitting gun stocks by degrees.

After being stricken by polio in 1924 he found he still could shoot, but it was difficult to wish handle guns in a wheelchair because they no longer fit his grip.

He fitted new stocks on his guns and they were so successful some friends asked him to do a personal fitting job on their guns. They passed on the word and his skill and now he makes about 100 stocks a year.

Belleville to other research centres in Canada to be imported against pest species. In this way about 950 million specimens have been liberated against about 80 pest species.

The second main way of applying control is to use natural enemies of pest species in the same manner as chemical insecticides. They lack the disadvantages of chemical in that they kill only the pests against which they are directed, whereas insecticides also kill many beneficial insects and thereby create new pest problems, also insects of pests do not leave residues harmful to plants, animals, or man.

The third approach is to increase the efficiency of existing natural enemies of pest species by appropriate conservation methods. These natural enemies require insects, other than pests, to feed on when the pests are temporarily absent or at low levels of density which to feed before they will lay their eggs.

At the Belleville Institute the research technicians attempt to work out and explain the mechanisms of the various approaches to biological control and the various aspects of each.

Prior to the address by the speaker, Rotarian John Deacon led in a rousing rendition of "Happy Birthday" dance, and the members joined in extending congratulations to Rotarians Arnold Campbell, Jack Ireland and T. Y. Wills who held observed birthdays during the past week. Rotarian Knox David welcomed two guests, George Wisbert and Dr. J. Barlow and also guest Rotarian August Kaiser of Picton, who received a carnation for coming the farthest distance to the meeting.

Rotarian J. McArthur, chairman of the Easter Seal campaign reported the amount of $4,135 was realized from sales but this was still $850 short of the quota.

Commission Report Shows Era of Rail Monopoly Over

OTTAWA (CP) — A new era in which railways can operate more like ordinary businesses instead of as transport authorities is foreshadowed in the report of the MacPherson Royal Commission on Transportation.

The report, tabled Monday in the Commons, spells out a general philosophy of transportation, based on the idea that a competition rather than government controls can be the chief regulator of the transport industry.

Trucks and to a lesser extent, ships, planes and pipelines, now provided an over-all transport system for Canada.

In this new era, the railways must get freedom and flexibility to shape their prices and services to meet competitive forces.

The commission summed up its so-called rationale in the field of public policy in four general conclusions:

"1. The principle of transportation in Canada should be minimized as much as possible. Government has a duty to protection of the public interest, but regulation is to be maintained should be in a reasonably equitable fashion on all carriers.

"2. The rationalization of railway plant and operations should be actively encouraged by public policy and where, for national policy reasons, it is considered necessary to retain rail operations such as passenger or branch line services, the railways should be enabled to request from public funds to cover their deficits on such services.

"3. No particular form of transport should be singled out as an instrument of national policy if any burden is involved in the performance of the function unless sufficient compensation is provided to prevent distortions in the competitive transportation market.

"4. Assistance to transportation which is designed to aid, on national policy grounds, particular shippers and particular regions should be examined for what it is and not be disguised in such a manner as to transform the industry. Moreover, whenever assistance of this kind is considered there should transportation medium it should be available on a non-discriminatory basis to all carriers."

The broad aid of public transportation policy should be to ensure—consistent with other national policy goals — that "all the various modes of transport are given a fair chance to find their proper place within a competitive system."

The report says such a policy is essential if Canada is to obtain, at a minimum cost, the most balanced and efficient transportation system which is fully adequate to meet the nation's transportation requirements.

On rate-making, the commission said:

"While we recognize the complexity of the rate-making issue, we cannot help but believe that railway resistance to the adoption of a more cost-oriented basis for rate-making is especially unrealistic since railway's degree of institutional rigidity which is out of place in the transportation environment of today."

The report suggests two additional considerations to keep in mind in the general policy. One is that there is a certain amount of traffic that will remain dependent on railways for some time to come.

The other is that there will be a period when the railways if any burden is involved in the performance of the function will have to be restored "to the proper role in the transportation structure."

security project work in the past but Bierneckl did not have access to the files. Approval for the security matter was involved in the Manicougan project.

Biernacki was charged under the Official Secrets Act. The charge said he "did unlawfully for purpose prejudicial to the safety or interests of the state obtain, collect, record and communicate to other persons sketches, plans, documents and information that is calculated to be or might be or is intended to be directly or indirectly useful to a foreign power."

The maximum penalty is 14 years in penitentiary.

RCMP said further arrests were not expected.

The arrested man's wife and daughter, 9, and Calgary relative, 7, live in Poland. Acquaintances said he intended to bring them to Canada last month but ran into passport trouble.

Biernacki first came to Canada in 1950 as a Polish delegate to the world conference on power and energy and attracted attention with a paper he delivered before returning to Poland.

The Association of Polish Engineers of Canada approached him, asked him here and found him a job with a Montreal firm.

E. Z. Silwinski, president of the association, said he personally was shocked at the situation. The association also expressed itself in a statement which added that members had chosen Canada as their adopted country because of "strong anti-Communist convictions."

The Polish Canadian here said it had never heard of Biernacki.

Neighbors said he attracted little notice. Members of the Polish community described him as "pleasant but quiet."

Fluent in Polish, Russian, German, Italian and French, Biernacki was attending, night classes to improve his English.

In Ottawa, the RCMP said it is not aware of any connection between Biernacki's arrest and the recent British spy trials.

"We're not connecting the two — at least not yet," said an RCMP spokesman.

In the Commons, the government shed no new light on the arrest.

Solicitor-General Browne, replying to opposition questions in the absence of Justice Minister Fulton, said only that a landed immigrant had been arrested in Montreal Sunday night and was arraigned in court Monday charged under the Official Secrets Act.

"Under these circumstances, I would be inappropriate to make any comment," Mr. Browne said.

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian economy registered a 3.2-per - cent expansion last year with a national production of $36,260,000,000.

The value of goods and services, estimated today by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, compared with the 1959 gross national product of $34,857,000,000.

The gain of 3.2 per cent compared with a 4-per-cent rise in national production in 1959.

Higher prices—up 1.7 per cent—accounted for some of last year's growth. The bureau estimated there was a 21-per-cent rise in the physical volume of output.

Several factors slowed down expansion: Downturns in housing and business capital investment, and a consumer spending on durable household goods, and a mid-year rundown of business inventories.

The main props to the economy were consumer spending on non-durable goods, a high level of new capital investments, and a strong showing by export industries in overseas markets.

The slower rate of growth last year followed a period of gains in income and employment.

Labor income increased by 4.2 per cent to $21,514,000,000 compared with the 1959 rise of 7.5 per cent.

Corporation profits declined 4.9 per cent to $2,733,000,000 after the sharp gains of the previous year. Profits of unincorporated businesses dipped by 5.1 per cent to $2,105,000,000.

Personal incomes last year increased by $1,600,000,000 to $27,442,000,000. Consumer spending rose by $1,400,000,000 to $23,460,000,000.

TAX BURDEN INCREASED

But the direct tax burden on Canadians increased by $275,000,000 to $2,356,000,000. Personal savings totalled $1,675,000,000—a drop of $79,000,000 from 1959.

Spending by all levels of government registered a sharp $300,000,000 increase to $6,716,000,000.

New housing expenditures fell by $258,000,000 to $1,476,000,000. Non-residential construction was $32,000,000 less at $2,587,000,000, and business spending on new machinery and equipment was down $2,000,000 at $2,586,000,000.

Total exports of goods and services rose by $261,000,000 to $6,617,000,000.

Wedding

BUNNETT — HAGGERTY

White chrysanthemums, red roses and pink and white stevenson and white wedding bells adorned the home of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Haggerty, of Stirling, Ontario, on Saturday, March 25, at 2.00 p.m. for the marriage of their daughter, Elizabeth Marlene Haggerty, to Harold James Bunnett of Belleville, R.R. 3, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cameron Bunnett. The Rev. R. J. Rooney, of Stirling, officiated at the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the lovely bride wore a white bridal gown of brocaded taffeta in street-length, with bandeau of beaded pearls and shoulder-length veil. She carried a white Bible crested with pink roses and bead-covered with satin streamers.

She was attended by Miss Ruth Gibson, of Campbellford, who was attired in street-length model taffeta dress, with matching veil, mauve accessories and carrying a bouquet of white roses.

Mr. Gordon Cameron, of Belleville, attended the bridegroom.

The reception was held in Stirling Community Centre, where the guests were received by the bride's mother, who wore printed silk in green and brown tones, with beige accessories and corsage of bronze roses. Assisting in the receiving line was the bridegroom's mother, gowned in blue lace in sheath design, with white accessories and corsage of red low rose. The bride's table was appointed in the traditional fashion with white damask linen and centred by a three-tier wedding cake adorned with pink roses, on white swan pedestals. The bridal bouquet completed the nuptial setting.

For the wedding trip to Pittsburgh, Niagara Falls and Trenton, N.J. the bride chose a royal blue sheath and matching jacket, beige accessories and corsage of pink Sweetheart roses.

Previous to her marriage the bride was the honoured guest at two miscellaneous showers, one by Miss Ruth Gibson, of Campbellford; and one at the home of the bridegroom's mother, by Mrs. Donna Lucas. At a presentation of an electric fry pan from the office staff and agents of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, of which the bride was an employee and at a presentation of a white Bible by the Burnbrae Young Peoples, and also at a shower by the bride's neighbors at the home of the bride's parents.

Christian, Missionary Alliance Church, S.S. Hold 'Family Night'

Members, parents, friends and Sunday School scholars met on Thursday evening in the upper auditorium of the Christian and Missionary Alliance Church for a "Family Night" of inspiration and fellowship, with approximately 160 present. The pastor, the Rev. Sackville Palmer, gave the invocation, and little Bobby MacKay extended the welcome.

Special music was provided by the Junior Choir, a selection which included a piano and violin duet by Miss Fern Millard and Mr. Murray Dixon; a vocal duet by Eldon and Douglas Leonard, and a number of choruses, lead by the assistant superintendent, Mr. Laverne Peet, for which lovely colored slides were used. A reading entitled, "Please Daddy, Take Me to Sunday School," was given by Linda Parks of Rossmore.

Mrs. Fred Fraser, of the Sunday School superintendent, called on Mr. Palmer for the announcements. He pointed out that there were classes for all ages; three classes for teenagers; a mixed young people's Bible class, as well as classes for the adult ladies and men. He also told of individual in the Sunday School classes that are responsible for interrupting and asking questions pertaining to the Word, which is not possible during the regular church services.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

An exceedingly interesting part of the evening was the question and answer period under the direction of the superintendent, assisted by department superintendents, Mrs. Fraser and Mr. Laverne Peet, whose questions often asked by Christian laymen, and what constitutes a Christian, what to do with God; what we believe; why should we send missionaries to the heathen and what must one do to be saved. How the Bible answers these are given by Dent from Proverbs 14:12; Titus 3:5; Hebrews 10:26; John 14:6; Matthew 28:19-20 and John 3:16; 1-12 and 3:3.

Mrs. Ida Sackville gave a brief word concerning the Home Department, which includes the sick, bereaved, aged and those caring for such who are thus unable to attend Sunday School. Quarterlies are sent regularly to the 14 Home Department members.

Special recognition was given to the 14 complete families present, and were photographed in commemoration of the occasion.

REFRESHMENTS SERVED

After the showing of a short Easter film the assembly repaired to the lower auditorium where the children were seated at long tables and the adults around the sides on folding chairs. An attractive effect was appointed by the newly erected centrepieces arranged on the food tables at the back by the ladies who adorned with pink roses, on white swan pedestals. The bridal bouquet completed the nuptial setting.

For the wedding trip to Pittsburgh, Niagara Falls and Trenton, N.J. the bride chose a royal blue sheath and matching jacket, beige accessories and corsage of pink Sweetheart roses.

'Personalities Around World' Topic at Canadian Club

Last evening the Women's Canadian Club was pleased to have at its annual business meeting Miss Anne Francis, noted lecturer on International Affairs and writer, who spoke on "Personalities Around The World." In spite of the weather conditions, there was a fine attendance of members.

Miss Francis, who was introduced by the president, Mrs. R. D. Arnott, has written many magazine articles and is the author of a pamphlet on "Statutes of Women." which was published by the Canadian Institute of International Affairs. She was also the only woman member of the Canadian delegation to UNESCO Conference in New Delhi in 1958, and has won the Women's Press Club award for broadcasts on India and Canadian prisons in 1957.

Miss Francis, in replying to Mrs. Arnott's introduction remarked how happy she was to be at the annual meeting, and that she wished to take the club with her to visit those who had made a tremendous impact on her as she travelled from place to place.

Arriving at the Ojea Airport with its tropical atmosphere, the first persons she noticed were three sitting in the shade of a tree, two women and a child, whose sages, from their appearance, ought to be well over seventy years, today and tomorrow. The older were in Moslem garb, faces practically hidden by the heavy dark veils, but their hands were uncovered, which had the appearance of days of toil in the fields, of weary days and lack of human comforts. The younger of the two was dark and handsome, without the heavy veil, while the child was clothed in a pale blue frilled outfit, as a Canadian child would be, a picture of the future.

Miss Lebanon had lunch with the Lebanese, while jets roared overhead. One woman had charge of a school of 800 children; another was looking after a private group of 30 people over there were interested in the same things as are the people of the West, and are much like Canadians. She also had lunch with the minister of health, a former disciple of Mahatma Ghandi, a Christian, who began to talk of India's health program, of its polluted water supply; only six percent being really safe of the several running in the street gutters; of the deaths from malaria, and of the lepers.

Everywhere one looks the lepers are seen, bandaged and shewls covering them; without clothing, food, shelter and no suitable food, a living death in life.

Food problems also exist because the land has lack of fertilizer and education is another problem. The people are warm-hearted, likeable human beings. Miss Francis gave an illustration of this. She met a fine looking dark-skinned man whom she thought to be in his 30's but later learned that he was 60 years old. When she asked how he managed to re-

Lady Dorothy Loved Winters In Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Lady Dorothy Macmillan sat in her former home in Ottawa Monday and reminisced about the era 40 years ago when she lived there as one of the daughters of Canada's governor - general.

Here with her husband, Prime Minister Macmillan, on a 5½-day official visit, Lady Dorothy is staying at Government House, traditional home of Canada's governor - general.

She lived there from 1916, when her father the Duke of Devonshire moved in, until 1930 when she married the Duke's hide-de-camp, a wounded First World War soldier named Capt. Harold Macmillan.

The handsome, white - haired woman's most vivid memories are of tobogganing, ice-boating, skiing and skating. "We had two skating rinks. I loved the winter.

"Into his youthfulness, he smilingly replied, "Because of my schoolgirl complexion." He was then a very handsome young man, and wore a contrasting Roman toga sort of garment in green color. This evening was the Gold Coast. His pleasant smile assured that their acceptance of westerners as important as the western-ers accepted them.

SCHOOLS IN INDIA

In speaking of the schools in India, Miss Francis said that she had been enabled in her memory, a 13 by 12 room, with the benches against the wall, and rows of chairs in front of little ones ranging from five to six years, a bearded Sheikh and a housewife, all eager to learn their ABC's. Some sit under trees, others have no buildings, and eagerly happy to be taught in any way.

In one school in Pakistan for domestic science was built by the Ford Foundation and all of glass, in a country where it is 56 degrees in the shade!

In Copenhagen she met a scientist who was responsible for the raising of the people in Germany, she met the mayor of West Berlin, Adenauer, and was amazed at the way he solves the divided Germany. A most dynamic man, having a concept of democracy.

REFUGEE CAMPS

In Hamburg she visited the refugee camps. Men there had some jobs mostly temporary, with two families living in one small room. In Denmark she met a writer who was in his middle 70's and who had just returned from Africa and its problems, who was pleased to converse with about timely subjects.

Irish Potato Bread—2 Versions

By Mary Moore

If I write this column to my dying day I do not suppose I will get over the wonder of our reader response to my S.O.S.'s.

Eva R. requested Irish Potato Bread and I did not know exactly what she meant.

On my return from Grand Cayman there were so many letters from our readers giving various versions of Irish Potato Bread that I do not have them all opened yet and still they come.

The one recipe that is repeated over and over follows. The other is a more elaborate version. A fervent comprehensive "Thank You" to all who wrote. All of your little pleasant asides have been appreciated too.

IRISH POTATO BREAD:

(This was requested by Eva R. last month).

. . . These are made as she suggests exactly, and are delicious spread with butter and served hot or cold. We prefer them cold, served with cheese, salad or even cold meat. Although I have made these for a number of years I have never had a recipe to follow but making them this A.M. the nearest I can give you is the following: — this is reliable.

Two cups mashed potatoes, I cup pastry flour, 1 teaspoon salt. Mix salt into flour, then work into potatoes thoroughly, using more flour if needed. Roll out about 1-4" thick about size of frying pan and fry in ungreased pan about 6 minutes. When brown turn, and brown other side. Cut into desired sized pieces whilst warm. Before cooking dough should be about consistency of pastry. No grease, no liquid is used. Warning — the more potatoes are handled the better they become. If too much flour is added the flavor is spoiled. Also, if salt is used in cooking potatoes only 1-4 teaspoon salt is ample. Flavor is improved if potatoes are mashed whilst still hot and allowed to become cold before using. I use mcer — makes potatoes smoother. No liquid is used. This quantity makes about 8 or 9 "Frying pan" size. My pan is 8" and I do not cut them small after cooking. Usually the family butters them and rolls them "jelly cake" fashion and eats them like that, nibbling from end to end . . . E.K.

LETTER FROM J.S.:

My Grandmother used to make these and of course there never was a written recipe.

USHAUUHNESSY SPEC'AL

One and one-half cups all-purpose flour, sifted, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-2 cup soft shortening, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1 cup mashed potatoes, cold 3 tablespoons cold water. Mix all ingredients together thoroughly. With hands flatten dough in rectangle 1-3" thick. Cut triangles; put them on greased baking sheet, and bake in very hot oven (450 deg.) for 7 minutes on each side; or fry in bacon fat 5 minutes on each side. Serve hot with butter. Makes 8 servings. To do with ease allow about 40 minutes. A quote "You can try from now till doomsday and you won't find the potato cake you remember. Not unless you have the old iron skillet (one that has been in use, not laid away) and a wood stove to cook it on You'll never get Granny's flavor without it." We have tried the Irish Potato Cake" using an old skillet but minus the wood stove — thank Heaven- It was excellent. J.S.

Remarks Modern Artist Gets Tired of Hearing

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Remarks a modern artist gets tired of hearing:

"I may not know much about art—but I know what I like."

"At his last one-man show, the only pictures he sold was one the gallery hung upside down."

"They all look like they're being upside down to me."

"He must be in his blue period. Anybody who paints the way he does couldn't be anything but blue."

"This one called Nude descending a Moonbeam isn't half-bad, but that one—which is the moonbeam and which is the nude?"

"Ellsworth, I've got a commission for you at last. It's from the landlord. He says if you'll paint the other apartments in the building, he'll cancel our back rent."

"Never mind explaining to me what it is. Just tell me why it is."

"My dear, his work is simply too en province to be classed with the really avant garde, don't you think? What I mean is, he's sort of a frigid noze Gauguin substituting igloos for Tahitian hut."

IN WRONG JOB

"Of course his paintings lacks a sense of perspective. If he had a real sense of perspective, he'd have become a plumber."

"Some call him a post-impressionist. Others say he's really a cubist at heart. But my girl friend used to date him, and she says he's strictly a square."

"Original? He isn't even abnormal!"

"Daddy, do I have to look at this man's paintings any more? They're making me sea-sick."

"He donated three of his recent paintings to a charity—and the charity donated them right back."

"Ellsworth, dear, I can't pose for you another minute. I simply have to do the dishes and see if I can borrow some milk from the neighbors for the baby."

"What did he paint this one with—a brush or his beard?"

"I admit his paintings give me a sense of mystery. But the biggest mystery is—why did he put a $200 price tag on them?"

"You call that an interesting conception? I call it self-deception."

"Why do they hang his pictures? Why not him?"

MODERN MANNERS

QUESTION BOX

Question — I am a senior in high school. For the last two years there has been one girl that I particularly like and admire. We date quite often (none of this "going steady" stuff) and we get along fine. But there is one flaw in the ointment. She persists in re-doing her face all the time. It seems to me that she always has a comb, lipstick or powder going full blast! Is there any nice way that I can cure her of that? She is very pretty and there is no need for this eternal primping. It is quite embarrassing when she does it when we are out to dinner in a restaurant. Can you help me? — Mr. T. E., New York, N.Y.

Answer — Your young lady is certainly off on the wrong foot! I only wish more young girls don't realize that they are, every glamor conscious that they may possess, as well as annoying ushers, when they "eternally primp," as you put it. To begin with, a young girl needs very little makeup. Unless the better By continually checking herself in her mirror, patting her hair here and there and re-doing her make-up, she gives evidence that she is still very immature and unsure of herself—To follow this procedure when at the table is inexcusable. My only suggestion is to be absolutely frank, but tactful, but tell her how unnecessary it all is. Soften it by saying that she is too pretty to worry about how she looks — that is to relax and forget it! She may be hurt for a while, but, if she has any sense, she will take it in good grace and realize that it is for her own good and not being so stupid.

Question — I am thirteen and am furious with my mother. She will not allow me to use lipstick, says I am too young. Lots of the girls in my class do use it, and I feel silly not being so. What do you think about this problem? I will show your answer to my mother because I'm sure you will be on my side! — Miss V. E. F., Detroit, Mich.

Answer — All right young lady. Keep your promise. Show this to your mother. I agree with her whole-heartedly! The girls in your school who are allowed to wear lipstick are foolish, and their mothers should be censured for allowing them to do. You are too young. There are plenty of years ahead to paint your face! Enjoy the next few years and stop trying to be grown up before you are! Listen to that sensible mother of yours, and behave yourself. Don't forget — show her this!

The Pink Suit

By TRACY ADRIAN

The little pink suit seems to be the word for spring this year. Seen in many various versions, it has become a favorite in all age groups.

This one is of nubby wool tweed. Its jacket features short, elbow sleeves, an open neck with a stand-away collar and a self belt.

Both coat and skirt are lined in pale pink silk. The skirt is short and molded.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, three editors and a women's editor. Each week is a summary of the disagreement presented to the Council. The Council deals with problems, major and minor, encountered by guidance counsellors and social workers.

Shirley T. — If he mentions the past, he'll never get a decent job.

Arthur T. — I'd have to worry from day to day that the truth would come out.

Shirley T. — My husband is a skilled accountant. In fact he was too skilled, because it led to his thinking that he could get away with some embezzlement by some fancy figure juggling. But no. He wound up instead with a prison sentence for fraud. Basically he's a law-abiding person. Part of the blame for his crime is mine, I admit, for splurging, nagging, and dragging us down into heavy debt.

We've learned our lesson. During his term, I went to work and I'll keep at it until Art gets back on his feet. But in seeking a job he insists upon telling all. I urge him to use a few white lies. He can mention the names of a few small concerns under "previous employers," and say that he left them to better himself in a large organization.

Arthur T. — Nobody is going to roll out the red carpet for an associate who has served time, and especially for a bookkeeper or an accountant who succumbed to temptation. But I may be able to convince an employer to give me a chance, if I lay my cards on the table and tell him the truth.

I'm a topnotch worker. I made one bad mistake which I've paid for. Now I must start all over, just like a college kid, with no references. I disagree with Shirley's idea of making up a few fake references. While this might get me past the front door, I'd never have a moment's peace, and constantly worry about being found out. It would be awful, working under a cloud all the time.

The Council — While we admire Shirley's loyalty and sympathy toward her husband, we deplore her advice that he falsify his credentials, even as an expedient toward getting inside the door of a business office. His eye would be more on that door than on his ledgers, as he watched it for the inevitable "link" that would tie his present to his past. It would be "Les Miserables" all over again, with Arthur playing Jean Valjean, the quarry.

The wiser course would be for Arthur to level himself off the placement facilities sponsored by organizations dedicated to the welfare of ex-cons who have vowed to hold on to that "go" forever! Some of these groups have achieved such high "make good" records on the part of the workers they've recommended, that employers now no hesitation in accepting their candidates.

The straight and narrow lies ahead for Arthur. While lies, Shirley, might make it seem wider for a brief time, but they wouldn't be worth the risk. The truth is the better risk, especially since the arms of a compassionate community, represented by bodies such as the above mentioned, are eager to take it from there.

Aged Father Acts Queer

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—At 73 my father walks two miles every day and is a fine looking robust man. I am worried about him because he is beginning to act awfully queer.

I went in to see him the other day and he was sitting at a table with a big pile of valuable securities in front of him. He explained that he had taken them out of the safety deposit vault to count them. intended to keep them under the bed where he could keep an eye on them.

I helped him like taking them back to the bank. Now he has the idea that I stole them from him.

Sometimes he will burn a whole batch of receipts, then his away all night worrying about what he has burned. He goes for a walk and loses his way. A policeman brings him home.

I can't budge him from his house, where he has lived all his life and is alone now.—DAUGHTER MARION.

DEAR DAUGHTER MARION:—We are finding more and more old people who are physically well but senile. This is resulting from the scientific advances which have prolonged life. If we are to make these added years worth while, we will have to figure out ways of protecting and helping the oldsters who are not as alert as they used to be.

Sometimes the answer is a housekeeper. In family service agencies there are special workers who plan for old people and find help for them, or get visitors to look in on them regularly. Homes for the aged, modern ones, are considered by some to live if the individual can be persuaded to move in and try it.

See your family agency for practical ideas to meet your special problem.

DEAR DORIS:—I have a friend who is, at best, a reluctant suitor, and I would like your opinion before I give up on him.

I used to have dinners and evenings with him, but now I am usually the one who does the inviting. He comes to dinner when I have a party and appears to enjoy my company.

When his mother died last week in England, I was the one he hurried to tell. He felt very badly and I did, I think, help him.

I know he is not taking anyone else out, and when he comes around I start hoping for marriage again, but I can't put up with this indefinitely. I threw myself into work with the Canadian Cancer Society—but I must say I would much prefer taking care of my own children! Do you think there is any hope for me?—MARY R.

DEAR MARY R.:—There is plenty of hope for you, but—with him? I wonder!

Supposing he could be brought to popping the question, would this man be a good marriage risk? If he is taking you for granted now, I wonder just how ardent he would be once the knot is tied? Anyone who has been on his own for so long might find married life too demanding. Can you see him as a father for your children?

Unless his mother's death brings about a complete right-about-face on his part, which could happen, you would be better advised to look elsewhere for a mate.

If you should remain single, life could still be fun. The career girl can find joy in the work and play in which she sublimates nature's urges; and without the full-time contribution of our spinsters, a good deal of the world's work would never get done.

(Doris Clark will be glad to help you with your problems. Write to her care of this paper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Callers Say Program Was 'Anti-British'

LONDON (Reuters) — Complaining Britons bombarded the British Broadcasting Corporation with telephone calls Sunday night after the showing of an American - made documentary film on Britain.

The film, Blood, Sweat and Years' plus 20 Years, made by the Columbia Broadcasting System and shown in the United States three weeks ago was televised here when an electricians' strike forced the cancellation of two popular Sunday night shows, What's My Line and Be My Guest.

A BBC spokesman said there were about 100 phone calls on the American documentary. He said the viewers complained the program was "anti-British."

The audience heard the American commentator narrating the film describe the British as "likeable but not loveable." He also claimed that there was a growing feeling of "neutralism" in Britain.

Earlybird Fly Fishermen Hard-Pressed for Luck This Spring in Maritimes

By ED SMITH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

HALIFAX (CP)—Mother Nature stacked the odds heavily against the opening-day angler in the Maritimes this year.

Streams along Nova Scotia's south coast have been running free since late March but others, especially in New Brunswick, are strictly for skaters.

The earlybird fly fishermen, with special permission, could try for his first Atlantic salmon in New Brunswick waters April 1. In many parts of Nova Scotia the general open season begins April 15.

But one of the coldest winters on record has combined with one of the deepest snow covers in 10 years to chill sportsmen's early enthusiasm.

The consolation is that lingering winter and a good spring runoff may be beneficial to conservation. They are expected to be reflected in better catches later in the season.

Parr and smolt mortality was enormous in the summer of 1960, driest in recorded history. What effect the drought will have on future sport fishing won't be known for four or five years. It takes that long for a smolt to complete their life cycle and return to spawn.

STOCKING STREAMS

The federal fisheries department annually releases 20,000,000 to 30,000,000 hatchery bred salmon in Maritime streams. Dr. R. H. Logie, chief of the fish culture branch, says the stocking program this year may be affected by last year's dry conditions.

"We may have to juggle a few streams, paying more attention to the areas of greatest needs."

But while natural conditions may reduce the salmon population, Dr. Logie says the "baleful influence" of man continue to offset attempts to keep a balance through artificial stocking.

New logging operations, industries, forest fires, forest spray, poaching and the "lighter" who hooks salmon in belly or back have contributed to the reduction of salmon.

In 1949 sportsmen hauled 2,300,000 pounds of Atlantic salmon out of Maritimes and Quebec streams. In 1954 the take was 1,300,000 pounds. In the Maritimes last year sportsmen caught 23,485 fish weighing less than 100,000 pounds. Commercial gill, trap and drift nets took 960,000 pounds.

New Brunswick's Miramichi river system with its deep and frequent pools yielded 14,064 salmon last year, more than 60 per cent of the Maritime catch by rod. But it was far below the 22,000 or better taken every year previously since 1948, especially the 45,987 in 1958.

Some headway is being made, meanwhile, against man-made hazards. A report to the fisheries research board from Dr. St. Andrews, N.B., biological station says mortality among young Atlantic salmon from DDT forest spray can be almost eliminated if budworm-infested trees are sprayed with half-strength mixture.

Pollution has been corrected in many years though it is cropping up in other rivers formally dead.

Poaching, once a major factor in the Atlantic salmon's decline, is becoming less of a problem, says Forrest Watson, chief fisheries protection officer.

"The American merganser, once a threat to the salmon industry, is becoming scarcer. These birds can eat up to 30 small salmon each in a single day.

Opening of Nova Scotia's salmon season varies from April 15 on south-coast rivers to May 15 and June 15 on streams flowing into the Bay of Fundy, Northumberland Strait and the

In New Brunswick May 15 is the general opening date but fly fishermen may catch early Atlantic or black salmon April 1-14 with written permission from a district fisheries officer. ESKIMOS AT WORK — Pauloosie and Koochesuk, Eskimos recovering at the sanatorium at Ninette, Man., add the finishing touches to soapstone carvings they make at the hospital. Carving periods were started five years ago by the hospital's occupational therapy staff to fill the Eskimo patients' spare time. (CP Photo).

Carved By Eskimos — These carvings are samples of the work of Arctic Eskimos who are patients at the sanatorium at Ninette in southwestern Manitoba. The carvings are made in soapstone ordered by the hospital from the Boughton quarries in Quebec. Simple knives, files and at times a hack saw or hand drill are used by the patients in their work. (CP PHOTO)

Eskimo Soapstone Carvings Bring Top Market Prices

NINETTE, Man. (CP)—This southwestern Manitoba centre produces Eskimo soapstone carvings that cannot be distinguished from those carved in the Arctic itself.

The carvings, which bring top market prices, should be authentic. They are produced by Eskimos recovering from illness in the sanatorium here.

Carving has been going on here for five years, introduced to give the first Eskimo patients something to do in their spare time.

At first the patients scoured the shores of nearby Pelican Lake for shale. Then the hospital's occupational Therapy department took a hand to make it easier.

Today soapstone is ordered from the Boughton quarries in Quebec. The hospital pays $2.63 for each eight-inch cube. The patients aren't charged for the material unless their work is sold.

For the better carvers, it is a source of pocket money. Some even carve to fill specific orders. There is no instruction or supervision by the hospital staff.

NOT A BUSINESS

The 18 Eskimos at the sanatorium use the simplest of tools for their hobby, sticking mainly to knives, files and the odd hacksaw and hand drill.

The hospital has no thought of establishing an industry, and does not even encourage sales. The main idea is to provide occupational therapy for the patients. Those in the early stages of recovery are allowed to carve 30 minutes a day, while those more advanced and closer to release carve for a longer period.

A small dog turned out by an expert carver usually takes three or four days.

In spite of limits, the hospital already is marketing the carvings through two Winnipeg outlets. Displays are also sent to teachers' conventions and gatherings such as the annual Indian-Metis conference.

Dr. A. L. Payne, the sanatorium's medical superintendent, says a patient's carving ability and taste change after he has been within the boundaries of civilization for a time.

"When they first come to us their carvings tend to be rather primitive. After a year or so we can see more detailsin their work, more attention to proportion. Maybe it is a result of being exposed to other forms of art."

Likely to Ask Lower Barriers In Immigration

By DAVE GANCIA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Two British Sunday papers say it is suggested Prime Minister Macmillan will ask Canada to lower bar barriers against West Indian immigrants during his talks with Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

The Sunday Express says the British leader will ask Canada to take more West Indian immigrants to relieve the pressure of the West Indian rush to Britain.

Reynolds News says the suggestion was made to the British leader by Sir Grantley Adams, premier of the 10-island West Indies Federation.

The Sunday Express predicts that the talks between the premiers in Ottawa "are likely to result in Canada's agreeing to double the intake from The West Indies, although Mr. Diefenbaker is opposed to an unrestricted flow."

The paper notes that of the 110,000 persons who emigrated to Canada last year, only 1,200 were West Indians.

Reynolds-News says economic and aid ties are traditional between Canada and the West Indies.

"Sir Grantley has long felt that under - populated Canada should abandon what appears to be a policy of racial discrimination against colored West Indians wanting to emigrate there," the paper adds.

"Mr. Macmillan, under mounting pressure at home, realizes that to divert some at least of the flow may be the answer—for the British government anyway."

Metro Chief Does Not Think Beatings Instigated by Mafia

TORONTO (CP) — High-ranking police officers have opposed views on whether the Sicilian secret society, the Mafia, is trying to muscle in on crime profits here.

"Any local man who has a good gambling operation or racket going for him and won't consider letting the Mafia in on the deal is in danger," one officer of the Metropolitan Toronto police force said Monday.

"These boys mean business and if we don't stop it now, the city will be in for all sorts of extortion rackets. Before long we'll have the type of shakedown that led to the wrecking of Montreal night clubs."

But Metro Chief James Mackey said he does not think recent beatings—including one of convicted gambler Max Bluestein—were instigated by the Mafia.

However, he said he believes the beatings have been ordered by United States gamblers interested in expanding to Toronto.

During the weekend, Chief Mackey took personal charge of an investigation into the beating of Bluestein by several men in a nightclub. Though there were about 100 persons in the club, none will testify.

WITNESSES AFRAID

"They all seem afraid to talk," Detective-Sergeant Frank O'Driscoll said.

The Telegram says that Operation Muscle In by the Mafia began well before Bluestein was badly beaten with iron pipes and brass knuckles March 21.

The Telegram adds:

"The facts were simply that the beating was administered by the Mafia's chief Ontario agent, the two local partners in crime and two or three other men hired for the job.

"The 'killer' is a Hamilton man who has been questioned in the past about murders in that city. His two partners are Toronto men—one the operator of a gambling club, the other part owner of a beauty parlor."

BROOKS RE 'SHAKEN DOWN'

The Star says that Bangland beatings or shakedowns have been taking place in Toronto for at least two years but are not reported by the victims. They involve gamblers, drug peddlers and vice trade hirelings. Stockbrokers also have been shaken down.

The Star says one victim is reported to have been beaten almost to unconsciousness, then dragged to the street and run over by a car, breaking both his legs.

SCURVY REPORTED

WINNIPEG (CP)—The Manitoba health department has launched an investigation into reports of cases of scurvy in the province during 1960. The department is attempting to determine the incidence of the vitamin-deficiency disease.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CANVER, Sports Editor

A friend of mine just back from Detroit informs me the gendarmes of the Motor City have an A.P.B. out for Mr. and Mrs. Octopod.

"Octopod" is the birth certificate or dictionary name for an octopus, a nautical joker with a sac-like body, a head like an overstuffed peanut with a mouth on the undersurface, and eight arms or legs covered with suckers.

You cannot mistake a qualified octoped. Under water he is a sinister-looking cuss. His large head looks like the helmet used by the old Keystone cops and when he gets excited and wiggles those rubbery tentacles, he looks like a Mae Clessert private eye doing a cha-cha with three Siamese dancers.

Alive, he is bad enough. But three days after riger mortis has come and gone he is not exactly the hockey player's idea of "What I would like to get slapped with best".

The throwing of the squid, the cuddlefish, the octopod or perhaps anything of an over-ripe nature is not new to the garbage-tossing gladiators of Detroit's Olympia.

In fact it has been going on since the days of the Caesars. The gladiators didn't like the job a lion was doing on a slave they'd toss a Nubian or an Ethiopian at him.

"Punky" Murdock of the famous St. Louis Cardinals Double Gang was greeted with such a barrage of ripe fruit, tomatoes and garbage in left field one afternoon he came up looking like the label on a can of vegetable soup.

One night during the old wrist-whacking hockey days in Plains somebody threw a chair or pallet at the players. At least that's what they thought until it was learned the burly gendarme had short-cutted down a corner post from the "mezzanine" in Ab Hare's hockey lofts to the bar-level cheaper seats.

To get back to the octopods. Vern DeGrow, associate sports editor of the Montreal Gazette and former sports editor of the Windsor Star recalls some of the old days of the sport and probably the Detroit origin.

"Octopus-chucking" says Mr. DeGrow, "stems from a rollicking group of eight Detroit sportsmen that had headquarters at a corner table in the Ringside Bar, a popular oasis across from the Detroit Times.]

"Accepted leader of the Octopus Octet was "Scotty" Monteith, a doughty product of Motherwell, Scotland. Scotty was the Olympia matchmaker and nursemaid to a string of boxers. Next to boxing, hagris, and a draggle of Dunlin's dew from Kirkintilloch, Scotty's love was hockey and the Red Wings."

"It was the spring of 1934 and Detroit's first real fling in Stanley Cup competition. The Wings were pitted against the Toronto Maple Leafs, had won the first two in Toronto then dropped the first at Olympia.

"This was too much for the octopus Octet. They decided they couldn't throw the referees in the river it was too far away. "We'll pummell 'em, that we will. We'll pummell 'em' said the master brain.

"Whereupon after a spirited two-hour session at the Ringside Bar they cleaned McClelland's free lunch counter of pickled eggs and fresh eggs, head lettuce, pig's feet and pig's knuckles."

"Loaded inside and out the party invaded Olympia. Enroute they passed at the Sea Grille, one of the few seat-and-drink establishments in Detroit at the time that catered to sea-food gourmets. There a Monieth lieutenant picked up a fat parcel wrapped in newspapers."

"The rest is history. The Octet let go a few barrages before the ushers thumbed them from the building. They escaped because the ushers knew them and surely no Olympic matchmaker would be guilty of such rowdyism.

"That is until Scott's partner unwrapped the parcel and sent the contents sailing in a graceful arc. It was the first octopus to land on Olympia ice and it came to rest at the referee's feet in front of the press box. The referee was standing too close to the press boys, and out of deference to them only one octopod squished on the ice."

Hull "Spectacular" In Hawks Victory

Howe Gets Detroit Goal

Take it from coach Rudy Pilous.

Hull didn't score when the Black Hawks dumped Detroit Red Wings 3-1 Monday night to grab a 2-1 lead in games in their best - of-seven cup final, but otherwise he played a spectacular game.

Pilous was visibly happy with Hull's performance in shadowing the ever-dangerous Gordie Howe of Detroit.

"During and since the Montreal series, Hull has so matured as a hockey player that he can cover Howe any time," Pilous exclaimed.

"It seems pretty clear that Howe will have to look after Hull, as well as the other way around."

SET UP GOALS

Hull also was a tower of strength on Chicago's offensive attack. He set up two of the Hawks' three second period goals—the first by Stan Mikita and the third by Murray Balfour.

The Hawks' other tally was by Ron Murphy.

Howe broke loose for Detroit's lone counter in the third period when the Hawks had the game all but wrapped up.

But Howe and his linemates, Vic Stasiuk and Alex Delvecchio didn't come up with a strong performance as in previous playoff games this spring and it made Detroit Manager-coach Jack Adams unhappy.

Adams and coach Sid Abel were not ready to toss in the towel yet.

"We'll even this series in Detroit Wednesday night," Adams said confidently.

Abel said he thought the Red Wings missed too many chances before Chicago opened the scoring. "Anyway, we play well at home and we can win there Wednesday and tie up this series."

SPECTATORS BATTLE

Monday night's game turned into a battle of speed and rocking, thumping checking that had the capacity crowd of 16,666 in an uproar almostthroughout.

It was the best game of the series and probably the best the Hawks have turned in during the post-season playoffs.

The bug - eyed Chicago fans put on a spectator demonstration every time their Hawks scored. Firecrackers exploded and there were booms as if small cannons were being set off.

Late in the game when the crowd thought a tripping penalty should have been given to Detroit goalie Hank Bassen — subbing for injured Terry Sawchuk — another demonstration broke loose.

Programs, papers and small objects, finally a dead animal, came showering to the ice.

SCORE IN CLUSTERS

The Hawks used the same script — getting their goals in clusters — as in the series' opener which they won 5-3.

The Wings, already weakened by the loss of Sawchuk and defenceman Marcel Pronovost through injuries, got more bad news late in the third period when Warren Godfrey, another defenceman, had to retire because of a bruised left knee. Club doctors said they do not know if he will be ready for the fourth game.

Eddie Litzenberger, Hawk team captain who had been out since Feb. 25 with a broken leg, made his first appearance of the playoffs and looked the puck behind him easily for a 1-0 Chicago lead.

Murphy, celebrating his 28th birthday, split the Detroit defence of Gerry Odrowski and Godfrey and raced in on Bassen to score the second goal at 14:18. Pilote and Litzenberger engineered the play.

Hull was the big man on the Hawks' third goal, passing to Balfour from a few feet out. the blue line and then passed to Hull who fought his way almost to the crease before slipping the puck over to Balfour. Bassen was beaten cleanly on the goal, at 18:17.

Staff Told To Spike Litter Guns

TORONTO (CP) — Maple Leaf Gardens staff have been instructed to stop efforts interesting in Ontario Hockey Association games.

Sunday's OHA junior playoff between St. Michael's and Guelph was delayed after every goal while attendants cleared eggs, peanuts, programs, paper and pennies from the rink. Two Guelph players, Rod Gilbert and Al Lebrun, have been sidelined by injuries received when they tripped on objects on the ice.

Possible deterrents to litter throwers include ejection and prosecution.

Ed. Machen Decisions Mike Dejohn

Dejohn stung Machen with a pair of right-hand shots in the fourth round but couldn't again stand up to the big fighter with telling effect. Machen had control of the fight from the midway point.

Machen No. 2 contender, hammered the sixth-ranked Dejohn repeatedly with hard lefts and rights, bloodied his nose in the fourth but couldn't floor Dejohn on the canvas.

The Negro from Oregon took the verdict of referee Matt Zidich 6-3. Judge Jack Silver scored it 8-2 and Judge Joseph Lolay 8-1, both for Machen. Under California's five - point system, Machen would have tallied each round from one to five points. The Associated Press scored it 6-2 for Machen.

The victory was No. 37 for Machen who has lost three and fought one draw. Dejohn, bleeding badly from the nose in the latter stages, suffered loss No. 8 against 41 triumphs and one draw.

Eastern Canada Final

Galt Wins Opener From Amherst

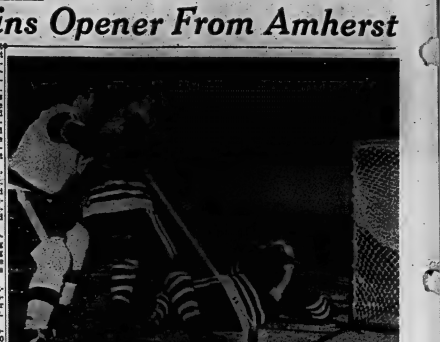
GALT (CP)—A knee-high shot that slammed into the goalpost and bounced the right way Monday night maintained Galt Terriers' undisrupted march toward an Allan Cup appearance.

There were only 59 seconds left in the first game of the Eastern Canada final when Ted Maki plot little Bill (Wiggy) Wylie into the clear. Wylie fired the shot that slid off the pipe into the nets and gave the Terriers a 5-4 victory over Amherst Ramblers.

Jacques Monette, Ramblers' goalie and coach, was philosophical about the loss. He conceded the Terriers were smart puckhandlers and quick on the trigger but added his Ramblers had made a few miscues.

"I was pleased with our performance, however. Our timing was a little off after the long trip (from Nova Scotia) and we must forecheck more in the rest of the series."

The best-of-seven round to settle Winnipeg Maroons' opponents for the Dominion senior hockey final continues tonight. The third game is Friday.



The see-saw pattern of Monday night's contest before 2,400 fans was set nicely in the first period. Galt had a man advantage when Joe Mash fired a backhander past Monette after being set up by Maki.

The Ramblers promptly got it back with the first of Russ Malone's pair. It was the first of three consecutive goals the Terriers were to blow during the evening.

Joe Hogan and Pete Kowalchuk fired single goals as the Terriers moved to a 3-1 lead before Monette found his range. Each side scored once under reduced manpower.

Monette had 43 stops over the route, 31 in the first two periods. Harold (Bud) Burley at the other end had only 26 saves but 11 came in the third period when the Nova Scotians mounted on the heat.

The Terriers went into the contest without two key forwards whose return is in doubt. Captain Buddy Martin has a broken foot bone and George Aitken is suffering from torn knee ligaments, both casualties of the Absorbies series. Amherst's Dave Kiley was down with the 'flu.

PHILADELPHIA (CP)—Percy Manning, 140, of Philadelphia scored a first - round technical knockout over Lew Tolard, 140½, Oshawa, Monday night in a 33-second mark of the welter-scheduled four - round boxing weight match.

Crawfords 'Foul' Out To Trenton

Belleville Crawfords Metals, their ranks reduced to only two players in the dying minutes of the game, walked off the floor and forfeited the second game of their Bay of Quinte Senior League finals to the Trenton Wilsons in Trenton last night.

The third game in the best-of-five series will be played here at Moira Secondary School tomorrow (Wednesday) night at eight o'clock. The series is tied one game apiece.

Personal fouls cost Crawford Metals no less than four players, leaving only two players on the floor with Trenton in front 61-46 with four minutes left in the game.

Bombers were first out all Belleville players except Don Mason and Ross Wetmore, as Trenton officials dished out four technical fouls to the Crawford crew. Trenton, with an 11-man lineup, did not lose a player through fouls, the highest any one player was whistled with three.

It was a tight see-saw affair earlier with Crawfords holding a slim 29-28 lead at half time. Then the fouls began to pile up and Trenton pulled away.

Trenton's scoring was evenly distributed with Wilf Borden topping the list with 18 points. A. Burleigh dropped 14 and Bob Burleigh 12.

Crawford Metals (46) — Batchelor 19, Faulkner 8, Green 14, Bennett 4, Wetmore 6, Masters.

Senators Drop Inaugural To Chisox

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chicago White Sox now have two Dick Donovan in enemy costume and what they saw they didn't like.

Donovan, picked from Chicago in the American League's expansion draft, was the losing pitcher as Washington Senators dropped a 4-3 opening game to the White Sox Monday.

But it was no fault of the Washington that President Peabody and 36,725 paying patrons attended a defeat in the new Senators' major league debut.

The Senators committed four errors and three of them—two on one play by first baseman Dale Long—helped Chicago score unearned runs to square matters in the seventh and clinch the game in the eighth.

Donovan, omitted from Chicago's starting rotation last year, slowed only six hits and has seldom been more effective.

"If he's going to pitch that way, I wish we had him back," said Sox manager Al Lopez. Last year Donovan was nicked for a 5.33 earned run average but posted a 6-1 record.

Roy Sievers who earlier smashed a home run into the centre field bleachers, drove in Minnie Minoso with the winning run in the eighth with a sacrifice fly to deep centre.

Led Palmer by Stroke

Player Takes Masters

Player finished some 30 minutes ahead of Palmer with a closing 34-40—74 for an eight-under-par 280. That was when Palmer seemed roaring to one of his patented explosive finishes—like last year when he closed birdie-birdie to capture his second Masters title with 282.

Palmer seemingly had the Masters sewed up when Player went one over par on the 69th hole to fall one stroke behind Palmer. Nicklaus, who had then was nine - under par through the 67th.

But Palmer—after an opening nine of 34 and eight straight pars, hit his Waterloo at 18. His second shot was trapped. His burial shot came with a seven-iron which went over the green. Palmer's fourth shot went 15 feet past the pin. He missed the king putt back and his grave is covered.

Palmer naturally was unhappy after his sad finish.

"I thought this only happened to other people," he said.

Coe, 38, an oil broker who won the U.S. Amateur in 1949 and 1958, very nearly became the first amateur to win the Masters. He had the two best closing rounds, 69-69, and by inches missed an eagle putt on the 69th hole.

Palmer collected $12,000 for his second-place finish, keeping him second behind Player in the 1961 money-winning race at $34,782.

Vancouver's Stan Leonard wound-up with a 289 and $1,500 as his portion of a four-way tie for 15th place. Toronto's Al Balding picked up $1,000 for his 294 which placed him 27th.

S. Africans Toast Gary Player

By JERRY LISKA

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—Gary Player, a spindle-like gold Midas from South Africa, today had swelled his 1961 gold stake to $45,000 by becoming the first foreign-born Masters champion since the meet started in 1934.

Whether Player, 25, best defending champion Arnold Palmer, 31, or Jack Nicklaus, 21, beat himself in Monday's closing straight at Augusta National was conjectural.

At any rate amateur Charlie Coe also made a hot bid and tied Palmer for second.

Player, a non-user of clubhouse TV, first in agony and then in wife-kissing glee, as Palmer blew the $20,000 top prize and an unprecedented second straight victory with a boy tribe two-over-par six on the last hole.

Moncton Wins Series

By EDDIE ST. PIERRE
Canadian Press Staff Correspondent

MONCTON (CP)—With 3,000 happy fans showering congratulations on them, it took Moncton Beavers more than 10 minutes to reach their dressing room Monday night after becoming the first Maritime junior hockey team in 27 years to retain the Eastern Canada Memorial Cup final.

Fans mobbed the Beavers when their 6-1 victory over Trois-Rivieres Reds in the deciding game of their best - of - five Eastern semi-final round.

Moncton became the first Maritime team since 1934 Charlottetown Abbies to beat out the Quebec representatives and advance against the Ontario winner. The Beavers now will meet the winner of the Guelph-Toronto St. Michael's series. The Eastern Canada final leg will be played here.

Delphis Legacy, 19, scored two goals for the Beavers, including the first one which seemed to take the steam out of the Reds.

OPENED THE SCORING

Legacy opened the scoring at 16:01 of the first period and got the backbreaker at 7:59 of the third.

Moncton led 1-0 at the end of the first and 3-0 going into the third.

Oscar Gaudet, younger brother of Beavers' coach Roger Gaudet, scored the winning goal at 1:44 of the second period. The Beavers were a man short when Gaudet scored.

Emery Cormier, a converted forward, again played a strong game for Moncton in goal. Moncton outshot the Reds 41-24.

Legacy was top scorer of both teams in the series with eight goals. He has been signed by Boston Bruins of the National League and is to report in the fall to Niagara Falls Flyers, Ontario farm team in the Ontario Hockey Association junior A series.

John F. Kennedy's administration is turning attention to South America in a similar effort to repair and strengthen U.S. ties with neighbors to the south. But the job won't be easy. During the month-long fact-finding trip of Assistant Secretary of State Roberto C. Hill to Latin America, A Trend now is detectable in the direction of training more Latin Americans for executive work, and indeed, for a large degree of assimilation of U.S. habits into the local economies.

To the objective observer, U.S. business is on a more pinned against than sinning in Latin America, but Latin Americans seem fascinated by labels. They appear to view capitalism as the root of all evil, regarding it as it was defined by philosophers of the last century—that is what it has become in the United States. Communists and Castro extremists have an easy time distorting the image of the United States, and little has been done thereof nor-recting that image.

Agitation can lure illiterate peasants, urban workers, impatient students and intellectuals riotously anti-Yankee, because of a painful awareness of ancient evils which they do not tend to blame upon their own people.

The Communist-Castrista tool is the big lie: That the Yankees have designs on Latin America. Listeners look about them, see poverty and near-starvation on every hand and suddenly electric signs advertising American goods on the other, and they believe.

"The United States wants absolute victory. Asked one moderate politician. "Tell the United States that by trying to set up a chain of systems in the U.S. image, because it just isn't adaptable in underdeveloped areas to social development.

Typically, the United States should do first is learn about Latin America. You read about Latin America in books and earthquakes and revolution. But the U.S. people are woefully ignorant of the Latin people.

"We are woefully ignorant of the United States.

"President Kennedy's 'new frontiers' and 'alliance for progress' sounds fine and has big sounding. But for our rebels might be considered violent answers to a attractive. If you want respect down here, you'll have to help and support our revolution."

Astrological Forecast

General Tendencies: Your mind and senses are alert and aware to whatever can bring you more success and honor now. But your emotions are too apt to be-colored by some jealousy or doubting condition that can take away from your prosperity if you so allow it. Stick to duties, studies, mental interests. Postpone romance till later.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) You can easily know what your true position is with one of influence in A.M., if you make the effort to do so. However be sure you get duties at home attended nicely, too, and that you don't gamble with the affection of kin.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) Don't give-in to the temptation to write to one you love, or it can have, adverse - results. Spend the day happily and busily occupied or just having fun with good friends. Or better still, fine for taking a short trip to gather data you need.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) Get into new outlets that will bring greater acclaim for you and infinitely more material success, or merely expand in your present enterprises. P.M. Don't confide in that new friend about any affairs of the heart. Be secretive.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) Be sure you give an ear to that constructive suggestion by an associate that will lead to expansion and income in your current enterprise. Combining with own good ideas. P.M. Don't argue with one you love and spoil everything.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) You can work far more efficiently now if you permit higher-ups to give you suggestions and advice. Nobody knows it all. P.M. Not the right time to make all kinds of new arrangements with the one you love. Be quiet, thoughtful instead.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 21) Take your partner out to some place with charming atmosphere in order to talk over current affairs and get results you want. P.M. Ride the hobbies you like, the most. Steer clear of arguing with a close tie. Await better time.

Libra (Sept. 22 to Oct. 22) Heed the advice of close tie in matters of working more efficiently and adding beauty to surroundings. Steer clear of partner who is critical before flingwigs and could undermine your abilities.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be sure you place yourself in the hands of experts so that your appearance will be as handsome as possible. Then you can enjoy fine social hours with ease and assurance. P.M. Avoid that fellow employee on whom you have cooled your warmth.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) If you are most honest and blunt with kin, you can now get all of your practical and financial affairs in order. However, be kind and don't fly off the handle or be so forceful as you have been in the past. Be smart, wise.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Since your thinking is very clear today, now is the time to write those important letters, contact the persons vital to your business and welfare, P.M. Be diplomatic with that highly emotional individual at home.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You can advance far more quickly now if you contact that influential person you know who is more than glad to give you the right advice and assistance. However, don't gossip later and spoil your chances. Drive carefully. Be kind to kin in P.M.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) Be grateful for that clear-thinking comrade who gives you excellent suggestions for getting ahead. Follow advice. Then off to social pleasures tonight. Forget about problems and think in a positive and optimistic fashion.

If your child is born today .. he, or she will be blessed with an extraordinary mind but a sensitivity that will lead to emotional unbalance if you do not early give fine spiritual training and see that the diet is right. The chart is particularly bright for any profession that will bring your progeny before the public. Be sure your youngster is allowed the most classical education possible so that the great success in this chart can be realized to the full.

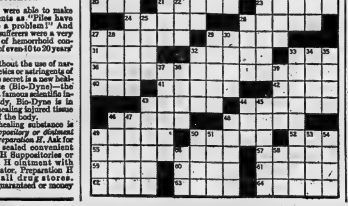
Science Now Shrinks Piles Without Pain Or Discomfort

Finds Healing Substance That Relieves Pain And Itching As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids

Toronto, Ont. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids and to relieve pain and itching. Thousands have been relieved with this inexpensive substance right in the privacy of their own home without any discomfort or inconvenience.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by doctors' observations.

Pain was promptly relieved. And while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.



And most amazing of all—this improvement was maintained in cases where doctors' observations were continued over a period of many months!

In fact, results were so thorough that sufferers were able to make such statements as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And among those sufferers were a very wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions, some of even 10 to 20 years' standing.

All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—the discovery of a famous scientific institute. Already, Bio-Dyne is in wide use for healing injured tissue on all parts of the body.

This new healing substance is offered in suppository or ointment form called Preparation H. Ask for individually sealed convenient Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H ointment with special applicator. Preparation H is sold at all drug stores. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

EICHMANN TRIAL

sive scrutiny of guards prepared to halt a suicide attempt. Eichmann took a white handkerchief from the pocket of his dark grey suit and touched it to his nose.

Eichmann's defence mounted its case shortly after the presiding judge read out in the thrice the 5,000-word indictment, which charges him with the mass murder, deportation, persecution and torture of millions of Hungarian Jews.

Defence lawyer Servatius challenged the way Eichmann was abducted from Buenos Aires about a year ago by Israeli agents and brought to court.

"The accused was kidnapped by the order of the state of Israel itself and brought by order of the state to here today."

"If this be the case, then the state acted against international law and this court cannot give its assistance and its seal to this act."

"The Israeli government never has acknowledged the part in Eichmann's capture in Argentina, whose government formally protested the violation."

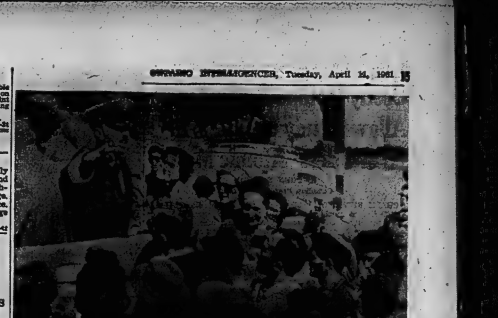
Servatius said the 1950 Israeli law for the punishment of Nazis and Nazi collaborators under which Eichmann is being tried was contrary to international law.

LAW UNACCEPTABLE

He said it was unacceptable because it covered punishment for crimes committed before or out before the foundation of the state of Israel (1948), outside the borders of the present state of Israel, and were perpetrated against people who were not citizens of the state of Israel.

Twelve of the 15 charges against Eichmann carry the death penalty, although Israeli jurists are divided on whether the accused will be sentenced or only a maximum punishment.

Eichmann pleaded innocent to a statement allegedly made by Eichmann to his Israeli captors in which he was quoted as saying he was willing to appear before a court or go to a country "whose people have suffered the most and where he must fear the most."



The statement, dated May 1, 1960, quoted Eichmann as saying: "I will do everything possible to give an explanation of the facts of my last years of service in Germany, in order that a true picture of the facts will be described for the coming generation."

JUDGE TAKES NOTES

During Servatius' opening remarks, presiding Judge Landau impassively took notes. Once the 49-year-old lawyer called out "silence in court," when a murmur went up as Servatius claimed that Eichmann did not belong to the "circle of leading personalities" of the Nazi regime.

Judge Benyamen Halevi looked straight ahead, while Judge Yitzhak Raveh occasionally took off his spectacles and pensively sucked the horn-rim ends.

PERSONALITIES

Following the lecture, a question and discussion period was held, bringing out the fact that the sacred cows and monkeys are still roaming at liberty, since the Indian people will not consent to their death. The Moslems eat beef but the Indians do not want the law changed. The caste system is dying out. Religion is the basis of the Indian refusal to slaughter animals; they have reverence for life.

The speaker was thanked by Mrs. McCormick, on behalf of the club members, to which Mrs. Strout added her own appreciative thanks.

ANNUAL REPORT

Preceding Miss Francis' talk the annual business meeting took place with Mrs. Arnold presiding, which included the annual report read by Mrs. Joss, in which the activities of the club were listed, including the different speakers, eight of whom had been sent by Ottawa, and the other two chosen by the local club.

The financial report by the treasurer, Mrs. Simone V. McPhillips, as follows: receipts, $1,043.00; membership, (220) $1,043.00; admissions, $54.55; interest, $9.47, total $1,457.47. Expenditures: speakers and accommodation, $248.35; rents — janitor service, $40.00 station-ary and postage, $8.67; stimulation - fees, nance. Costly Isotope Separator Allows Study of Invisible 'Weightless' Atomic Matter

By JOHN E. REED
Canadian Press Staff Writer

CHALK RIVER, Ont. (CP)—In a complicated machine so sensitive that it enables scientists to study atomic materials that cannot be seen or weighed has gone into operation at Canada's atomic energy establishment.

Studies are being made with it in a special laboratory at this nuclear centre 130 miles northwest of Ottawa in a continuing search for a complete understanding of uranium fuel for Canadian - designed atomic power stations.

Known as an electromagnetic isotope separator, the $2M,000 machine was purchased from the Swedish firm of Carl Miller-kowsky and Company Limited. It is the first equipment of its kind to go into operation in North America and is similar to a machine in use at the Nobel Institute in Stockholm.

When uranium fuel is placed in an atomic reactor to generate heat, many types of isotopes or fission products are produced. They represent in a sense the ashes or cinders produced in the "burning" of uranium fuel.

WANT MORE DETAILS

Scientists want to know more about the properties of these products and the degree to which they interfere with the heat-producing process in nuclear power plants.

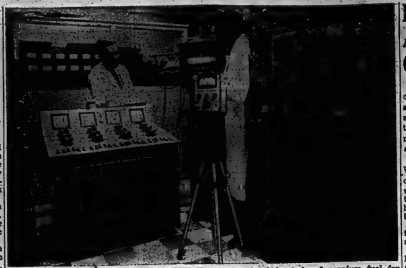
Dr. Robert H. Betts, head of the research chemistry branch of Atomic Energy of Canada Limited, said for example that many types of radioactive iodine are formed in the fission of uranium. They all have different masses and radioactive properties and cannot be separated by chemical means for individual study.

The same thing applies to other isotopes or fission products. They defy study in detail because they all are of one element and cannot be separated by chemical means.

"The electromagnetic isotope separator enables us to separate the isotopes of any one element and examine them individually," Dr. Betts said in an interview.

"We want to know how all these ashes or cinders affect the uranium fuel which will be used in Canadian atomic power plants. We are especially interested in finding out the degree to which fuel is affected and which isotopes produce the greatest interference, thereby reducing the efficiency of fuel."

Dr. Betts said "The more we know about the properties of fission products, the better established the economics of nuclear power reactors will become."



SENT THROUGH MAGNET

A sample of radioactive iodine—actually made up of several isotopes of iodine—is placed in a chamber at the rear of the separator. The iodine isotopes are given an electrical charge and then are "fired" with 70,000 volts of electricity and sent through a curved nine-ton magnet.

This operation has the effect of separating the various isotopes in the sample since the heavier ones fly in a wider arc than the lighter ones. The beams of separated isotopes then are focused onto a fluorescent screen where their properties can be studied individually.

Alternatively, the separated isotopes can be collected on aluminum metal strips. These then can be removed from the separator for further study with other equipment.

Dr. Betts said the machine also will assist the scientific staff at Chalk River in their fundamental studies on the nu-

New Trade Bloc To Help Canada Says Macmillan

Atlantic Trade Area Envisioned by Premier

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Macmillan has suggested that Britain might prove a better market for Canadian products if she joined the European Common Market than if she remains an independent economic unit.

At a press conference here Tuesday, he also pledged that Britain will have full regard for her Commonwealth commitments in working out her future economic relations with western Europe.

He expressed hope that the development of trading blocs in Europe will lead eventually to the establishment of an Atlantic free trade area. But he did not think this could succeed unless it were supplemented by some kind of credit structure to stabilize exchanges in a transitional period of falling tariffs.

"We have a long way to go but that is no reason not to say steps we can," the British leader declared.

VISIT NEARS END

The late-afternoon press conference was held as Mr. Macmillan neared the end of his 2½-day visit here. He went from it to a reception at the residence of British High Commissioner Sir Saville Garner, followed by a dinner given by Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

The 3 p.m. talk and Canadian prime ministers were in close agreement that a North Atlantic trade community can be built out of existing economic organs.

Mr. Diefenbaker told reporters following a 45-minute conference with Mr. Macmillan Tuesday that the trend seems to be toward tying together Europe's two existing trade blocs with the fledgling Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development.

Since Canada and the United States are members of OECD, they already would have representation within the organization.

Macmillan has long been pressing for more effective implementation of Articles 2, 3 and 4 of this question: Is the United Kingdom ready to back a better system for Commonwealth preference if tied to a healthy and expanding

JEWISH PEOPLE WILL NOT FORGET ADOLF EICHMANN

-- Hausner

No Pardon Seen By Prosecutor

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli Attorney-General Gideon Hausner, pointing his finger directly at Adolf Eichmann, exclaimed in court today that the Jewish people will never forget Eichmann "succeeded in part" in carrying out the Nazi plan to exterminate Europe's 11,000,000 Jews.

Hausner's impassioned warning brought no visible reaction from Eichmann. He looked at the attorney-general with stony eyes, his face a blank mask.

Hausner's outburst came like the second morning of Eichmann's trial on Israeli charges of "crimes against the Jewish people and crimes against humanity." One of those is the crime of genocide—mass murder. The state alleges that Eichmann, as chief of the Jewish affairs section of the Nazi Gestapo, bears direct responsibility for the slaughter of an estimated 6,000,000 Jews.

The trial adjourned for lunch at 12:59 p.m. The afternoon session began at 3:00 p.m., 9:30 a.m. EST) and is due to end at 5:30 p.m., the court announced.

Hausner reminded the three-judge court in the morning hearing that in 2,000 years of Jewish history there had been previous attempts to wipe the Jewish people off the face of the earth.

CANNOT BE PARDONED

Then, suddenly raising his voice and stabbing the air with his left hand, he said:

"There is no pardon and there can be no forgetting."

Eichmann looked a little haggard when he came into court on this second day. His wispy hair was slightly rumpled. Dark circles ringed his eyes. He coughed frequently.

Through most of the morning session, he sat still. He made only one or two pencilled notes on the paper in front of him.

The only time he showed any animation was in the moment before the judge came into the courtroom. Then, a spokesman through the private microphones in the glass-walled prisoner's dock, he exchanged a few words with his chief defence lawyer, Dr. Robert Servatius.

As her talked, Eichmann's face suddenly came alive. He seemed to be eagerly emphasizing a point.

DEFENDS COMPATRIOTS

Hausner spent the whole morning in argument designed to knock down the challenges Servatius made Tuesday of the court's and Israel's right to try Eichmann. The West German lawyer had contended that the Israeli law under which Eichmann is being tried was ex post facto—adopted after the alleged acts and that Eichmann was only an

COMMONS HEARS WEST FARMERS GET BETTER DEAL

East Wants Greater Share of Subsidies

OTTAWA (CP)—A latest feeling among many eastern MPs that the farmer in the West gets better treatment from the government than the farmer in the East bobbed to the surface in Commons debate Tuesday.

Samuel Boulanger, Liberal agricultural spokesman who represents the Quebec riding of Compton-Frontenac, complained that Prairie farmers receive a better deal than eastern farmers in the payment of federal farm subsidies. A fairer share of subsidies should be paid to eastern producers.

Mr. Boulanger said he was not criticizing the amount of subsidies paid to western farmers. What was needed was to bring eastern subsidies up to the same level.

He estimated that in 1960 western farmers received $77,000,000 in various forms of federal subsidies. If grants had been made to eastern farmers on the same basis they would have received $104,000,000.

RAISED IN 1958

The issue has not sprung so clearly into the open in the Commons since 1958 when Jean Drapeau — Besace) raised the matter.

The Canadian Federation of Agriculture has nearly split wide open once or twice on a similar issue: The price paid by eastern farmers for western feed grains.

This subject was also raised Tuesday in the Commons during

African Nations Submit Plan to Develop Continent

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—Responding to a United States invitation, 34 African countries today sought support for a broad program for the long-term social, technical and economic development of Africa under United Nations auspices.

The program resulted from a U.S. invitation to the African nations to draw up a blueprint for aid on a long-term basis. U.S. Ambassador Adlai Stevenson told the development project should be "by, of and for Africa."

Nigeria's Jaja Wachuku, introducing a resolution for the 99-member political committee Tuesday, thanked the U.S. and also extended thanks to the Soviet Union which last fall piloted through the UN a proposal for the freeing of all dependent territories.

A prime feature of the resolution is its emphasis that aid should be multi lateral and should have no political strings attached — that the cold war should be kept out of Africa.

The resolution envisages establishment of an economic development bank for Africa, an earlier recommended by the UN economic commission for Africa, establishment of an economic development institute with the assistance of the UN special fund, to train personnel in economic planning.

Initial reaction indicated that the U.S. would resist a provision asking that the 59-member UN trusteeship committee fix "target dates" for the granting of independence to trust territories and other non - self - governing areas. Canada also would disapprove such an approach, it was understood.

'Greatest Achievement In Man's History'

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Scientists throughout the world today heaped praise on their Soviet colleagues who won the race into space.

British scientists hailed the Russian rocketing of a cosmonaut into space and bringing him back safely to earth as one of the greatest triumphs in the history of mankind.

Sir Bernard Lovell, head of Britain's giant Jodrell Bank observatory, had described the launching of the spaceship as "the greatest achievement in the history of man."

The Jodrell Bank observatory, near Manchester — home of the world's largest radio-telescope — has tracked many Russian and American space probes.

Sir George Thomson, president of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, said:

"I think this is the date children will have to remember when they come to learn history in 50 or 100 years' time.

"I am sorry this has degenerated into a race," Thomson added. "I only hope this will not result in people being killed because this will vastly enrich his experience by physical contact with other worlds."

James Webb, director of the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Agency which was racing to beat the Russians, said the flight was a "splendid achievement . . . a significant event in terms of the Soviets' own timetable."

Webb, whose astronauts now are in training, said he hoped the Russians will provide the scientific community the information gained from the experiment.

At an international symposium in Florence, Italy, space scientists from throughout the world said Russia has achieved a great success.

"It is a great achievement but not unexpected," said H. C. Van de Hulst of The Netherlands.

Professor Hideo Itokawa, a Japanese rocket expert, said the Soviet launch takes "the first step of the long-range job of transporting humans to other planets than the earth."

President Kennedy congratulated the Soviet Union and said the United States' own space system is an ambition that the United States shares with Russia "and this is an important step toward that goal."

Lowell, in his statement, also praised the Russians for risking public failure in announcing the unmanned flight at the time of launching.

"Such a trial not announced that a man had been launched and been brought back after he was safely in space almost gave a running commentary on the operation.

"That indicates a most tremendous degree of confidence," Lord Hailsham, Britain's minister for science, said: "The warmest congratulations should go to the men responsible for the planning and execution of this historic flight."

One leading Russian space scientist said Russia's first astronaut "participated to a certain degree" in his return to earth.

A. A. Blagonravov, of the Soviet Academy of Science and chief Russian delegate to an international space science symposium in Florence, made the statement at a press conference. He said Gagarin was completely instructed on use of equipment in the space ship, "even how to make small repairs if necessary" during the flight.

'Feel Well, No Bruises' Says Red Major, 27, After Historic Flight

Circles Earth in 89 Minutes, Lands in Pre-Arranged Spot

(CP FROM AP-REUTERS)

MOSCOW — Russia fired a man into orbit around the earth today and brought him back unharmed after 108 minutes in space.

Maj. Juri Alekseyevich Gagarin made a little more than one complete orbit of the globe in a five-ton spaceship and then was brought down to a safe landing at pre-arranged spot in the Soviet Union.

"I feel well," he said as he emerged from the spaceship after landing. "I have no injuries or bruises."

Gagarin, a 27-year-old father of two young children, one of them born just a month ago, told the official Soviet news agency Tass that everything went as planned both during the flight and on the landing.

He said Tass reported his words "to the party and government and personally to Nikita Khrushchev."

The Soviet premier, holiday-ing at a Black Sea resort, sent a telegram to Gagarin saying: "I warmly congratulate you. I embrace you."

REPORTS FROM SPACE

The astronaut was put into orbit at 9:07 a.m. EST around the earth in 89.1 minutes. He reported by radio during the flight that he was "feeling well" and "withstanding the state of weightlessness well."

Russia followed up Gagarin's historic flight with a statement proclaiming her lead in the space race and appealing for world peace and disarmament.

The appeal, issued by the Communist party's central committee, the presidium of the Supreme Soviet, the government, the Soviet government, declared that Russia's space achievements "are not being put to the service of war but are designed for the peace and security of all people."

CIRCLED GLOBE

A statement from the Soviet government and the Communist party said the satellite-carrying ship Vostok (East), with Gagarin aboard, rose into outer space at 9:07 a.m. Moscow time (1:07 a.m. EST), "and successfully returned to the region of our homeland, the land of the Soviets."

Vostok landed at 10:55 a.m. Moscow time, 108 minutes after it left the earth, the Russians said. Neither the point of the takeoff nor the location of the landing was announced.

Soviet scientist watched Gagarin circle the globe "with devotion and he was in constant radio communication with a

SOME DIFFERENCE

LONDON (AP)—Fifty years ago, Igor A. Pachenko, Prince Peter, flew from London to Paris in four hours and eight minutes. This morning, a Soviet foundry worker, Yuri Gagarin, orbited the earth in a space ship in 89 minutes.

LONDON (CP) — For 108 awesome minutes today Russia's astronaut was the loneliest man in history.

Only a thin metal shell separated him from the utter blackness of space where the earth, sun, moon and stars hang in perpetual brilliance.

For 27-year-old Yuri Gagarin, it was like falling into a bottomless abyss as he became the first man to experience life away from the reassuring pull of earth's gravity.

He faced the possibility of a mental and physical torture unconceived by the worst of history's sadists.

Helpless, he must have braced for an error in radio control from earth.

FACED DEATH

If the rockets fired in the wrong direction, he could go looping into the void of space. If the rockets fired too abruptly, his five-ton spaceship would vanish in a bright streak across the sky, a mass of molten material from the friction of atmosphere.

A fault in his pressurized space cabin and space suit and he might "explode" in the total vacuum.

Failure of his oxygen supply could asphyxiate him. A fault in the air system and carbon dioxide would poison him.

There was also the faint chance a large meteorite streaking through space would smash into him.

But with the bump of a safe return to earth's gravity, the bite of parachutes into the air of earth, the young Russian knew he had made it.

'I FEEL WELL'

His first words were: "I feel well."

What was it like up there?

Science had a fairly good idea before Yuvarish Gagarin went aloft. The big worry was how Yuri Alekseyevich Gagarin take it!

Gagarin now knows.

He knows what it's like to weigh double his normal poundage or more on takeoff and then

Daily Worker Standing by Original Story

LONDON (AP) — The Daily Worker, Communist party paper in Britain, said today it is standing by its story that the Soviet Union launched a man into space last Friday.

A spokesman for the editor said:

"Our story came from good sources. All we know now is what we published today. Now of course there is this one."

By "this one," he referred to the announced flight of Maj. Yuri A. Gagarin, a pilot son of a collective farmer.

The Worker said in this morning's edition that the Russians sent an astronaut aloft last Friday on three trips round the world, brought him back alive, and then put him under treatment for after-effects. He was identified in the story as the test-pilot son of a top-ranking Soviet aircraft designer.

Ald. Opposes Sale of Property To Two Firms

Sale of sections of two street allowances to two local industries for token amounts drew spirited opposition and a threat of court action by an alderman at city council Monday passed by-law authorizing the closing of the streets and sale of the property.

The parcels of land were sold to Mead Johnson of Canada Ltd., and to Deloro Smelting and Refining Co. Ltd.

The sale to Mead Johnson covered part of the south end of Bleecker Ave., while the sale to Deloro Smelts was an undisclosed road allowance between that firm's property and their concessions. Deloro Smelts will owned property on both sides of the unopened road allowance.

Sales Opposed

In both instances the sale was for $1 but Alderman Jack Deacon said he was opposed to city property being sold for such a nominal sum.

"Council cannot give away city property like that," he said.

"Also, I know that Mead Johnson has property to the city at reasonable amount."

Referring to the unopened road allowance at the Deloro Smelite, Alderman Ross Bailey said he recalled the city paying $3,000 for CNR property in the same general area.

Mayor A. E. Baig pointed out that Mead Johnson had given property to the city for a reasonable amount."

Referring to the objection from Alderman Deacon the by-law was given its first three readings.

"I'm opposed," said the alderman and he will do something about it.

Broadcasting Code of Ethics Is Outlined

The Canadian Broadcasting Code of Ethics was the topic of the April luncheon meeting held by Mr. Frank Murray, manager of radio station CJBQ, when the CJBQ, to the Kiwanis Club at its weekly meeting yesterday.

Mr. Murray's address was well-known to the members of the club as well as to the citizens of Belleville and district, was introduced by Kiwanian Ken Hamblin, who, introduced on behalf of the members by Kiwanian Noble Maybood. President Dr. Robert Brush was in charge of the meeting.

Mr. Murray stated that radio is a dynamic means of communication, with peculiar qualities all its own, and that it is everywhere and has become a constant companion in this mobile society. Radio is immediate and delivers the big and small stories first. Radio creates activity with the listener and radio is not a total medium but encourages one to use one's imagination, to create pictures in the mind. Radio is not just a medium on the air but that radio is friendly people. CJBQ, he said, has 22 full time employees and six part-time and much of its revenue comes from other centres outside the Quinte District.

There are 163 private radio stations and television stations across Canada with which voluntarily pledging themselves to adhere to a common broadcasting code of ethics. Radio Station CJBQ is one of those 163 stations that are helping to write a page in broadcasting history.

Explains New Code

Mr. Murray went on to explain the new code of ethics and how it is going to affect the public and he gave the reasons why the private broadcasters in Canada feel that it is wanted at the present time. Both radio and television have become such an important part of the daily lives of millions of Canadians who cannot help but be affected by the type of programs that are broadcast and by the kind of business conduct that are followed.

It therefore has become essential that great care be taken to broadcast only in accord with the highest possible ethical standards — and there has never, until now, been one common code of ethics to which all broadcasters committed. There are now 11 clauses in the broadcasting code of ethics and none of them was drawn up overnight. A year of careful planning and hard work went into the preparation of the code and the public life is assured that it will be strictly enforced. A non-enforcement body is provided for less and defect the entire purpose.

The first clause deals with general programming so that the group in charge of programs viewers can have some time devoted to their special likes and deities. Clause two deals with children's programs and clause three is one of the most important steps taken, providing for the closest possible supervision in the selection and control of material. With the help of the commercial much can be accomplished in broadcasting the right type of programs. This is a very difficult thing for any broadcaster to decide for himself. Each of the adhering stations has promised to identify itself with worthwhile community activities. The news is to be presented with accuracy and without bias and attime is to be made available on controversial public issues. The private stations have to accept definite responsibility for religious programming. The code also has laid down regulations governing how to deal with employees and only the highest possible type of employees, those who are well qualified for their duties, will be hired.

In concluding, the speaker stated that no advertising that is unlawful or of ethics good taste could be accepted, and with the new advertisements code a big step forward in the broadcasting industry has been taken.

Kiwanian Bill Stewart led the members in a rousing sing-song accompanied at the piano by Don Kennedy.

The president welcomed back to the club Len Fonrod, who has been in hospital in Belleville, from a lengthy sickness. He also welcomed a precision to Kiwanian Ron Keel for his untiring efforts in connection with the Kinsmen Club. Mr. Keel in turn voiced appreciation to each and every member of the club who had helped in any way to make Saturday night such a success. Kiwanians George Hume and Ralph Graham spoke briefly regarding the Rallies to be held in May. Kiwanian Gerry Wishart announced that there would be a special agricultural program on April 15th when Mr. Fryan's ruling Club would be the speaker. Kiwanian Don Ross announced that a conference regarding the inter-club meeting to be held this coming week-end in Watertown and other U.S. centres.

Opposition Leader Pearson tried to have a House committee authorized to conduct public hearings on the Macpherson royal commission report on Canada's railway problems.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker "was all impressed" by the suggestion—said he could "not help but" do so where a royal commission report had been submitted to a Commons committee for study.

Members talked out a private member's bill by Arnold Peters (CCF—Timiskaming) to establish a minimum wage of $1.25 an hour for workers under federal jurisdiction.

Prairie Conservative Ed Nasserden, Rosthern, and Jack McIntosh, Assiniboia, Liberal, clashed in a bid to upset a ruling by Deputy Speaker Jacques Flynn over debate on the Canadien Wheat Board.

Mr. Flynn's ruling, which was called after the CCF appealed Mr. Flynn's ruling that debate on the wheat board was out of order during consideration of an item to just a resolution in the main estimates dealing with the Canadian Wheat Board, continues Wednesday, April 12 .

The Commons meets at 2:30 p.m. EST to continue debate on departmental estimates; the House is adjourned until April 24.

Uniform System Eskimo Spelling To Be Launched

OTTAWA (CP) — A new uniform system of Eskimo spelling will be launched in June with the training of 100 Eskimos from the main Eskimo dialect areas.

The system — or orthography — in the Roman letters used by Eskimos speaking peoples has had trial runs for the last year. Its purpose will be to clarify Eskimo spelling for Eskimos and non-Eskimos who are helping to write a page in broadcasting history.

Will 'Ignore' Cottrell Park Because of Vandalism

TRENTON — Parks gardener Bart Boers reported to the Board of Parks management last night that vandals once again are at work in Cottrell Park on Trenton's east side.

Mr. Boers said that tree guards, valued at $20 each, had been ripped up. Hedges have been trampled and small trees have been either broken down or their tops have been cut off.

Board member Clyde Mason suggested that if people living in the area of the park were allowing the destruction to go on and convenient "forgetting" having seen the vandals at work, that the board ignore the park in the future.

Said chairman E. M. Parker Jr., "The people in that area raised a great hue and cry a while back that they were 'the forgotten people' . . . where are they now?"

Mr. Boers reminded the board that last year he had planted two beds of flowers one afternoon and returned the next day to find that the flowers had been wilted away. He also reminded them that last year vandals had removed a heavy wood bench set in concrete blocks, from the park and set it in the middle of the street.

The board agreed generally to "ignore" the park this year.

Present at last night's meeting were Mr. Parker, Mr. Mason, Mr. Boers, Norman Armstrong and John Saylor, treasurer.

Miss Marion Baker, secretary, and William Ireland were unable to be present. In the absence of Miss Baker, Mr. Armstrong acted as secretary.

Mr. Mason said that he had got no further in his inquiries regarding prices for a paved road running up Mount Pelion. Last month he reported that one contractor had nailed a $2,000 price for the work.

Mr. Parker asked if some less expensive way could not be found to make the road next and passable.

Only Answer

Mr. Mason said that paving was the only answer because of erosion from water coming down from the top of the mountain. He said that one taxpayer had asked him if the board really meant to spend $9,000 of the public's money on a road up the mountain when Division Street needed paving so badly.

The chairman said that each town department was free to spend the money allocated to its needs in any way department members thought expedient. However, he asked Mr. Mason to get several opinions on the cost and method of improving the mountain road.

The board will meet next month with members of the Trenton and Suburban Planning Board concerning proposed waterfront development. The planning board has suggested that the parks' board be responsible for development in the waterfront area. Members of the parks board feel that this work could not be undertaken until the land is turned over to the board.

Mr. Orlaf Aiyes of the yacht club committee had written to the board asking for a $500 donation towards future work of his committee. Part of parks property fronts on the yacht basin area. Mr. Parker said that members should at least give some thought to improving the land owned by the board in this area.

It was decided to wait until the first full meeting of the board before committing to any action in this matter.

Other items discussed were the possibility of planting trees in the parks allowance at the Klemenecic subdivision and the method to be used this year to fertilize park areas.

COMMON VACATION

Because replacements for skilled workers are not available, the entire Swiss watchmaking industry takes its vacation at the same time.

Will Elect Chamber Head On April 25th

TRENTON — The first annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce will be held April 25, when officers for 1961-62 will be elected.

A nominating committee comprised of vice-president Ben Kroese, George Kempf and Harold Pearce was appointed at a directors' meeting Monday night. Other nominations will be accepted from the floor at the general meeting. Only paid up members of the chamber will be eligible to vote. There now are 60 paid up members.

Charter president Douglas Whitley announced that he will not seek office this year. Mr. Whitley said that his duties as provincial director of the Air Cadet League of Canada would preclude activity in the chamber. He said that on April 17 he would meet with Premier Frost's secretary to discuss certain matters pertaining to the Trenton area, with emphasis on the tourist traffic.

F. R. Bailey, guidance officer at Trenton High School, has asked the chamber to supply interested speakers to address the students on various vocations, one day a week.

Ian Darling reported that a design for an attractive chamber member lapel button had not been decided and this matter will be tabled until the new executive takes over.

Sr/L John Cutbill said that progress had been made in arranging for the printing and distribution of place mats which will advertise the Trenton area to tourists. Mr. Darling will arrange details regarding printing. It is estimated 30,000 placemats mats could be used by local and area hotels and motels this summer.

The more than 200 members of the Travelling Caravan from the United States will be invited to spend two or three days in the Trenton area this summer. Doug Whitley, Mike Gartner and Harold Pearce were appointed to work on this project with Doug Whitley who knows the Caravan principals personally.

On March 23, Cooney's car struck a parked car owned by J. C. Dobby of Trenton, causing rear end damage amounting to $250.

Police said Cooney did not stop after the accident occurred. In court he said that he had hit a chunk of ice. The right front fender of his own car was torn off by the impact.

4-H Calf Club Elects Officers

The first meeting of the Belleville 4-H Calf Club was held recently at the 4th Line Community Hall.

Mr. Patterson explained the rules and regulations of the club to the members and conducted the election of officers who are: president, Bob Hannon; vice-president, Fred Phillips; secretary, Sharon Lewis; press reporter, Jane Dinsmore.

The next meeting will be held on May 2nd at the Community Hall.

What the Deputy Minister Said

In view of an editorial we published last week, commenting on a report by James Band, Ontario deputy minister of welfare, and a subsequent letter dealing with this editorial, by G. A. Whiteman, Belleville's welfare administrator, readers might be interested in learning precisely what Mr. Band did say. A copy of his annual report to the Minister of Welfare has now reached this desk. We find that Mr. Band was not suggesting, as we interpreted the Canadian Press report, that the Criminal Code should be revised to make desertion a crime, but rather that he contends an existing section of the code could be considered to cover desertions and prosecutions could be launched under it. On the other hand, it seems to us that Mr. Band does not suggest that all who desert their families should be treated as criminals. We shall, however, let the reader judge that point for himself, being content to quote the relevant parts of Mr. Band's report.

"I wonder in cases of abandonment — and that is what desertion is, particularly where children are involved — whether we should not consider that a criminal offence has been committed. If so, Section 185 of the Criminal Code describes the type of person with whom we are dealing. The terms 'abandon' or 'expose,' for example, are defined as including:

"(1) a wilful cessation to take charge of a child by a person who is under a legal duty to do so, and (2) dealing with a child in a manner that is likely to leave that child exposed to risk without protection'.

"In the first instance, it is probably a proper step to have deserting husbands dealt with under the Deserted Wives' and Children's Maintenance Act of Ontario. When there is a repetition of the offence, or a failure on the part of the man to provide financially for his family as ordered by the court, then a criminal charge might be laid.

"Where it is found that a couple cannot live together without exposing children to emotional and, sometimes, physical hardships, and in certain other cases of marital discord, the Family Court judge, under The Deserted Wives' and Childrens' Maintenance Act, can weigh the evidence in the best interests of all concerned.

"But desertion and abandonment of children are cowardly and thoughtless offences. I need not dwell on the unhappiness which is created in a household when a man fails to meet his basic legal responsibilities. The major effects of desertion and abandonment are related to the financial hardships which cause children to suffer. More than that, the deserter shirks his own responsibilities on neighbors and other taxpayers of the community at large."

With this viewpoint, there can be no quarrel by any reasonable person, for Mr. Band is careful to recognize that in certain cases separation is in the best interests of all concerned.

Novel Summer School Program

With the Easter holidays over, scholars and teachers in Ontario schools are now entering the final lap of the school year. Ahead of them, like a pot of gold at the end of the rainbow, lie the summer holidays. But not all of them, scholars or teachers, will loaf. Some will work. And among the teachers, many will return to school. Most of them, we imagine would willingly change their lot for the "summer school" program of 55 English teachers. They are not going to study but to teach — but their teaching will be done in Nigeria.

When the British Ministry of Education in London recently asked for 55 teachers to conduct courses for Nigerian teachers this summer, two or three times the desired number indicated their willingness to go. They will be in Nigeria for five to nine weeks. Besides being of inestimable value in a country where nine-tenths of the primary school teachers and more than half the secondary school teachers have not had the training they need for their tasks, the English teachers will enjoy a memorable experience and will, we suspect, later attempt to share their first-hand knowledge of the newest independent African member of the Commonwealth with their own students at home.

This is a type of summer school program in which, we imagine, many Canadian teachers would be eager to participate, to the mutual profit of all concerned.

Everywhere water is a thing of beauty gleaming in the dewdrop; singing in the summer rain; singing in the ice-gems till the leaves all seem to turn to living jewels; spreading a golden veil over the setting sun; or a white gauze around the midnight moon.—John Ballantine Gough.

War Often Brings Out Best in Man

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

It is a great disappointment to learn that a peaceful period no life anywhere else in our whole solar system. What this world needs, more than anything else, is a good scare — the threat of invasion from another planet — nothing short of that will unite the human race.

The central problem of society is to find essential ones how to arouse and sustain feelings of affection and loyalty in constructive situations, and not merely in destructive ones.

Only when we are threatened by some external peril do we feel free to display what Gordon Allport calls our "affiliative tendencies."

We affiliate only under pressure from the outside. A war brings us closer together; so does a disaster, or any kind. With all its horrors, society felt a real thrill of communion binding together in the bomb shelters; people were kind to one another; everyone behaved during such an emergency as Europeans never do at this time.

War, curiously enough, brings out the best in human nature. A study of U.S. soldiers in combat disclosed that fewer than one-third were motivated by "hate for the enemy," while more than half were motivated by loyalty and "not letting my buddies down."

Everyone is remarked on the deep satisfaction that is felt in isolation, when all are trapped in a snowstorm. There is a common foe to fight; rivalries relax; animosity and self-sacrifice spring up spontaneously. People almost thank God for providing for some drastic situation which will permit them to display their better natures.

Thus far, the human race has been able to exploit this emotion in a constructive situation, but only when disaster goes it seems as if we can only be united against, and not united for. It takes the worst to bring out the best in us — this is the bitter paradox at the heart of our civilization.

I am sure that nothing less than fear of invasion from another planet would unite the forces of the world, for although it is pain to most scientists and clergy of pacific temperament that unites we unite we shall all perish, or come so close to it. But we won't make much difference.

More than a half-century ago, William James acutely observed that the prime task of mankind "is to find some moral equivalent for war" — that is, to find some positive, creative goal that will motivate our loyalty, generosity and affection, without the same time directing hate toward any other group. It remains mankind's prime task, and time is running out on us.

In Defence of Cliches

By Dan Bergor in the New York World-Telegram and Sun

A cliche is a sign of bad writing, bad speaking and lazy thinking.

But there's another side to the coin. A cliche is usually the best, most colorful and exact way to express what has been used so much the meaning is forgotten. Let's give this dwell look, shall we?

And let's look at the facts. The word cliche isn't even English. The French have a word for it — so we use theirs. Talk about lazy thinking.

You can't pronounce cliche in English. You have to say klee-shay, in French.

A cliche is defined in English as "an hackneyed expression, which means over-worked, vaguely. Well, about seven or eight years ago, Harry Gresham had horses for drudge work in the town of Hackney, Middlesex, England.

An hackneyed word, then is as tired and overworked as an old nag pulling a market wagon. That's a workaday thing, but how many people who use it know it?

Hackneyed expression, just between us hacks, is a good example of a hackneyed expression.

Beggars mounted run their horses to death-(Shakespeare.) Which shows how brave; blame the beggar riding it.

Familiarity breeds contempt, as much now as when Cervantes said it. But a cliche takes on a rich meaning when you listen to it as if for the first time.

Think what it really means to be stabbed in the back, you know, with a real dagger. Or suppose you've John Wayne, sex, and everything you have is riding on roulette, the wheel spins—and you're dead broke.

Pretend you own a race horse or maybe a political candidate. You have a fighting chance, it's all or nothing, and then the word leaks you'r opponents got on the big boys — the fix is on.

Wonderful expressions when fresh. The old cliches are much the best, however. Many are older than Methuselah.

Sour grapes can be traced back to Greek slave Aesop, or the Hebrew prophet Jeremiah (strange bedfellows) but they still set the children's teeth on edge.

Many of the finest cliches in the English language were written by Miguel de Cervantes, in Spanish, 350 years ago.

Thanks for nothing, wild goose chase, swift as a witch on a broomstick, small a rat, birds of a feather, proof of the pudding is in the eating, there's a noose, born with a silver spoon in, pot calling the kettle back, and mum's the word.

But take that with a grain of salt (also Cervantes.) Those were probably Spanish cliches in good standing when he immortalized them.

Good writers avoid cliches, but fine writers stand alone and don't worry about them, while great writers create cliches for the ages.

They are a breed apart.

Letter To the Editor

Urges Horticultural Body in This City

Editor,

Ontario Intelligencer:

Why is there not a horticultural society in Belleville?

This was one of the questions asked by the superintendent of floriculture, Horticultural Societies, F.A. Lashley. He was giving the annual report of the Societies' convention held recently in Hamilton with around one thousand persons attending from all parts of Ontario.

With the international plowing match being held in Hastings County this year, and with the entire area visited by thousands of tourists, it was felt that a horticultural society could serve a very useful purpose — giving impetus to a clean-up and beautification campaign.

Similarly horticultural societies in Trenton, Deseronto and other areas could form similar important roles in community life.

There are 211 horticultural societies in Ontario. Many have a membership totalling close to 40,000. These societies planned a result over 167,000 varying degrees) the formation of new societies, the revitalizing of old ones, or the construction of the tube at some point.

One remarkable symptom is painful urination. There may be a burning pain when the urine is passed in the urine, or there may be such traces but they are so slight as to be detectable only by laboratory tests. But a pronounced sign is one that the inflamation is caused by some germ. For that reason, it is worth the while to try to identify (again by lab tests) the germ, and if it can be done it is possible to choose an antibiotic.

Some societies stage interesting competitions for prizes and the larger societies include Guelph with 1683 members; Toronto, 1246; Hamilton, 994; Chatham, 668; Orillia, 634; Ottawa, 733.

However, societies with much smaller memberships can give good results. Leadership and undertake projects which benefit the community.

In those communities where there is no horticultural Society, enquiries will be welcomed from interested persons. These enquiries may be addressed to the writer at Picton or to Mrs. J. S. Shepherdson, R.R. 1, Kingston, who is Provincial Director of the Horticultural Societies Branch Ontario Department of Agriculture, in Toronto.

Through horticultural societies individuals and groups have the opportunity of learning of new varieties, how to grow plants, how to arrange flower plantings, roses, shrubs and hedges, landscaping, the care of lawns and kindred subjects which are of help to all who love flowers.

Then, on a wider scale, there is the community betterment program. Cemeteries, playgrounds, or undertakes itself, the planting of trees, shrubs and flowers in parks, or on church or school grounds. They promote general beautification and cleanup campaigns.

The several societies in this area have splendid records of achievement. Many have lectures and demonstrations at meetings; they hold flower shows; sponsor bus trips to other districts; distribute bulbs and plants among themselves, and give attention to plant shrubs and flowers in public places. They create beauty spots from unsightly places.

The Prince Edward County Horticultural Society which I have the privilege of serving as president, has as its motto: "Make the world better, not better, and a little more beautiful because you have lived in it." All can do their part in live up to this motto by becoming a member of a horticultural society, and by actively taking steps to see that one is organized in your community.

It is worthwhile work, which affords much pleasure to all who participate.

Picton, Ont.

Why Prairie Is Treeless

Fort-Arthur News-Chronicle

Why are the western prairies comparatively lacking in trees?

The question has long interested a good many Canadians, who have regarded the extension of these wide open spaces as a feasible proposition.

Actually, some effort has been made and some progress achieved in this direction, but studies latterly conducted by University of Saskatchewan have thrown light on the reasons behind the treeless prairies.

According to Dr. R. T. Coupland, head of the department of Plant Ecology, there has been a widely held notion that the entire prairie is potential forest. Early settlers recorded the fact that there were few trees when they arrived and before the turn of the century. Then, over the years groves of trees began to appear, leading people to think that climate and other conditions were such as to encourage much more tree growth in a short time. Thus, it was said, even geographers have come to believe that the prairies naturally and will eventually become forests.

But studies of a Ph.D student in his department have revealed facts do not conform to this belief.

The student, Jagmohan Singh Kukal of India, submitted his findings as partial requirements for the doctor of philosophy degree, which he has since been granted. He is now doing work in connection with the university's Institute for Northern Studies.

Mr. Kukal's work has shown that trees have been able to invade only the northern edges of the prairie region since settlement. The soil in this region is black; indicating that it was formerly covered by deciduous forest in the absence of forest. Evidence of fires has been found out of this 50 to 100 mile wide zone in the years before there was human population.

The trees were able to spread widely after fires were prevented by the fact that people came into settle the area and brought ploughs and other improvements.

In the dried, southwestern portion of Saskatchewan and southeastern Alberta, the climate is by no means suited to growth of trees except in depressions and on northbending slopes. Trees have resorted to shrub size by the fires before settlement. Since then these have increased in height but have not been able to spread into the dry prairie.

Trees died not occur in drier areas before settlement, they have not appeared because of the inability to procure seedlings in prairie climate.

Chronic Urethritis Reported Generally Caused by a Germ

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Would you discuss the condition called chronic inflammation of the urethra? It is something I never heard of before, and doesn't seem to be generally known. — Mrs. F. B."

Doctors do discuss it, because it is fairly common among women and hence important. However, it doesn't deserve a very good drawing room conversation.

Neither is it one of the "dramatic" diseases, so it doesn't get a lot of publicity.

Sometimes it seems to me that every 1,000 words published about the "dramatic" health problems, there ought to be at least 10 words about the every-day problems that can make people miserable.

Similarly horticultural societies in Trenton, Deseronto and other areas could form similar important roles in community life.

There are 211 horticultural societies in Ontario. Many have a membership totalling close to 40,000. These societies planned a result over 167,000 varying degrees) the formation of new societies, the revitalizing of old ones, or the construction of the tube at some point.

One remarkable symptom is painful urination. There may be a burning pain when the urine is passed in the urine, or there may be such traces but they are so slight as to be detectable only by laboratory tests. But a pronounced sign is one that the inflamation is caused by some germ. For that reason, it is worth the while to try to identify (again by lab tests) the germ, and if it can be done it is possible to choose an antibiotic.

Some societies stage interesting competitions for prizes and the larger societies include Guelph with 1683 members; Toronto, 1246; Hamilton, 994; Chatham, 668; Orillia, 634; Ottawa, 733.

However, societies with much smaller memberships can give good results. Leadership and undertake projects which benefit the community.

In those communities where there is no horticultural Society, enquiries will be welcomed from interested persons. These enquiries may be addressed to the writer at Picton or to Mrs. J. S. Shepherdson, R.R. 1, Kingston, who is Provincial Director of the Horticultural Societies Branch Ontario Department of Agriculture, in Toronto.

Through horticultural societies individuals and groups have the opportunity of learning of new varieties, how to grow plants, how to arrange flower plantings, roses, shrubs and hedges, landscaping, the care of lawns and kindred subjects which are of help to all who love flowers.

Then, on a wider scale, there is the community betterment program. Cemeteries, playgrounds, or undertakes itself, the planting of trees, shrubs and flowers in parks, or on church or school grounds. They promote general beautification and cleanup campaigns.

The several societies in this area have splendid records of achievement. Many have lectures and demonstrations at meetings; they hold flower shows; sponsor bus trips to other districts; distribute bulbs and plants among themselves, and give attention to plant shrubs and flowers in public places. They create beauty spots from unsightly places.

The Prince Edward County Horticultural Society which I have the privilege of serving as president, has as its motto: "Make the world better, not better, and a little more beautiful because you have lived in it." All can do their part in live up to this motto by becoming a member of a horticultural society, and by actively taking steps to see that one is organized in your community.

It is worthwhile work, which affords much pleasure to all who participate.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

OPPORTUNITY

Certainly this America of ours has been a land of opportunity. James J. Hill, the late railroad prince of a small hotel, came to this country penniless in 1856, and before he was forty years of age had, with several associates, bought up the unfaulted bonds of the St. Paul and Pacific railroad and had begun the Great Northern System. From that time until his death he was one of the outstanding figures in American finance. When he died he was not only one of the most successful men in the country.

What was the secret of his success? Hard work and sterling character. He coined a phrase, "The educated conscience," by which he signified the necessity of supporting all moral judgments with definite knowledge as to what is right and what is wrong. His wise maxim touched upon many subjects. When at the age of twenty he left school in order not to burden his mother and went to work in a country store, probably no one suspected that this bright youngster would some day have such power in the financial world. His natural ability was probably the ability of one in many thousands, but his hard work and character led him to develop gifts which many equally gifted men have neglected.

ART FOR SCHOOL — Reproduction of painting "Le Lac D'Annecy" by French artist Cessieux is seen being admired by Mrs. Victor DePaul and Bernard Wright, principal of Avondale public school. Mrs. DePaul, chairman of the fine arts committee of the Avondale Home and School Association, presented the picture to the school on behalf of her Association.

He has seen a sky that is black, not blue. Night and day in one full cycle of 24 hours on earth consumed only 90 minutes aloft for him.

THIRST MANOEUVRE

The Russians knows with the conscious will of man what the two Soviet dogs Strelka and Belka were unable to impart: A curious gradual descent which had to be started over another continent in order to effect a landing in the Soviet Union. This operation was so complex the astronaut was not allowed to take part in it. A mistake of one yard a second in the adjusting speed would have hurled the rocket 30 miles from its landing zone.

The astronaut's replies during the flight demonstrated that one group of scientists did not develop. That was the prospect that the space man would be so overwhelmed he would have no thoughts left.

Here was a man who saw no up or down. The sun, moon and stars went past in three quarters of an hour. The stars did not twinkle and really never disappeared. Like a seattle curtain simulating a changeless "sky."

One thing Gagarin knew quickly. He had done something no man ever had before. It was like inventing the wheel.

Avondale School Given Copy of Famous Painting

Mr. W. Townson, vice-chairman of the Belleville public school board, attended the regular meeting of the Avondale Home and School Association last night for a special presentation, on behalf of the school board, the gift of a reproduction of a landscape painted by Cezanne. Mrs. V. DePaul, chairman of the art committee, presented the picture as the first of five National Gallery reproductions planned to be purchased for Avondale School by its Home and School Association.

Mr. Lloyd Doran, director of Belleville Recreation Commission, was the speaker. He described for Home and School members the vigorous and imaginative program of recreation conducted in Belleville.

With a modest budget and in limited quarters, the recreation commission sponsors a diversity of activities with broad appeal.

The Belleville Minor Sports Association, formed by the Recreation Commission, organizing the activities of the 2,000 Belleville boys and the 100 men who assist in keeping the boys actively engaged in organized sport. This organization includes 1130 young hockey players in 40 teams, and over 30 soccer, baseball and softball teams.

The limited space occupied by the Recreation Centre, was in use 301 evenings last year. Mr. Doran explained the recentre offers club facilities for groups ranging in age and interest from the Quinte Young Timers to the Senior Citizens and from the Chess Club to the High-Fi Club.

The stimulating and positive contribution the Recreation Commission makes to community living in Belleville is apparent in the enthusiastic response accorded the Santa Claus telephone program, and in the commission sponsored Teen Town's Christmas project. Last year, Teen Town members provided toys for children in hospital and assisted in their distribution at the conclusion of the Santa Claus parade.

ARTS PROGRAM

Mr. Doran outlined the Arts and Crafts policy of the Recreation Commission as one of leading and providing space for and instruction in all arts and crafts in which citizens of Belleville are interested. These classes include ceramics, oil painting, leatherwork, mosaics and the whole variety of arts and crafts which permit self-expression.

Almost one-half of the Recreation Commission budget supports the summer playground program. This program provides supervised play and directed activity for 4,364 Belleville children. Last summer the program included, for the first time, a playground for retarded children.

The 18 playgrounds have a combined average daily attendance of 1,127 throughout the summer holidays.

Mr. Doran was thanked by Mrs. H. Healy, vice-president. At the conclusion of the meeting, lunch was served by Mrs. K. Herenden and Mrs. A. Dossing.

NEW TRADE

Europe than if she remains aloof from Europe? In the latter case, he implied, the United Kingdom market might prove a declining market, relatively speaking.

The question is, what would be best for the Commonwealth countries themselves?" he asked.

Just as Mr. Macmillan's Hitchcraty Monday was heavy with formality, Tuesday the keynote was informality. At least three times the British leader made unscheduled detours in his speaking.

In the morning, before showing up for a meeting with the Canadian cabinet, he and Belleville Garner toured Parliament Hill in a Rolls Royce. Afterward they and Sir Norman Brook, secretary to the British cabinet, went for a stroll around Parliament Hill, and then walked—instead of driving—down Wellington Street to the Chateau Laurier where Mr. Macmillan delivered a luncheon address to the Canadian Club.

In the afternoon, Mr. Macmillan showed up at the Rideau Club, of which he has long been a member, for an impromptu visit.

The prime minister said in his luncheon address that young Britons who demonstrate for nonviolence would quickly answer the call to the colors if war broke out. He advised his listeners against being misled by ban-the-bomb movements in Britain.

At the press conference, Mr. Macmillan said it would be "quite wrong" for him to ask Canada to open the door to more migrants from the British West Indies, British newspapers had suggested that he would urge Mrs. Diefenbaker to allow more West Indians into Canada, in order to reduce the flow to Britain.

Mr. Macmillan said he knew Commonwealth countries would do all they could to help with the problem, subject to their own internal difficulties. Both prime ministers denied any pressure was exerted on Canada to admit more West Indians.

Mixed Bonspiel At Curling Club Real Success

Another successful season of curling rolled into history at the Quinte Curling Club recently when the mixed bonspiel followed by a supper and dance was conducted under the direction of the chairman of this event, Pete Acton. The spiel ran for nearly a week and was on a knockout basis and some excellent curling was witnessed.

The members competed for the Northern Electric trophy and this beautiful cup will remain in the possession of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Murphy and Mr. and Mrs. Ken LeFlein for the season. This rink curled well, had some close squeaks but beat all comers. The runners-up were Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Wolfenden and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Gault.

In the second event the winners were Mrs. Pat Ross, Bill Downing with Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Wilkinson and the runners-up were Mrs. Mavis McLean, Dave Tobe with Mr. and Mrs. Dave Duffy.

The third event was won by Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Morrows with Dr. and Mrs. Finlay McCorquodale while the runners-up were Mr. and Mrs. Geneva Muir, Ken Bolford with Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Murray.

The fourth event was headed by Dr. and Mrs. Peter Loder with Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Green while the runners-up were Mr. and Mrs. Gil Wambolt with Mrs. Alice Hyame and Charles Cox.

Following the last game a delicious buffet luncheon was served and the clubhouse was then cleared of furniture and a social dance was enjoyed to the wee hours of the morning.

The annual meeting of the Curling Club will be held on Thursday, April 27th and at this time it is expected another splendid financial statement will be given. This is a meeting where all the members should attend and voice their opinions on any matters to come before the meeting.

Aqua Divers Club Launch Floating Platform in Bay

Sunday afternoon 12 of the 30 member club launched the new platform from Zwick's Island following which five of the more hardy members went for a dip in the murky waters of the bay just west of the bay bridge.

Purchased last fall the pontoon craft was renovated in the garage of a club member during the winter months and Sunday afternoon was officially launched. The eight by 15 foot platform is surrounded by a three-foot railing with buildup chest around the perimeter to hold diving gear. It is powered by a five horsepower outboard.

The floating platform will be anchored at Barcoven beach at Presqu'ile Point for the summer operations of the diving club.

Earl Dicknoether, one of the Quinte Aqua Divers to try out the new craft Sunday said he was down for about 30 minutes. Water temperature was about 40 degrees and very murky.

Gananoque Beats Picton

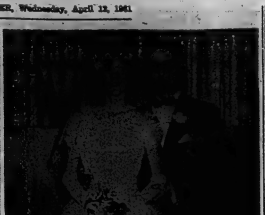
'Artisan Night' Enjoyed by Chi Rho Club

The Christ Church Chi Rho fellowship concluded its season's activities in the finest European custom on Saturday evening, when in their own parish hall last Wednesday evening, Evelyn Warwick Reg. Nurse with "Bustle" chef, Don Butcher, "complete with cap and apron" provided the members with a delicious Italian spaghetti and meat ball dinner with all the trimmings.

Following the dinner, president, Val Warwick, announced the forthcoming meeting of the interest will be an "Artisan Night" when the group will commence on a new project. He also announced that the fellowship had been invited to attend a get-together at Bolingway United Church on Wednesday, the 26th of April, as guests of the Bongard Club. At this point, appetites having been appeased, all present joined in the singing of hymns before retiring to the upstairs hall for checkers.

Ginger ale bottles, with the melted wax of the candles they held, formed the base for attractive table decorations, the flowered placemats, finished with wooden sticks, dide chocolate cheese; celery; varieties of pickles and spices, topped with the glow of the candles and the warm fellowship, created a setting atmosphere that can not often be equalled.



DANCING ENJOYED

The mood of the evening set, the fellowship members settled down to the floor dance contest with the musical offerings as presented with little flare for novelty dances. However two spot dances were held with Jean and Merv Lemon, Marilyn Crozier and Ross Cavelier winning prizes.

Later in the evening, coffee and cookies were served after which the president closed the meeting.

Due to the nature of the program, the recreation period for the night was not held. Therefore, the team and individual standings remained unchanged, so will give interested sportsmen and women, of course, a chance to still come out and stay up with the pack.

Recreation will be on the slate for next Wednesday's meeting.

ANDERSON — STINSON

St. Albans Anglican Church Ameliasburg, Ontario, was the setting for a lovely spring wedding on Monday, April 3rd, at high noon, when Helen Margaret Stinson, of Ameliasburg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Stinson, became the bride of Gary Earle Anderson, of Belleville, R. R. 4, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earle Anderson. Tall standards of pink snapdragons, white Cecils lilies and yellow chrysanthemums adorned the sanctuary, and while Rector Illing, the altar. The guest pews were designated with white satin bows.

Mrs. Arthur Corfield, church organist, provided the wedding music, and accompanied the soloist, Mrs. E. T. Casson, in her rendition of "The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden", before the ceremony and "O Perfect Love", during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiantly lovely in her full-length bridal gown of white silk organza over taffeta with basque bodice, featuring a Sabrina neckline and shirred cap sleeves. The necklace and skirt were enhanced by appliques of re-embroidered Alencon lace. Self buttons accented the back of the bodice. She wore white organza gloves, and carried a matching headdress of lace studded with seed pearls, topped by a single white rose, with elbow - length scalloped illusion bulle veil, and carried a white lace-covered Bible crested with pink Sweetheart rosebuds and white satin streamers knotted with white wedding bells. A single strand of cultured pearls with matching earrings, the gift of her bridegroom, completed her costume

Mrs. Douglas Wilkin, of Trenton, R. R. 2, sister of the bride, as matron of honor, and Miss Janice Tait, of Ameliasburg, as bridesmaid, were gowned alike in turquoise taffeta gum-silk organza over taffeta, featuring fitted bodices with pictorial necklines forming tiny shoulder sleeves. The bouffant skirts were gracefully full. They wore matching headdresses, gloves and shoes and carried bouquets of pink Sweetheart rosebuds surrounded by white and mauve-tinted mums. Single strands of pearls with matching earrings, gifts of the bride, added a lovely accent to their costumes.

The little flower girl, Wendy Anderson, niece of the bride-groom, was frocked in turquoise silk organza over taffeta, with tiny white lace headdress. She also carried a similar nosegay to those of the other attendants, and wore a gold signet ring, the gift of the bride.

The bridegroom's gifts to his groomsmen and his ushers were worded.

The reception was held at Club Caverly, Belleville, where the bridal table was daintily appointed with white damask cloth, centred with a three-tier wedding cake adorned with pink rosebuds and topped with two white doves bearing gold wedding rings beneath an arch of pink and white roses. Tall pink and white candles in tri-branched crystal holders, and the bridal bouquet completed the nuptial setting.

For the wedding trip to Montreal and the New England States the bride chose a mint-green polished cotton dress and accessories, and corsage of yellow roses.

Guests attended from Galt; Norwich; Toronto; Cobourg; Campbellford; Brighton; Napanee; Belleville and Ameliasburg.

The bride was entertained, previous to her marriage by a stag and stag party, held at the home of Mrs. E. T. Casson, Ameliasburg, at a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. Wilfred Beaudrie with Mrs. Walter Nykilleyk, as cohostess.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson are residing at 44A Grove St. Belleville.

This - - - and That

By HARRIET STEVENS

Though most of us have repeated Dorothy Parker's words at least three times in the last few months — "It Winter comes, can Spring be far behind?" — precisely this last evidence of winter will define just how long is the spring. With all the false starts, we will welcome the profusion of colors to be offered us by fashions and other lines.

In a leading style book we saw a creation made up mostly of a light cerise color with a wide band of flame, almost as high as the hips, and a narrower band of light chartreuse at the bottom. It was startling to say the least. Then tell us that is only the beginning. Fashion experts have gone wild with color — you can be as gay as the flowers in your garden and then some. Lilac and lavender are prevalent, with watermelon and flamingo popular in the pink tones. There are many shades of green, too, such as pastel seafoam, and splendid whites in a host of shades. Neutral bone shade is still very popular and is very smart to blending with any outfit.

Handbags are soft in styling and the leathers, leathers and plastics are soft, in range of many colors. Also the large, useful bag for travelling is the tiny "pickwick bag. Most of the handbag shades can be repeated in shoes as these two articles are matched in most COLORED HOSE

We hear that the hosiery manufacturers are offering colored stockings again. A few years ago they came on the market but did not seem to find widespread favor. To tell a bored to dilute these fashion trends considerably.

Color in certain foods has been on the controversial list for a long time. However most housewives know that eyepleasing food is very important, and the cheese dishes, table cloths and flowers for a colorful setting. When planning her menus provide serving pale vegetables such as cauliflower or parsnips with white fish and use tomatoes or peppers to give a dash of color to white.

Modern methods of food processing give us a varied and full range of the round but they also weaken the natural color of food. The manufacturers must add coloring that will please the eye and not destroy the quality of the food. Purchasers look askance at unnatural color in food which, or it be too bright or too pale. To safeguard against altered food value in quality, the Food and Drugs Act is stringent and permits the use of only harmless food coloring. Into the bargain there is a system of government inspection to check on the coloring additives in the food industry here.

NEW COLOR SOURCES

The old vegetables, mineral and insect sources of food dyes are available in large scale food manufacture and synthetic dye-stuffs have largely replaced them. Modern coloring additives provide lemon yellow shades for general purposes — confectionery, lemonade crystals and pickles, deeper yellow shades for fruit cakes, pudding powders and confectionery and pale reds, cherries.

Most foods are required by law to state on the label if they contain coloring additives. There are exceptions, however, and they include butter, cheese, confectionery, ice cream and soft drinks. In Canada, the housewife may feel safe in the products she buys, it makes her food appear so appetizing is also pure and harmless.

White Cane Club Holds Social Time

Once again the Bellerville White Cane Club met at the Kiwanis Centre, for the April recreation night. Past president Violet Waite, welcomed the members and those on the absence of president, Mildred Rushlow.

Following the club-sing and roll call, a gossip game was played which resulted in a tie proving many love gossip equally as well as women.

Arlie Scott introduced Mr. Harry Clement and Mr. Les Shaw who generously entertained with violin and Spanish guitar music. The members joined in singing many of the lovely old time songs.

Dick Pitman thanked the entertainers.

Table bowling, directed by Walter Waite, was enjoyed and the winners were: on Marylie Lowe's team — John Trevnor, high score, and Merrie Lowe, low; on Violet Waite's team — Gerald Jones, high, and Mike O'Malley, low.

The Kiwanis Queens prepared a delightful lunch and were thanked by Meryle Lowe.

Violet Waite announced the next business meeting to be held at the recreation centre, April 27th.

Q. Victoria H-S Assoc. Views Film 'Prejudice-Discrimination'

The regular monthly meeting of Queen Victoria Home and School Association was held on Monday evening. After the business session ended, the meeting was opened with a film, "Jonathan Mole," where the laws are the opposite of Canada's. An immigrant, an Indian and a Jew are on trial for breaking those laws. The witnesses for the prosecution imply some of the kinds of prejudice and discrimination which we have all met."

Mrs. J. Smith, on behalf of the Queen Victoria Home and School Association, presented a tape recorder to Mr. Frink for use in the school. Mr. Frink thanked the Home and School Association for its part in purchasing the tape recorder, and also the Board of Education for supplementing the fund to purchase the equipment. He stated that it will be most useful in the school program.

FILM SHOWN

A film was then shown entitled "A Day in the Night of Jonathan Mole." This film, produced by the National Film Board for the Department of Labor, is a fable about prejudice and discrimination.

"Prejudice is an attitude or state of mind against a group of people. All people have some prejudices, probably acquired in childhood; but if we examine them in the light of reason, we can see that they are illogical. Discrimination is the active behavior of prejudiced people, though a person may practise discrimination without being prejudiced, acquiring the prejudice later. The fewer the prejudices our children acquire, and the less the discrimination they practise, the better and happier both they and the community will be.

"In the film, 'Jonathan Mole,' a greatly prejudiced and unhappy man learns he is a judge in the isn dof Adanac, where the laws are the opposite of Canada's. An immigrant, an Indian and a Jew are on trial for breaking those laws. The witnesses for the prosecution imply some of the kinds of prejudice and discrimination which we have all met."

After the film, discussion groups were formed and a lively question and answer period enjoyed.

Coffee was served by the social conveners.

Christ Church C.C. Plans Rummage Sale

On Monday evening, Contact Club members met at the boardroom meeting in the parish hall.

A rummage sale will be held later in April. Members voted to give $10 to the Junior Auxiliary for bus fare to the J.A. Festival at the Cathedral in Kingston. Plans were begun for the final meeting of the season on the last Monday in May. This year a husband and wife bowling party is planned.

Shirley Marshall volunteered to inquire about the cost of replacing the coffee carafes which have been broken.

J.A. Festival lunch was served by hostesses, Florence Leeson, Mary Wiggins and Shirley Ashley.

Mrs. Kennedy Wants Privacy For Children

<WASHINGTON (AP) — Mrs. John F. Kennedy, in a television interview Tuesday night, expressed anxiety over keeping a private life for her children in the White House.

"I rather hold my breath," she said, about the day when her three-year-old daughter Caroline starts to school.

She said the major problem is "how can we bring up normal children, if they can't be treated that way?"

President and Mrs. Kennedy appeared together on an NBC-TV series.

Mrs. Kennedy noted that she recently had to forgo taking Caroline to the circus herself "because I would ruin it for her." So Caroline went with friends and was virtually unnoticed in the crowd.

"I worked so hard to make her little ballet school a private thing so she could go together and there were all the photographers waiting there when we got there," she added.

Caroline is still too young to be affected by the public spotlight, Mrs. Kennedy said, "but someday she is going to have to go to school, and if she is in the papers all the time that will affect her little classmates and they will treat her differently."

The first lady said, however, that she intends to send Caroline to kindergarten when she reaches that age.

Strawberry Rhubarb Pie

By Mary Moore

Earlier this week I mentioned a strawberry rhubarb pie that was served to us in Miami.

Our refrigerator needed restocking so I made a grocery shopping trip and brought home the makings for the strawberry rhubarb pie among other things. It had that lovely spring flavor we crave so much at this time of year. To thicken the juice I used quick-cooking tapioca this time as you can see. But I will make the pie again next week and use arrowroot flour because it gives such a clear syrup and as you know if I like it better.

Incidentally I will be making quite a few fruit pies this summer to describe to you and intend to use arrowroot flour. This costs 65c a pound here and is only sold at large drug stores. If you want to tag along with me buy 1-4 or 1-3 pound of arrowroot flour and have it set head for future use.

(One 9in), 1 lb. rosy rhubarb (3 1-4 cups well-packed when cleaned and chopped ($5c), 1-2 cup sugar, 3 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca, 3 tablespoon flour, 1-4 teaspoon salt, shake of mace, few drops red food coloring.

Defrost strawberries and mix all filling ingredients and allow to stand while you make the pastry.

Roll out dough and line deep pie plate with half of it. Turn filling in. Cover with pastry rolled top crust and seal edges. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. for 15 minutes then reduce heat to 375 deg. Fahr. for another 30 to 35 minutes or until juice begins to bubble through gashes. Fifteen minutes before pie is finished brush top with some of the remaining beaten egg to give it a golden glaze when finished.

NOTE:

This pie should be finished baking at least 2 hours before serving time to give the filling ample time to "set" and not be too runny.

Soviet Women Take Jobs On Boats to Help Careers

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four some Soviet women, a job aboard an ocean-going vessel is a career. For others it's an opportunity to study while working.

Grain ships from the Soviet Union travelling to and from Vancouver often have women among their crews and the men speak with pride of their female mates.

Women can handle the job just as well as men, they work well and never cause trouble, the men say.

One notable example is a woman who once served as a captain at sea and now is an instructor at the Soviet nautical school. Another is captain of a whaling ship.

"Our women spend their spare hours at sea studying to be lawyers, doctors, teachers, engineers," said Nicolai Kolukhov, chief officer of the Emilian Pugachev.

Lebe Bustrove, 21, is an example. She is a stewardess aboard the ship and in her spare time studies engineering, hoping to get her papers in two or three years.

Anastasia Klibkova, 28, is the ship's cook. She proudly talked about a daughter who is a doctor, a son working as an engineer and her husband, a sea-going machinist with whom she has spent about four months out of each of her 25 years at sea.

The Emilian Pugache's doctor is also a woman.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Mrs. T. A. — We're concerned over the flighty kids she pals around with.

Hazel A. — My parents shouldn't criticize and condemn my friends.

Mrs. T. A. — I thought we'd helped Hazel develop enough taste and discernment to choose her friends carefully. Surely she knows that she will be judged by the company she keeps.

But her best friend moved away a few months ago, and then she quarreled with another close pal, a sidekick from kindergarten days. So when a girl in her official class at school invited her home one afternoon, she accepted.

After she'd been staying so close to Sandra for several weeks, I asked her to turn the tables and bring Sandra to our home. She beamed and hawed, but a few weeks later she turned up with Sandra plus three boys with the rounded hairdos who were Sandra's entourage.

This girl is supposed to be Hazel's age, 15, but looks like 25 and acts like a "femme fatale." Being with her isn't going to help Hazel's marks. Sandra's favorite subject seems to be Boys!

Hazel A. — My mother jumps to conclusions about any friends I have who aren't bookworms. She thinks Sandra is a bad influence on me because she dances well, knows how to curl her eyelashes (and mine), and can talk about Greenwich Village instead of the Franco-Prussian War!

But she's a wonderful friend for me. She opens my eyes to new tricks and she's no dope, either. She writes poems, and she helps me with French. I can help her squeeze through math and social studies.

I can't "take" to a girl simply because my mother likes her. That's why I quarrelled with my former chum. My mother kept pushing us together, inviting her for dinner, buying concert tickets for us, even though the girl was as awful square and bored as I.

Sandra is a live wire and that's for me. My mother doesn't have to like her. I don't like her friends particularly, either.

The Council — Of course people "pick" their own friends, but parents are around to check on whether a teenager picks a friend for what she is — the right ones or the wrong.

Here's where a good relationship between Mrs. A. and Hazel will pay off, or a poor one become glaring. To improve matters we recommend that Mrs. A. stop finding fault with Sandra because this is guaranteed to make Hazel rush blindly to her friend's defense. She'll be too busy fighting her mother to scrutinize Sandra and see the faults, as well as the attractions, for herself.

If Mrs. A. can dismiss her sense of panic, and rely upon the 15 years of "steering" offered to Hazel, she can confine her comments about Hazel's new friends to matters of the moment. No dire predictions, no threats, no ultimatums. This might allow Hazel up and give her a chance to see the contradiction with Sandra in all its implications.

Chances are, Hazel rushed to accept Sandra's bid, the way a ship docks at any port in a storm. Bereft of two former bosom pals, she wanted to "show 'em" how easily they could be replaced. A not from sophisticated Sandra may have gone to her head. And the breezy talk was novel and exciting. But given a period of no conflict from Mom, hindsight and calm judgment may make Hazel see things her mother wants her to see.

Daughter Has Fatal Disease

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS: — I have just had the news that my little girl has muscular dystrophy. She is 10 years old. The doctor tells me that she will gradually lose the strength of her muscles, although she might live for a number of years.

Right now she gets very tired. But she loves school and all her girl friends and tries very hard to keep up. The doctor says she needs plenty of rest but should be allowed to carry on as normally as possible.

What can I tell my child? I cannot bear to think that she is doomed and I can't tell her she'll never be better. Yet she has always heard the truth from us and counts on what I say.

My husband is more broken up than I am, so he is no help. How does a person act in a case like this? — ANXIOUS MOTHER.

DEAR ANXIOUS MOTHER: — Do what the doctor says: Carry on as normally as possible. By all means tell your daughter that she is not as strong as her girl friends, and that she will be more comfortable if she takes time out to rest frequently. Your own attitude must be one of optimism.

I know of a case in which a young lad of nine showed early symptoms of this disease. By the time he was in high school he was also in a wheel chair. Like you, his mother had at first despaired. But she knew she must carry on, and gradually worked out a plan to secure Johnny of a job, if he should live long enough. She rented a small store and began a gift shop. The business quickly thrived, because she had an eye for pretty or unusual gifts, and people came to her.

Johnny is now 22 and this year he graduates from university, where he has been taking a course in business administration. He has been working in the store during vacations and is as composed and competent a young business man as you could wish for. He whizzes around the store in his wheel chair as if it were the most natural thing in the world.

Johnny's joy in living, and his mother's ready smile, are stuff to tug at the heart strings. Every single day is precious to these two, who know just what they are doing.

Does this true story help? If you can identify some particular talent or interest of your daughter's, perhaps you, too, could start right now mapping out a plan of action which will make certain she will have satisfying work when she is older, in spite of her handicap. Keep your chin up. You've still got her, and she may stay with you for a long time.

DEAR DORIS: — My school chum comes to me for advice and I don't know what to tell him. He is 17 now and has been going steady since he was 15. He is finishing grade 12; his girl is in her last month at business college.

He doesn't know whether to continue going with her or not, because he is getting a little restless and wonders (since he has dated very few girls) whether or not he can get other girls interested in him. His girl is unrelenting in her desire to keep him though they often fight.

Yesterday she called for him at school which started another fight. He asks me should he take a chance and ditch her. Should he? — JUST A PAL.

DEAR JUST A PAL: — Yes, in as nice a way as possible. Not as the result of a fight.

Neither has any sound basis for settling the life with the first person he or she has known well. They should both play the field and learn to get along with the opposite sex. If he wonders about his chances with girls, how do you suppose she feels? But she would be best to break away too.

Maybe they will be back together again eventually, but it's more than likely they will each meet somebody else they'll like better.

A social half hour followed with members serving refreshments.

Painting With a Story Hangs in B.C. Home

VANCOUVER (CP)—A painter with a story hangs in the Vancouver home of Mrs. Stephen Kripps.

She has had the painting, showing a smiling Ukrainian girl, for 13 years. How it came to be painted and how she acquired it is the story.

It goes back to the 1950s when a copy of the Winnipeg weekly newspaper, The Ukrainian Voice, was circulated in a displaced persons camp in Italy.

It contained a photograph of a girl. Artist Anim Kozlowskyj saw the photograph and it reminded him of his lost sweetheart, a girl named Oksana.

He reproduced the painting in oils and called it Oksana. Then he became curious about who the girl in the newspaper photograph was.

Kozlowskyj wrote to The Ukrainian Voice asking if it could locate the girl. It turned out to be Mrs. Kripps, then living in Winnipeg.

She decided to write to the artist and in her letter she mentioned that she was about to be married. Kozlowskyj replied saying the painting would be a wedding gift. However, it wasn't finished at the time.

"I answered the doorbell one morning nearly two years after I was married and a Catholic priest offered me a parcel," Mrs. Kripps said. "I was ill at the time and just took the package, thanking him.

"But when I had opened it, how I wished I had talked to him. I haven't any idea who he was as he didn't say anything. I do wish I could find out."

Mrs. Kripps still hasn't met the artist but she treasures the painting and its story.

HOW'S YOUR GOLF ETIQUETTE?

Now that Spring has arrived in her full glory, I followed the urge that most folks have this time of year, and headed for the great outdoors. A game of golf seemed a good idea, so I filled myself to a small country club to which I belonged.

Mrs. Inexperienced was standing in the door of the locker room when I entered. She was attired in a pair of gaudy slacks, a sweater and a pair of "loafers." She greeted me effusively, explaining that golf was so pleased to be the guest of Mrs. Dow, a club member. While I was changing my shoes, an argument ensued between them because Mrs. Inexperienced demanded that she be "allowed to pay her way" as far as green fees went. Her hostess said firmly that this had been taken care of. When they started for the first tee, relations were already a little strained.

It was my misfortune to follow Miss around the course. Because of Mrs. Inexperienced's actions I was forced to wait at every hole to tee off. Each shot she made was followed by a postmortem of how she should have made the shot — and didn't. If a shot went wild, a display of temper, with much skimming around of clubs, was the result. Adding insult to injury, she kept up a steady stream of comment on Mrs. Dow's game. The flow never stopped. By the time the game was over, I'm sure Mrs. Dow was fervently saying to herself "Never again."

To begin with, Mrs. Inexperienced should realize that golf (and shorts, while we are at it) are out of place on a golf course. A tailored sports dress, or sweater and skirt, and golf shoes are much more appropriate and certainly is better taste.

She also needs to learn the old axiom of say game: "It's a good sport. If you aren't, Security of disposition is essential if the game is to be enjoyed. Flying into a rage only spoils the game for all concerned. Courtesy towards one's fellow players is also a must. Offering unasked-for advice, and distracting another player when he is teeing off, also are inexcusable habits.

It is considered proper that you offer to pay your green fee, but if your hostess does not wish you to do so, give your thanks and let the matter drop.

After a golf game is played by most of us as a game of relaxation. Taking it too seriously results in a feeling of strain among the participants.

QUESTION AND ANSWER

Question — We get together every now and then to play bridge with some friends of ours. We like them very much, with one exception. The husband has a habit of humming all during the bidding. He never stops! It's a tuneless "humhum" that nearly drives us crazy. Is there any polite way to stop him? — Mrs. W. K. S., Newark, N. J.

Answer — People who cultivate an annoying habit such as this, usually are totally oblivious of the fact that they are doing it. Be frank about it, in a tactful and joking way. Tell him the humming gets on your nerves, and for goodness sake to desist! If you handle it right I doubt if his feelings will be hurt.

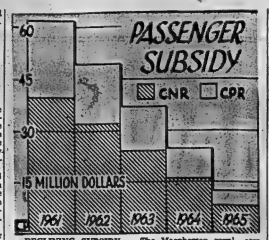
Castro Regime Getting Ready For Invasion



HAVANA (AP)—Amid reliable but unconfirmed reports of increasing rebel activity in the mountains of Cuba, there were growing indications today the Castro regime may be quietly mobilizing anti-invasion defences again.

The government - controlled press and radio maintained a blackout on reports from the United States that exiled Cuban "liberation" forces are grooming for an invasion of this Caribbean island.

But though Prime Minister Fidel Castro has not given a public invasion alert, the atmosphere was more tense than at any time in the history of the revolutionary government formed two years ago.

Travellers and other sources reported particularly heavy governmental troop movements in three provinces: Westernmost Pinar Del Rio, eastern Oriente and in central Las Villas, whose northern coastal keys are 150 miles from the Florida Keys in Florida.

Militiamen were reported digging trenches along the north coast highway from Havana east of Matanzas and along the southern coast of Pinar Del Rio.

DECLINING SUBSIDY — The Macpherson royal commission on transportation has proposed a system of subsidies on unprofitable passenger services of Canadian railways during the next five years.

Graph shows suggested maximum annual payments 1961-65 and division of the subsidies to cover CNR and CPR passenger losses.

Payment proposed this year totals $62,000,000, with the CNR getting $40,000,000. The total is scaled down each year to $12,400,000 in 1965. (CP Newsmap).

FORCE WILL GROW

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—The United Nations force in The Congo will total 18,944 by the end of this month and is expected to reach its largest strength of 25,000 by late May or early June, a spokesman said Monday.

Why you'll have to look carefully to find a used Rambler
(if you can find one, buy it quickly!)

If you have ever looked for a used car you may have noticed that there are very few used Ramblers about.

When you talk to a Rambler owner you'll find out why. Rambler owners tend to treasure their cars, because all Rambler cars are built for the enjoyment of many thousands of comfortable, troublefree miles.

RAMBLER'S "SECRET"

What makes a Rambler so special is really simple. American Motors set out to build sensibly proportioned cars that are comfortable, economical and long lasting. The company decided that its cars should retain their styling values. There was a really good reason for changing it.

HOW RAMBLER PRESERVES THE VALUE OF YOUR CAR DOLLAR

Automobiles depreciate in value as they grow older, but Rambler has taken important steps to limit this development of your investment. There are two main reasons why cars lose their value:

1. OBSOLESCENCE: Annual styling changes, creating obsolescence artificially, make the previous year's model worth less. Rambler styling will remain unchanged unless there are good and valid reasons for change.

Ramblers, as they are now, are easy on the eye and have proved themselves convenient and comfortable. So unless major engineering developments make a change desirable, they will stay as they are.

2. WEAR AND TEAR: Naturally, a car that wears out quickly, or fails apart after a certain number of miles, loses its value.

Ramblers are made to last: Single Unit Construction means that the chassis and the body are welded together to form one strong unit. It is a feature that was pioneered by Rambler.

Dap-Dip Rustproofing is another Rambler exclusive. Ramblers are protected against rust with this process where the entire body of the car is dipped into a rust-inhibiting solution before it is painted.

By now you will probably appreciate why even Rambler's high re-sale value is not sufficient incentive for Rambler owners to part with their cars.

WHAT THE 1961 RAMBLER CLASSIC HAS TO OFFER

There are some changes in the 1961 Rambler Classic. They are the outcome of the research that goes on at American Motors without let up, and they make the 1961 Rambler Classic an even better car.

A new cushioned acoustical fiberglas ceiling standard on all models, soaks up road noise and gives more headroom as well.

A new die-cast aluminum 6 cylinder engine, the first in the industry, is standard on all models. It weighs 50 lbs. less and gives better weight distribution and easier handling.

Ceramic-armoured muffler and tailpipe are another Rambler exclusive. They are guaranteed against rust or corrosion damage for the entire life of the car while the original buyer owns it.

Gas economy has been proven once again, when the Rambler Classic outperformed all other cars in its class during a gas economy test sponsored by a Toronto newspaper.

TWEED

Speed Limit On 37 Highway Is Discussed

TWEED — The regular meeting of Tweed Village Council was held last Monday night in the Council Chambers with the reeve and all council members present.

A communication from the Department of Highways with regards to increasing the speed limit on No. 37 highway from Actinolite to Belleville, and particularly within certain sections of the village of Tweed, drew comments from the Reeve and council. Burton Thompson said he was not sure that it was a wise move to boost the speed limit to 60 miles an hour on No. 37 highway. "I have no objections to it on Highways 401 or 7, which are designed for higher speeds, but not on No. 37. Besides, I don't think it's necessary, and it's only adding to the possibility of accidents. There never was any request of which I am aware to increase the speed limit on this particular stretch. If council is satisfied to permit the highways department to increase the speed limit on No. 37, I certainly am not." Councillor Thompson added.

GETTING OPINIONS

Reeve Spencer said that the department was merely requesting opinions from council, on a proposal to increase the speed limits at both ends of the village which is actually a "bypass" on No. 37 highway. "It's all the same thing", interjected Councillor Thompson. Chief Higgins brought up the matter of the local laundromat remaining open on Sundays. He asked whether it was contravening the law. "The only thing I worry about it the high pressure steam which might cause an explosion," the chief observed. There was little discussion and no decision was reached on the legality of the Sunday opening.

A letter from the town council of Richmond Hill asked support of its resolution making the province responsible for the full cost of education. Changes in present legislation would be necessary. The letter was filed for future reference.

Ed Way spoke to council with regards to covering a ditch on River Street which runs past his property easterly from Metcalfe Street. This ditch flanks the south side of the new Seaver Stoll property. Council promised to investigate this situation. Mr. Way also complained of the dog nuisance in the village. He said that dogs are being permitted to run at large over private property. He did not think council was enforcing regulations. "Dogs are responsible for destroying lawns and landscaping. The situation is completely out of control" Mr. Way added.

WANT DAMS BUILT

Ted Courneya, president of Stoco Lake Cottage Owners' Association, and Don Lafleur, spoke to council regarding the possibility of reviving interest in the construction of two dams on the Moira River south of Stoco Lake. "We have already been to Hungerford council," Mr. Courneya noted. He thought both Tweed and Hungerford council should sit down and try to iron out the existing points insofar as a division of the costs is concerned. "The problem will have to be clarified before the June meeting of the Moira River Conservation Authority", he noted.

The reeve and council said they would be glad to meet with Hungerford council any time to discuss the matter of costs again. The matter was shelved previously because the two municipalities were unable to get together on costs.

Mr. Courneya said dams could be built more economically from plans submitted by Councillor Burton Thompson and others previously submitted by the Moira Authority. He said that cottage owners were hoping for some definite action this year. Moira River Conservation Authority advised Council that dumping of fill below the high water mark of any river, creek or stream within the watershed, is now prohibited. Stiff penalties will be inflicted when such regulations are broken.

NEW BOARDS

The Tweed parks board for 1961 was appointed, as follows: Councillors Burton Thompson and Emerson Hodgins, Wallis Moffatt, Ken Thompson, Roy Parks and Ray Woolley. The recreation committee for this year will be Councillors Dr. A. O. Allen and Cec Hughes. William Quinn, Cartha Cassidy, John Bancroft, Mrs. James Taylor and "Bob" Woods.

Agent 007 of the British Secret Service Rides Again

LONDON (CP)—James Bond, the high-living secret agent created by British novelist Ian Fleming, has survived a real-life ordeal in London's high court.

His latest adventure — Thunderball—nearly failed to reach the bookstores when two Hollywood screenwriters accused author Fleming of plagiarism. On the eve of publication, they stated that the book be withdrawn on the grounds that its plot, of atom-bomb blackmers out to "ransom the Western powers, was one of their movie scripts.

Fleming won the case, and agent 007 of the British secret service rides again. But few fictional heroes can have provoked as many storms as Bond. His creator, Fleming, repeatedly flayed by left-wing critics for "sadism and snobbery"—especially snobbery.

Bond's taste for the exclusive and "vulgar" display" to some writers on The Guardian, The New Statesman and the critical monthly Twentieth Century. They object more to his handmade Italian cigarets, flamboyant convertibles and faddish eating habits than to his violent ways with women.

Bond wants—and usually gets—the best of everything. At his London club, "no newspaper comes to the reading-room until it has been ironed."

"Such fantasies of upper-class life," snorted The New Statesman, "can only be a desire to compensate for the rigors of existence in a welfare state." The Guardian called it "pernicious poison."

Is Bond modelled on his creator? Some points tally—wide weary features, expensive clothes, special cigarets, taste for game-fishing and fast driving. But Fleming is said to abhor food snobbery. Scrambled eggs are his favorite dish.

People who know him say he writes with his tongue in his cheek, probably enjoys needling the Puritans.

Of his ruthless, self-indulgent hero, Fleming says: "People in fiction need to have blood in their veins. Nowadays they have pond water."

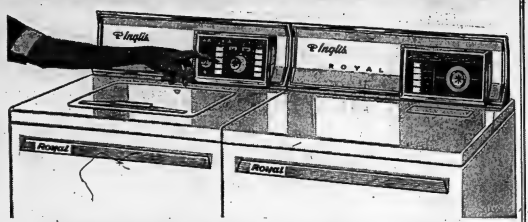
Of his critics: "They have so many chips on their shoulders they should go into the timber business."

The Bond thrillers, which have been selling out regularly every Easter since 1953, command an estimated 1,250,000 readers in Britain alone. There are James Bond clubs in Sydney, Australia, and Hollywood.

Fleming has a glossily orthodox background for a thriller writer—upper-crust English education and a distinguished career in banking and journalism. During the Second World War he served in naval intelligence—later became foreign manager of The Sunday Times.

He turned novelist on the eve of his wedding to the former Countess Rothermere in 1952. His first book, a high-powered thriller laced with sex, gambling scenes and vodka martinis, was an immediate hit. Fleming was hailed as "a supersonal John Buchan."

Subsequent books garnered less favorable notices. But they still get reviewed in The Times Literary Supplement, which, as one critic remarked, is not an honor accorded to Mickey Spillane.



The books are written in Jamaica, where the Flemings live for three months of the year. They entertain a lot and are both said to be impatient with dull conversationalists. Sir Anthony Eden and playwright Noel Coward are among their frequent guests.

Congolese Youngsters Take Over Corridors in Famous Belgian 'Athenee Royal'

By PETER BUCKLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LEOPOLDVILLE (CP)—The Athenee Royal stands as an impressive symbol of troubled days in The Congo.

Once the pride of Belgium's colonial educational system, it was established in 1946 to help train Belgian children for paternalistic administration of a country 90 times the size of their European homeland.

The Athenee, in one of Leopoldville's most stylish areas north of the bustling midtown district, has continued to operate in an independent Congo. But instead of corridors and classrooms filled with the children of white settlers, it now bustles with Congolese youngsters.

And in the boarding - school section, known as the Internat, some 285 Canadian members of the United Nations force occupy the offices, write letters home from the long rows of sleeping-cubicles and fill the kitchens with the aroma of apple pie and steak.

COLOR HAS CHANGED!

"Nothing has changed at the Athenee since last year," said its Belgian-born director of studies, Edmond Symoens. Then a sardonic smile barely creasing his face, he added: "Except the color."

The province of Leopoldville still directs the scholastic side and the central Congo government pays those bills not covered by tuition fees, just as in the days of colonialism.

But where last year there were 1,409 European children and 300 Congolese—including the children of an ambitious politician named Patrice Lumumba—there now are only 86 European, all but lost in a sea of 1,600 Congolese.

Instead of equivalent lessons in both French and Flemish, Belgium's second language, the talk of the lessons now are in French, with English as the second language and Flemish out of the picture entirely for want of pupils.

"We have, apart from that, exactly the same program, the same books, the same rules," Symoens said. "This was necessary to provide the children with some stability in the transitional period.

"However, we are studying an adaptation of the program to meet the new conditions, and this will probably be implemented little by little."

PUPILS OLDER

One of the changes from former years comes in the relative age levels. Symoens said there is a difference of two and three years between the study level of the Congolese students and their European counterparts.

A European child enters primary school at about six and the Congolese about eight. By the secondary school level, the difference is often three years.

He blamed this on the frequently unfavorable study conditions found in congolese homes. Education came too late to The Congo to help many of today's parents.

To remedy the situation, the Athenee has since 1952 — the first year Congolese were admitted to the classes — conducted night courses for adults and this year, inaugurated a weekly "school for parents" to show how they can help their children study.

The only portion of the huge school not functioning as before is the Internat, which previously served about 200 pupils from outside Leopoldville who needed accommodation.

ATTRACTIVE SETTING

Situated along a side road several hundred feet from the main school buildings, it makes an ideal headquarters for Canada's signals contingent.

The school itself is a complex of single-storey buildings housing kindergarten children and larger two - storey buildings for primary and high school classes.

Featuring open balconies, bright, airy classrooms and tiled corridors, the Athenee resembles, amid lush trees and coarse lawns, so common in Leopoldville.

Started 15 years ago with 109 pupils, the school grew steadily until Symoens was able to report at fifth anniversary celebrations a school population of 1,700.

On the same occasion, Symoens expressed an 'ideal dear to the Belgians,' a copy of his speech contained this paragraph:

"Today's teaching prepares the colonialists of tomorrow. We have before us the first mass generation of colonial children. Most of them will return to the colony. We have not got the right to neglect their preparation. These are the leaders of tomorrow that we have before us."

But before the children of 1961 could grow to the ideal, leadership had passed into other hands. The Congolese now fill the Athenee Royal.

CONGO SCHOOL — Valises in hand, Congolese teenagers pour out from one of the main buildings of Athenee Royal in Leopoldville and walk leisurely by lush, exotic shrubs and course lawns. Built in 1946 to train Belgian children for colonial administration, the school now has mostly native students. (CP from National Defence).

MORE BEER

British brewers last year produced 26,500,000 barrels of beer, highest output since 1948.

Conservatives Get Control Of Council

LONDON (Reuters) — The Conservatives recaptured control of the important county council of Lancashire from Socialists as the first results of this week's country-wide local elections were announced Tuesday.

In Monday's Lancashire vote the Conservatives won 16 seats from Labor and one from an Independent.

The Conservatives, who lost in Lancashire in the last three years ago, needed only seven seats for victory.

The 82 county councils of England and Wales are elected outright every three years. City, town and rural councils elect one - third of their members every year.

The key contest is Thursday —for the London County Council, where Labor now holds 101 of 126 seats.

Policies Advocated by Bank Governor Would Lead Our Country to "Dead End"

- Lamontagne

TORONTO (CP)—Maurice Lamontagne, economic adviser to Liberal Leader Pearson, said Tuesday the economic policies advocated by the governor of the Bank of Canada would lead our country to a dead end.

Bank Governor James Coyne has made a wrong assessment of Canada's long-term difficulties, Mr. Lamontagne said in a statement to the Liberal Businessmen's Club of Toronto.

The look is issue with Mr. Coyne's arguments in favor of reduced imports of goods and capital.

In the "great debate" over methods of solving the structural difficulties in Canada's economy, the government had not yet clearly stated its position.

"It has substituted slander for objective" analysis," Mr. Lamontagne said.

But Mr. Coyne's views constituted the basis of Finance Minister Fleming's budget last Dec. 20.

'WE CAN ASSUME'

"We can safely assume" therefore that the government is acting for the government in this debate."

Mr. Lamontagne said that in his view "Mr. Coyne's assessment of Canada's long - term difficulties is wrong, and the diagnosis he has made of the Canadian economy to take would lead our country to a dead end."

Mr. Coyne's remarks made in a recent stagnation by the current high level of unemployment.

The volume of our imports has always been high throughout the history of Canadian experience shows very clearly that imports are not the cause but been a consequence of expansion, not a cause of stagnation."

IMPORTS A STIMULANT

Mr. Lamontagne rejected the argument in Mr. Coyne's last statement, short the recent high levels of unemployment are a consequence of "diversion of purchasing power from the domestic production to foreign production."

There had not been any such diversion, Since 1956 when the first signs of stagnation and high structural unemployment began to appear, the volume of exports had risen nine per cent and the volume of imports had declined four per cent.

He added that it is difficult to accept the argument that high unemployment has not arisen from a deficiency in capital investment spending.

Total capital investment in machinery and equipment is per cent since 1957 and business investment had declined 25 per cent.

Mr. Coyne's proposal for reducing imports by increasing efficiency was an "invitation to a narrow nationalistic orientation." This program "would only make our situation worse."

MAKES GROUND CALL

TORONTO (CP)—A Canadian Pacific Airlines spokesman said he believed to be the first aircraft-to-ground direct telephone call Tuesday when a call was made to Toronto from a CPA plane flying 2,500 feet over Vancouver by using an ordinary dial telephone linked to special antennae. The call to aircraft enabling passengers to contact home by dialing their own local number.

Justice Refuses Change of Venue For Murder Trial

MONTREAL (CP)—A bid by Abel Vosburg, charged with the murder of his wife and 11 of his children in a fire at the family home in Norway, Ont., Dec. 29, to stand trial in Montreal was turned down Tuesday.

Mr. Justice Louis Philippe Cliche of Quebec Superior Court refused Vosburg's request for a change of venue on the grounds that there was no evidence in the district Timiskaming coroner could not be tried fairly by jurymen at the Sudbury district assizes next October.

Application for the change of venue was made last February.

Notification of Mr. Justice Cliche's decision, which was final and not subject to appeal was forwarded by letter Tuesday to John Gottlieb of Montreal, Vosburg's lawyer.

Mr. Gottlieb said Tuesday he is seriously considering filing an application for bail for Vosburg.

He said chances of getting bail in a murder case are slim. However, he understood that Vosburg would have to spend the summer in jail and the application would be made for this reason.

Resignation Of Governor Is Requested

OTTAWA (CP)—CCF Leader Argue called Tuesday night for the resignation of Saskatchewan Lieutenant-Governor F. L. Bastedo on grounds he has deliberately "arbitrarily in the constitutional power of the people of Saskatchewan."

In a prepared statement, Mr. Argue criticized the lieutenant-governor for preserving his assent last Saturday on a provincial bill relating with mineral lease renegotiation.

In Regina, Lieutenant-Governor Bastedo said he had no comment to make on Mr. Argue's statement.

Saskatchewan Provincial Treasurer Woodrow Lloyd said in Regina that Mr. Argue "was speaking as an individual. There has been no conversation between him and the Saskatchewan government. He is expressing his own opinion."

Premier T. C. Douglas of Saskatchewan said in an interview Tuesday Saskatchewan can do nothing now but urge the federal government to take early action on the bill. He said if Saskatchewan had any comment it would be with the federal government.

"We do not want to argue with the lieutenant-governor," he said. He added that Prime Minister Diefenbaker "has a tiger by the tail."

Natural Gas Installers Must Take Course

TORONTO (CP)—A training program for persons engaged in the installation of natural gas appliances in Ontario was announced Tuesday by Energy Resources Minister Manning.

He said in a statement the training program will be a three-pronged approach involving the departments of education and energy and the major gas utilities.

The training program will cover all sections of the appliance. A major item of the program will be a mobile training unit—operated by the department—which is slated to cover all existing centres in an initial three-month tour.

Working in close co-operation with the department of energy, the major gas utilities have agreed to conduct courses for gasfitting contractors in towns and cities served by their companies, Mr. Macaulay said.

Included in the scheme are the Consumers' Gas Company, Toronto; the Union Gas Company of Canada Limited, Chatham; Dominion Gas Limited, Hamilton; Northern Ontario Natural Gas Company Limited, Kirkland Lake; and Natural Gas Limited, Kingston.

Lectures will be based on existing natural gas installation codes and a new gas appliance installation manual. The department will make available to the trade in April.

In addition to the lectures, the department of education has agreed to sponsor a 10- to 14-week course for gas fitters in the fall, Mr. Macaulay said. The course will be held at the Provincial Institute of Trades School in Toronto.

Worker Found To Be Woman Fined in Court

ORILLIA (CP) — A construction worker who was found to be a woman after a medical examination in jail last week, was fined $50 and costs Tuesday for careless driving.

Clarence Germain, 32, of Severn Bridge, said she was in pain and was trying to reach a doctor's residence when she drove erratically. She said she had fallen from a scaffold three weeks earlier while helping to build a department store.

Charges of drunk driving was withdrawn for lack of evidence.

Mrs. Germain was hastily transferred to the women's wing of Simcoe County Jail at Barrie following her arrest and a routine medical check.

She had been wearing high boots and work clothes of a construction worker when she was taken to a married sister said she had always known Clarence as a boy.

Cosmonaut Seen as Man With 'A Good, Honest Smile'

LONDON (AP)—Moscow television presented a picture of the world's first space man today, describing him as the first to show "a good, honest smile."

The portrait of Russian Maj. Yuri A. Gagarin was flashed and then came this broadcast comment, repeated by Moscow Radio:

"For those who did not see this picture we should like to give a description of this spaceman.

"On the screen appears the image of a man aged about 25 with a good, honest smile. His eyes set well apart, fine bushy brows, high broad forehead.

"He wears a flying helmet, a light over-all suit. He smiles a little shyly and frank. And is there any need to add that this man who has been the first to dare to fly to space, to reach for the stars, to look down on earth, is a man of a very great and very real character. This, is evident in his smile, in the intelligent, fine eyes."

Gagarin was 27 a month ago.

He is married to Valentina Gagarina, 22, who also has a scientific background. She was graduated from medical school at Orenburg.

They have two daughters, Yelena, 3, and Galya, just a month old.

The cosmonaut has an ideal Soviet background: His father, a joiner, his mother a housewife.

Gagarin was born March 9, 1934, in the Gzhatsk district of Smolensk area. As a child of seven, just starting school, he and his family experienced the Nazi invasion and fled into the hinterlands.

At the end of the war the family returned to Gzhatsk to a collective farm. Gagarin resumed his schooling and in 1951 was graduated with distinction from vocational school in Lyubertsy, outside Moscow.

He qualified as a moulder, simultaneously, he attended evening classes for working youths and then was sent to an industrial college at Saratov on the Volga. Again he was graduated with honors, in 1955.

At Saratov, Gagarin took training in Aviation and after graduation attended an air school at Orenburg. He has been in Soviet airmans since 1957, a members of the Communist party since last year.

Engineers on Inland Vessels Start to Cast Ballots That Decide Bargaining Agents

MONTREAL (CP) — Engineers on some of Canada's inland vessels have started to cast ballots in a vote whose outcome may decide whether peace will prevail this summer on Canadian ships plying the St. Lawrence Seaway and the Great Lakes.

About 400 to 500 engineers are to participate in the vote, ordered by the Canada Labor Relations Board to decide whether the Seafarers' International Union or some other labor body should act as bargaining agent for the engineers.

The outcome so far appears to be ensuring peace aboard Canadian ships on the Great Lakes this summer, said a spokesman for the SIU.

He based his statement on results of a vote among engineers on ships of the Canadian Steel Boat Company Ltd. They voted unanimously in favor of the SIU. He said fewer than 50 were involved.

The vote are engineers on ships of Scott Misener Steamships Ltd., N.M. Paterson and Sons Ltd., Paterson Steamships Ltd., Upper Lakes Shipping Ltd., Hall Corporation of Canada, Algoma Central and Hudson Bay Railway Co.; and Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation.

The men are expected to vote immediately on joining ships now being prepared for the opening of the navigation season.

"The ships won't sail unless there is a contract," said the spokesman.

The dispute dates back to last fall when engineers walked off inland vessels, claiming the companies were attempting to force them to sign a contract under which the engineers would be represented by the National Association of Marine Engineers, Unlicensed personnel would be employed on the ships.

The work stoppage ended when Labor Minister Starr made a personal appeal to get ships, about 20 of them carrying grain, moving again before the winter freeze-up.

Later the labor relations board ordered the engineers to vote on the certification issue.

Guilty of Forgery

OTTAWA (CP) — Lawyer Frederick Cowan of Ottawa was found guilty Tuesday of forgery by an Ontario Supreme Court jury and was remanded in custody until Monday for sentence.

The hearing was called after an earlier jury failed to agree on a verdict in a trial which ended Feb. 16.

Earlier Tuesday a charge of uttering was dropped against Mr. Cowan on a point of law. He is charged with forging the endorsement of a $300 cheque issued in January, 1959, by Mrs. Cora Findlay of Perth, a client.

Police Officers Told Not to Talk to Press

TORONTO (CP)—Chief James Mackey of the Metropolitan Toronto police said Tuesday it appears that trial criminal factions are testing their strength for control of "what gambling remains in Toronto."

"If these individuals think for one minute they are bigger than society or than the agent of society, the police, they will have a rude awakening."

At a special police meeting Tuesday, the chief is reported to have told officers not to talk to the press about the case of Max Bluestein who was beaten in a Toronto tavern two weeks ago. Although nearly 100 persons were present, police have been unable to find a single eyewitness.

Two men were remanded without plea in connection with the case Tuesday. Frank Marchildon, 40, who received six stab wounds during the incident, received a remand until April 19 and was freed on $100 bail. Jack Xavier, 32, was remanded to April 25 and his bail was renewed. Both are charged with creating a disturbance.

There were reports from Toronto and Hamilton of other beatings suffered by gamblers, bookmakers and stock salesmen to which the victims declined to testify.

Says Building Will Be Used By Government

OTTAWA (CP) — The Citizen says an underground office structure with concrete roof 20 feet thick is being built at Carp, 20 miles west of the capital, to be used by the federal government in the event of nuclear attack.

The newspaper says the installation, to be built under 20 feet of soil, will provide an emergency headquarters for defence and communications and even an alternative meeting place for Parliament in a national emergency.

It says the project is reported to cost more than $20,000,000 and will amount to a three-level "concrete city."

Accommodation would be provided for 400 persons with enough food, water and other supplies on hand for six weeks.

Student Will Not Be Hailed Into Court

OTTAWA (CP)—Peter Hargreaves, 18, the high school student who refused to participate in version of a Canadian flag in front of the Supreme Court Building here last week, is not going to be hailed into court.

Works Minister Walker announced Tuesday in the Commons that $135 restitution had been paid to Peter's behalf for damage done and that the government refused to consider the incident closed.

Answering a question by Jean Casselman (PC—Grenville-Dundas), Mr. Walker said the works department had never requested the RCMP to lay a charge against Peter and that no charge was ever laid.

George McIlraith (L—Ottawa West) told Mr. Walker it was whether he was suggesting that a statement made by an RCMP spokesman should be taken as leading. The spokesman was reported to have said the police force had been asked to withhold a mischief charge until the case could be reviewed by the works department.

Replying to Mr. McIlraith, Mr. Walker said he was not responsible for the RCMP.

Peter raised the homemade flag to dramatize and publicize the need for a distinctive Canadian flag. The damage was caused when he cut the flagstaff halyard in order to hoist his flag early last Wednesday.

Peter, who lives together from pedsheets, was red and white with a green maple leaf in the centre.

Conservatives Rebel Over Party Bill

LONDON (Reuters)—The ruling Conservative party was shaken Tuesday night by the biggest parliamentary revolt it within party ranks since it took office 10 years ago.

Sixty nine Conservatives, about one-fifth of the party's parliamentary strength, defied a belled against the leadership and demanded the abolition of flogging for violent crimes.

The rebels proposed in the Commons a new clause in a criminal justice bill which would have wiping out the sentence young offenders convicting a second time of violent crimes, with the birch received. But the move was defeated.

Sydney Silverman, who has been the cry of the more reactionary Conservatives since the 1930's, said: "I am determined to abolished corporal punishment today."

The rebel amendment proposed casing second offenders under 21 to be birched on the buttocks with not more than 12 birches. The birches would be the buildings and shot in the Army, with a cane like a walking stick. Both were applied on the buttocks.

ADOPTS BUDGET

TORONTO (CP) — Metropolitan Toronto council Tuesday adopted a record $180,497,760 budget for 1961 with only marginal changes in the tax levy. The residential Metro tax rate was set at 21.45 mills, an increase of .06 mills over last year, while the levy on commercial property was set at 25.07 mills, a drop of .11 mills from 1960.

Transportation Commission Brief Evokes Varied Reaction

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Reaction ranged from "startling" to more or less satisfactory today as provincial leaders and boards officials studied the far-reachig trasport proposals of the MacPherson Royal Commission.

The "startling" reaction came from Premier E.-G. Manning of Alberta, who said Tuesday night in Edmonton press conference that the recommendations contained in federal subsidies to Canada's railways is "staggering and completely unjustified." The subsidy would start with an estimated $39,000,000 in 1961.

In the Commons at Ottawa Opposition Leader Pearson tried unsuccessfully today to have a House committee conduct public hearings on the report. Although Transport Minister James Allen said Tuesday night that several recommendations of the commission seem to be in agreement with the view submitted by the Ontario government in its brief to the commission last year.

Provincial Treasurer Woodrow Lloyd of Saskatchewan said at Regina that such subsidies are viewed by his government as a valid way of tackling the problem facing the railways.

Other reactions today:

"Generally satisfactory," said A. T. Baker, general manager of the Alberta Wheat Pool.

"Strengthens our argument for nationalization of the CPR," said a spokesman for the Saskatchewan Farmers' Union.

"The whole element of enterprise in Canadian transportation," said Hal Taylor, managing director of it's Alberta Motor Transport Association.

But labor, railway and national trucking industry and the Maritimes have been generally silent so far about the implications of the report.

Hazen Argue, leader of the 15-union team that is threatening a May 16 walkout of 111,000 railwaymen over wages, a new hope for a settlement to avert the country-wide strike.

"If the railways get the financial help proposed by the MacPherson transportation commission's report, they will no longer have any excuse for not meeting our wage demands," he said.

Former Auschwitz Death Camp Now Being Used as Tourist Attraction in Poland

OWIECIM, Poland (AP) — Spring came early in Auschwitz this year.

The tourist season has started. Visitors buy tickets at the administration shack outside the former Auschwitz death camp. Multilingual guides lead the travelers through the gates bearing the original inscription:

"Arbeit macht frei" (work gives freedom).

Immediately inside the old electrified wire fence is a small parade ground where the Nazis lined up new prisoners daily to hear the camp commandant's greeting:

"You have come to a concentration camp, not to a sanatorium, and there is only one way out—through the chimney. Anyone who does not like it can try hanging himself on the wire. If there are Jews in this draft they have no right to live longer than a fortnight. If there are priests, their period is one month—the rest, three months."

SIZE SHOES AND HAIR

The guides lead their silent charges past the exhibits:

Thousands of pairs of infants' and children's shoes. A larger pile of adult shoes. Thousands of pounds of human hair clipped from gas chamber victims, and bolts of cloth made from it in Germany.

Human ash, exhibit are cans of zyklon-B, a cyanide gas supplied in mass quantities by the I. G. Farben Industrie A.G.

The autobiography of Rudolf Hoess, former commandant of Auschwitz tells of a conversation with his superior, Adolf Eichmann, at the concentration camp in the summer of 1941:

"Hoess," we discussed the way and means of effecting the extermination. Gas of some sort was the only possibility because it would have been absolutely impossible to destroy by shooting the masses of people as were expected. . . ."

Victims were herded into the gas chamber fitted with faucets set in a shower room. Their bodies were loaded onto elevators to an upper storey where prisoners clipped hair and pulled gold teeth from the corpses. From there they went to the furnaces.

SOME WOMEN BRAVE

Hoess gave this account of how victims, some children, playing or joking, would enter the gas chambers holding their toys. I noticed that women who either guessed or knew what was happening to their children would found courage to joke with the children or persuade them gently . . .

"From time to time women would suddenly shriek while undressing in a voice which penetrated to the last corner, tear their hair or rave like lunatics. Where upon they were promptly taken in hand by the Aufseherinnen with whips and the canes is a single stick. Both were applied on the buttocks.

Estimates attributed to Eichmann and Hoess say 2,500,000 Jews died in Auschwitz gas chambers. War crimes courts have convicted only 1,500,000 more died of starvation, shootings, beatings, torture and disease.

The tour ends at the spot where Hoess used to deliver his speech to the prisoners.

The gallows where Hoess was hanged April 16, 1947 stands, and that spot, in sight of the villa where he lived with his wife and children.

Prime Minister On Way Home From Canada

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Macmillan of Britain and his party left Ottawa at 8:18 a.m. for London, concluding his 2¼¼ day visit to Ottawa and a three-week stay in the West Indies and North America.

On his departure Mr. Macmillan said Russia's success in launching a space ship spare and returning him to earth is "a very notable, achievement."

"I am sending a message of congratulations to Mr. Khrushchev," he said.

The departure from the RCAF air station at Uplands was without ceremony. A 50-man guard of honor lined the red carpet and Prime Minister Diefenbaker and United Kingdom diplomats stationed in Ottawa were the only ones to see Mr. Macmillan off.

Flying by RAF Air Transport Command Comet he was due to arrive in London at 10:45 p.m. GMT.

Daily Mail Says Gary Powers Will Be Freed

LONDON (AP) — The London Daily Mail says the lucky American U-2 pilot Francis Gary Powers will be freed from a Soviet prison in the next few weeks and will choose to live in Russia.

The Mail's Moscow correspondent, John Mossman, reported:

"I understand he would like his wife Barbara to join him, and she is anxious to come here."

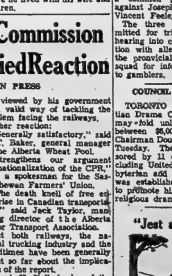
But in a telephone interview with the Associated Press from her mother-in-law's home in Midlegeville, Ga., Tuesday night, Mrs. Powers discounted the report.

"As far as I know, the report is incorrect," she told the AP. "Neither my husband nor the state department has said anything about it. Naturally I feel badly that it is not true."

In Washington a state department spokesman, asked if Powers is to be released, said he wasn't heard anything about it."

3 True Bills Are Returned

TORONTO (CP)—A former provincial police gambling crimes squad detective, indicted Monday on three bribery charges and one of conspiring to obstruct justice.



A Supreme Court grand jury here Tuesday returned 3 Thompson true bills against Robert J. Wright, 39. The jury also returned true bills on the conspiracy counts and one of keeping common gaming house against Joseph McDermott and Vincent Feeley.

The two men were committed for trial recently at a hearing into charges in connection with alleged payments to the provincial police gambling squad for information supplied to gamblers.

Prairie Fishermen Reap Rich Winter Harvest

These wind-swept acres yield a profitable harvest. Under that frozen cover swim thousands of pounds of pickerel, whitefish, saugers, pike and tullibee — which support a winter industry employing, on Lake Manitoba alone, 900 men. Temperatures often reach 40°F below zero here, and the wide sweep of ice provides no windbreak. Above, Lorne Lowry, fisheries conservation officer, maintains radio contact with shore base.

This tractor-mounted auger, operated by Albert Fussey, makes the strenuous job of cutting anchor holes almost a pleasure. With it, 10 minutes' hard manual labour shrinks to 30 seconds. Two provincial fisheries officers watch the bright bit whirl through four feet of ice. The officers patrol the lines by snowmobile, linked by radio to a shore base. Often they are called on to rescue lost fishermen caught in a sudden blizzard.

Two crooked black branches sticking forlornly out of an empty waste of wind-packed snow on one of Canada's many northern lakes are the only evidence of a multi-million dollar Canadian winter industry. They mark the ends of a 50-fathom gill net (set four feet down under the ice) and the beginning of an industry that last year in Manitoba alone produced 15,000,000 pounds of delicious-eating freshwater fish. Commercial winter fishing in Manitoba's three big lakes is a growing business. The fresh-caught fish are sped by air to distant and growing markets in newly-developed insulated boxes that eliminate the need for ice. The fishermen are frequently summer-time farmers picking up extra dollars during the long winter months; but there are a number of year-round operators who make a steady living by fishing. Besides a net and some form of transportation, the most essential piece of equipment is a "jigger". This simple, home-made gadget was invented back in 1912 by a tired blacksmith who had spent a long day punching holes at 10-foot intervals in order to set his nets. The jigger scoots under the ice, worked by a trailing line, making it possible to set a 50-fathom net in just three minutes.

National Film Board of Canada Photos by Gar Lunney.

The ingenious "jigger" — key to the winter-fishing operation. The plank floats against the underside of the ice. An alternate pull and release of the line sends the jigger skating forward. A second mast follows its progress by listening to the sound of a "clapper".

This fine pickerel was caught in Lake Manitoba. A continued expanding demand for the popular "fish-sticks" helps to make winter fishing commercially profitable. Over half of Manitoba's annual crop of freshwater fish is caught in the winter.

Locked in Cells

WALLA WALLA, Wash. (AP) About 700 convicts of the state prison went to bed Monday night with only sandwiches and water under their belts.

Warden Bob Rhay locked them in their cells and decided on the uninteresting fare when they went on a sitdown strike Monday.

"If they want a sitdown strike," he said, "I'll give them a good one."

The warden said the convicts hadn't submitted any grievances to him.

Newfoundland's Grand Banks and British Columbia's fabulous salmon runs have been famous for centuries, but Canada has also a third, lesser-known, commercial fishing region—the lakes of the interior. These comprise over half the world's freshwater area and in their crystal depths swim most varieties of the world's finest-eating freshwater fish.

Manitoba, usually thought of as part of the great Canadian wheat field, produces a third of Canada's total of one hundred million pounds of freshwater fish, more than half of this in the winter.

Winter fishermen use the standard summer gill net, setting it under the ice with the ingenious "prairie ice jigger." This device—simple and useful as a safety pin—was invented in 1912 by a fisherman-blacksmith on Lake Manitoba who tired of chopping holes through the ice. It consists of a plank and two levers so arranged that, the alternating pull and release of an attached line sends the jigger skating forward under the ice. With it, 50 fathoms of net can be set in three minutes, using only two basin holes.

For most of the men on Lake Manitoba, fishing is a part-time job. They average $400 a season although some well-equipped operators, working both summer and winter, make a good living from fishing. Manitoba commercial fishing employs some 6,500 men, with a three-million-dollar investment in equipment, and as many more in subsidiary industries.

GOVERNMENT SUPERVISION

Freshwater fisheries, because of their limited area, require tight controls and scientific management to maintain maximum production. Fishermen and fish dealers in Manitoba are licensed and their gear, methods of operating, and the fish-product are inspected. The provincial government maintains a continuous research program aimed at maintaining yields and improving the quality and flavor of the fish exported. Provincial conservation officers use snowmobiles to patrol the winter lakes.

INCREASED MARKETS

The newly developed "Insul Pack" box is a major breakthrough in the old problem of transporting and refrigerating fresh fish. The new box allows only a two degree drop in temperature over 48 hours, eliminating the weight of ice formerly needed and making fast air-freight economical. Prairie fish are now competing in the west coast market. The pre-cooked breaded fish-stick also continues in high demand, making possible a greatly increased market for Canada's freshwater fish.

Canadian French Inflection Familiar Sound Among Babel Of Tongues in Leopoldville

By PETER BOCKLET
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LEOPOLDVILLE (CP) — At sessions of the Afro-Asian countries. However, there are exceptions.

UN VETERAN

King Gordon, a former Winnipeger, has worked for 11 years with the UN in trouble spots throughout the world. Now he heads the office of public information, the UN propaganda agency in The Congo.

The chief auditor for United Nations operations is another Canadian, Percy Martin of Kingsmere, Que., a retired lieutenant-colonel in the army pay corps.

Jean - Paul Fournier of Leschine, Que., is the senior representative in The Congo for the International Civil Aviation Organization, a UN agency.

Pierre Joubert of Montreal, where ICAO has its headquarters, is chief instructor and training officer for those Congolese learning to operate vital air terminals throughout this troubled country, and six other ICAO posts in The Congo are held by Canadians.

Bilingualism is a key factor in the hiring of Canadians. Canada's wedding of French and English is a happy one in UN eyes, since the two languages are by far the most dominant in the world organization's setup here.

GOOD TRANSLATORS

Both civilian and military officials rely on Canadian secretaries in translating speeches translations into one language or the other.

Alice Lalande, a native of Montreal who has worked in New York for the last 15 years, is the chief secretary for Rajeshwar Dayal of India, the UN special representative in The Congo, and his temporary replacement, Mekki Abbas of Ethiopia.

Her sister, Annette Lalande of Montreal, is secretary to L. W. Langrod of Poland, UN social Affairs adviser to the Congolese government.

Habib Ahmed of Pakistan, chief administrative officer and regarded as second only to Dayal in the civilian chain of command, also has a Canadian secretary. She is Louise Laloy of Nanaimo, B.C., who worked for the Canadian external affairs department in Bogota and Karachi before taking a year's leave of absence to work in The Congo.

Mai.-Gen. Mengistsu Iyasu of Ethiopia, UN military chief of staff and deputy force commander, has Gemena Morcan of Quebec as secretary. Miss Morcan came here from Washington, where she worked in the Belgian Embassy for two years.

There are 35 men and 18 women from Canada on the UN civilian staff. The majority work as clerks or secretaries.

Among the exceptions are Gaston Hardy of Quebec, a former CBC reporter in Montreal who is on the French translation staff at UN headquarters, and Robert Forest of Noranda, Que., once a mining company employee and now responsible for finding accommodation for UN employees.

Hazel Clark of Pelcrborough, Ont., chief of the pay and allowances unit in the UN finance department, is one of the few Canadians working not employed as a secretary. Another is Therese Devine of Ottawa, finance officer at the UN military base in Kamina, in Katanga province.

Kamina has the largest concentration of Canadians outside Leopoldville—12. Besides Miss Devine, the Kamina workers include Maurice Genereau of Quebec, an administrative officer who was in charge of a refugee airlift at the base. Victor Lefebvre of Montreal, Que., air traffic controller with ICAO there, and diesel expert Jean-Guy Lussier of Quebec.

Despite the number of Canadians already in The Congo, the call is continually out for more. And secretaries are in the greatest demand.

Says Patricio Rondas of Madrid, acting chief personnel officer: "Canada is one of the few countries where you get that relatively rare person—a secretary who is naturally bilingual in French and English.

"We always seem to need more Canadian secretaries than we have. At present we could use five or 10 more, and probably by the time we get those we would need still another five."

How do the secretaries feel about the work?

"I love it here," says Carmen Gorostiaga of Montreal, secretary to Wilfrid Levesque of Quebec, head of the placement and staff services unit. "The climate is fine, the work is pleasant and the pay is good.

Aims of Conserving Natural Resources Have Changed Radically Since Laurier

By ARCH MacKENZIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — The aim of conservation of natural resources has changed radically since Prime Minister Sir Wilfrid Laurier convened the first conference on the subject in Canada in 1906.

The ideas of that period sprang from a free-wheeling exploitation of resources that indicated more attention to current benefits than those future generations might get.

But the growth of Canada's population implies the need for planning for the future and this will be the theme of a Resources for Tomorrow conference to be held in Montreal Oct. 23 to 28.

It will seek to promote the integrated use of water, soil, air, woods and wildlife so that the maximum benefit is shared equally by all interests. Questions to be pondered at the meeting include:

Is draining of Prairie potholes, sometimes with government assistance, a sound proposition considering the bad effect this may have on the hotel-leg recreation opportunities of the hundreds of thousands who shoot waterfowl?

Should industrial use of some areas be tailored to allow expansion of the tourist industry and recreation facilities?

Another problem is reconciling hydro and commercial or sport fishing interests.

The conference also will look into what action the various levels of government can take to co-operatively to harvest the benefits of interprovincial river basins, provide recreation facilities for anticipated population growth and chart the probable course of the continuing agricultural revolution.

More than 70 bulky working papers are being prepared for the Montreal conference sponsored by the federal and provincial governments. These papers, under eight main headings, will be made public in a month or two and the conference itself will go on from there in work groups and full sessions.

No hard results will flow from the talks, says Dr. Balder H. Kristjanson, 41, conference secretary and one of six brothers from Gimli, Man., who all are economists.

However, Dr. Kristjanson said that "guide lines to action"—a full ventilation of problems and theories among Canadian experts—should result.

The 1906 conference was sponsored by the Canadian Institute of Forestry which also teamed up with the Canadian Agricultural Engineering Institute and the Canadian Chamber of Commerce to hold another such meeting in 1954.

Conservationists today work on the theory that resources should be "cropped" for the most beneficial use, harvesting wisely so that no timber, for example, is lost and future growth assured.

Study and discussion at the October conference will be grouped under agriculture and land use, fisheries, forestry, recreation, water, wildlife and regional development — federal and northern.

Heads of some of the working papers indicate the range of preparation.

There are studies on the effects of man-made changes on fish environment, review and assessment of present forest policies, tourism and natural resources, the federal and provincial laws now governing the management of water, regional studies on the Ottawa, St. John, Fraser and Saskatchewan-Nelson river basins, administrative across Canada of wildlife regulations and laws and a series of regional studies of community planning across the country.

Tass Accuses West Germany Of Complicity

The official Soviet news agency said in a dispatch from Jerusalem the biggest group of observers at the trial came from Bonn, and that "the Bonn delegation and Bavarian (Robert Servatius, chief defence counsel) are here to fulfill the assignment of the West German government to prevent the Eichmann trial from turning into a trial of Nazism, to prevent publication of testimony on the part of a number of Nazi criminals such as Globke, who now holds a high government post in the Bonn republic."

Dr. Hans Globke, once undersecretary of state for the West German chancellery, was an official in the Hitler regime and wrote a legal interpretation of the Nazis' racial laws that classified Jews as impure people and dangerous to the Germans.

Quick Plunge Into Boiling Water Best Lobster Cooker

By JOHN E. BIRD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—Does the reticent lobster really care how he gets to the dinner table?

If the tasty crustacean could talk he'd probably voice a preference for the quick — plunge-into-boiling-water method.

Federal fishery scientists support this traditional method of cooking lobsters despite a claim by a United States scientist that there is a kinder way for them to be prepared.

And Canadian scientists have gone to the trouble of making tests to show that immersion in boiling water is the quickest, most humane way to cook this ocean delicacy.

Dr. Gordon Gunter of the Texas Game and Fish Commission said recently that lobsters would suffer less pain if they were placed in cold, fresh water and heated slowly. He said the fresh water acts as an anesthetic, knocking out the lobster before the water reaches the boiling point.

As a further kindness, Dr. Gunter suggested that lobsters be placed in "refrigerator baskets" to prevent their legs from being burned on the bottom of the cooking pot.

MAKE MANY TESTS

His suggestions caused quite a stir in lobster-cooking circles. Biologists with Canada's fisheries research board re-examined their records to satisfy themselves that the boiling - water system is the most humane.

Extensive tests by the board have produced no evidence that lobsters suffer pain, whether they are immersed in boiling water or placed in cold water which is brought to a boil. What must be taken to be violent reactions to severe pain probably are nothing more than unconscious reflex actions.

Spasmodic twitching or unconscious reflex actions occur whether the lobster is dumped in boiling or cold water. However, there is less twitching when boiling water is used.

"Although in neither experiment was there real evidence that the lobsters suffered pain, spasmodic twitching occurred in both," said Dr. D. G. Wilder, a biologist with the board.

"To the extent that such twitching might reflect pain, it would seem desirable to kill the lobster as quickly as possible."

THEY DON'T SQUEAL

Another biologist described as "complete bunk" claims that lobsters squeal when they are dropped in boiling water. This was noise created by escaping air and occurred infrequently.

Dr. Wilder said that when a lobster is placed in unheated water it behaves normally for about five minutes in the temperature is raised. Spasmodic twitching occurs for about five minutes after the temperature reaches 77 degrees Fahrenheit. And the lobster does not die until he has been in the pot for about 43 minutes.

However, when a lobster is dropped into boiling water it goes immediately into a state of shock. This is followed by spasmodic twitching for a minute or two.

"Within a minute the shell of the lobster has turned red and within three minutes all movements have ceased and the lobster is certainly dead," Dr. Wilder said.

Canada Is Far From Paradise For Pensioners

By BORIS MISKEW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—A man who blames Montreal's "broken sidewalks" for the crack-up of a blossoming romance says Canada is anything but a pensioner's paradise.

He doesn't like the climate. So, for the last 10 years, Lotus Love has travelled around the world looking for the ideal country in which to spend his retirement. Meantime, he lives on the profits of tourist homes he runs in Montreal.

"I got fed up with the cold weather," he said. "Too many people break their bones in Canada every winter. There's hardly been a year in Montreal that I haven't fallen on the icy streets."

So the 68-year-old Love quit his job with a Montreal insurance company to seek his utopia —a friendly country with lots of sun and a low cost of living. So far, he gives top marks to Spain and India.

He quit Germany third. After that, he says, "If you can't live there you might as well stay in Canada or Britain."

Love met his prospective bride of months from Barcelona—on one of his tours of the continent a few years ago.

CALLED IT OFF

"She came to Montreal to marry me but after three weeks she called off the marriage and returned to Spain. She blamed those 'broken sidewalks.'"

He found the women in Hong Kong the most fascinating. He explained that "it's not how much they expose but the way they expose it that makes the difference."

On his most recent trip, Love left Montreal by bus for Vancouver last September where he boarded a Japanese cargo ship for Tokyo. He then visited other Far East countries and arrived in London by way of the Middle East.

Since 1950 he has lived on profits from his tourist homes. He plans to remain in Canada for two more years "so that I can buy property" and return to Europe.

"My advice to anyone with a limited pension is to go to Spain," said the Dublin-born adventurer. "There are thousands of English - speaking people there."

What about the other countries?

"Egypt is too dusty and dirty . . . Ceylon is too hot . . . and I always feel getting lost" in Japan.

"Italy and France are too expensive, and in Mexico I was almost eaten by the mosquitoes."

Policy Dispute Causes Concern In Government

NEW YORK (AP)—A sharp policy dispute is going on within the Kennedy administration "about how far to go in helping the Cuban refugees to overthrow the Castro government," the New York Times said Tuesday.

The Times, which reports the dispute in a Washington dispatch, said it has been going on "at the very top of the government" for two weeks.

The story also says:

President Kennedy has been receiving conflicting advice from his principal advisers in the White House, the Central Intelligence Agency and the state and defence departments.

Some officials are urging the president to provide enough military and economic assistance to enable the refugees to establish effective control over at least part of Cuba.

It is understood, however, that the state department is worried about the political and military consequences in the hemisphere and elsewhere of providing military force to achieve political ends.

Kennedy has made it clear that United States forces are not to be used in any military moves against the Castro regime.

Lead Series 2-0

Terriers Blank Amherst

GALT (CP) — Galt Terriers scored two first - period goals Tuesday night, then gave fine defensive support to Boal Barry's shutout goaltending to defeat Amherst Ramblers 3-0 for their second straight victory in the Eastern Canada Senior Cup final.

After a wide-open but scoreless second period, defenceman Darryl Sly's second goal of the night took much of the steam out of the Maritime champs.

The Nova Scotians, seeking a berth in the Dominion senior hockey final against Winnipeg Maroons, now face an uphill battle in the third and fourth games of the best-of-seven series today and Saturday.

Hurley made 30 stops in recording his second shutout of the Terriers' nine successive playoff victories.

MONETTE SAVED IT

He had to share the goaltending limelight, however, with Jacques Monette, Amherst's playing coach. Monette turned in 37 saves and had little chance on the two shots by Sly and one by Bobby Mader that got past him.

Left winger George Aitken has a twisted left knee. There's a chance both will be ready for action by the weekend.

The Ramblers were healthy. Right winger Dave Kiley, who missed the opener with flu, was back and Frank Dorrington, who played with a 100 - degree temperature Monday was recovered.

The Terriers, who blew onegoal leads three times in winning the first contest 5-4, tightened up considerably in the second game. They absorbed seven of the 12 minor penalties handed out by Montreal referees Charlie Knox and Dick Muna without damage.

Galt collected the only misconduct, a strange one to Fred Fletsch that had the crowd of 2,500 howling in derision. He got the gate 15 seconds before the end of the game when he picked up an object a fan had thrown to the ice and handed it to a referee.

The object was a lobster, a favorite product of the visitors' home province.

Galt struck at 8:39 of the first period when Fletsch's pass deflected off an Amherst player to Darryl Sly who had been left unguarded. He lifted a 35-footer past Monette.

MADER SCORED

In the third period, Martin carried into the corner and flipped the puck out to Sly who picked up an easy goal at 4:55. Fletsch put one into the net at the midway mark but the whistle had blown on a cross-checking penalty to Amherst's Lou Kiley and it was called back.

Terriers closed out the game with tenacious checking to preserve Hurley's shutout.

Celtics Win Hoop Crown

BOSTON (AP) — Bill Russell, the man who made basketball world champions of Boston Celtics, kept them there by sparking a 125-112 victory over the battling St. Louis Hawks Tuesday night.

The big pivot man's all-around excellence helped the Celtics clinch the best-of-seven National Basketball Association playoff finals in five games before 13,909 Garden fans.

Russell scored 30 points, grabbed 38 rebounds, blocked eight shots and stole the ball frequently as the Celtics won their third straight title and fourth in five years since he arrived.

Totals for the teams were: Sports Slices 5782; Richard Ellis 5500; Dovers 5477; Shirlands 5366; Blue Bells 5379; Goodmens 4750.

Napanee Bows To Barrie In Opener

The Napanee Comets dropped a 4-3 decision to Barrie Lakeviews in Napanee last night to open their OHA Intermediate "A" semi-final playoff series.

The second and third games in the best-of-five set will be played in Barrie this Saturday and the following Friday with a fourth game, if it is necessary, back in Napanee on April 22.

Barrie was in front all the way last night, 2-0 at one point, with some fine goal tending by both J. Sherman in the Barrie net and Norm Parrish of Napanee, keeping the score down.

Pat Gilmour, on a pretty breakaway, and Ted Toppazzini, from a scramble, scored the Comet goals.

Irish Whip Royals 5-1

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto St. Michael's College Majors evened up the best-of-seven Ontario Hockey Association junior A final Tuesday night with a convincing 6-1 pounding of the pennant-winning Guelph Royals.

The teams meet in Guelph for the fifth game Friday night, returning here Sunday, if a seventh game is necessary it will be in Guelph Monday night.

Larry Keenan was a two-goal man for the Majors who dominated the play after the first minute. Jack Cole also fired two and Brian Walsh got the other.

Guelph's Barry Jakeman opened the scoring, going right from the faceoff to beat Jerry Obevers from close range at 29 seconds. It wasn't until the half-way mark of the period that the Majors got on even terms although they had command of the play.

Keenan gave the Majors a 2-1 lead at 15:23 of the first period with a snappy backhander after both Draper twins, first Bruce and then Dave, had taken point-blank shots at goaltender Dennis Jordan.

COLE COMPLETES SCORE

Keenan's second goal came right from the opening faceoff after 20 seconds of the middle period and Cole, with centre Dave Osborne setting him up both times, completed the scoring.

The teams played scoreless hockey through the third period and St. Michael's, as Guelph had done in the first two games, out-checked, out - bumped and out - skated the Royals while holding a 34 - 22 edge in shots over the game.

Guelph was handed seven of the 11 penalties.

The Royals, without the services of their leader Rod Gilbert, had defenceman Al Lebrun back in uniform for the first period. Lebrun, injured when he fell into the boards during the second game, had his injured back frozen but it was plain to see he was in agony and could not skate with the rest of the players.

Sport Slices...

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

The way things are going in this red-hot Chicago Blacks-Detroit Red Wings hockey classic, some people in this city and district may be due for a spack of crawmeat after the champagne bubbles in the Stanley Cup.

Believe it or not there are those in the city, and I'm told in the district, who are not exactly what one might call in love with Bobby Hull, especially as a hockey player.

Evidence of this has been received at the sports desk in the form of those guided, gibberish which these dauntless heroes and heroines of the pen and typewriter launch without benefit of signing their names.

To be fair, these gibberish-laden billet-doux usually are interested in the waste-paper-basket regardless of content simply because it is the policy of this newspaper not to publish unsigned letters.

But since the hockey world series started, the Hull critics have been strangely quiet. The reason is simple enough. They have been watching the televised games or reading the press accounts of Master Robert Marvin Hull's near-sensational efforts for the common cause of the Windy City Eagles.

One of the earlier "hush notes," this before the play-offs teams had been decided, called Hull a "flash-in-the-pan" whose record-breaking youngster-stunt of winning the NHL scoring championship last year was a fluke.

"What's he done this year" labbed the here with his inked-up spear,"he couldn't lace the skates of the great Big "M". Now there's a hockey player if you're looking for something to write about in that garbage column of yours."

Well, perhaps Hull didn't do much outside of scoring 31 goals and assisting on 21 others giving him 13th spot in the final NHL scoring standing. And I know at least five managers of the National Hockey League who would be mighty proud to have a few players on their payrolls who could boast such a mark.

I am not taking anything away from Mahovlich as a hockey player. Any puckchaser who can blink the red light 48 times during a season must be classed something better than the mill-run. But unfortunately the big Toronto winger faded early in the later stages, in fact some will tell you he was a big flop when the chips were down.

And in defence of Point Anne's native son who I believe will be one of the greatest, if not the greatest player the National Hockey League will see, tonsilor, pressure and chips-down play proved merely a flame to the fuse of his great potential.

Hull's terrific answer to the challenge of playoffs battle has brought the deserved plaudits of hockey men far more expert than this reporter. In fact you don't have to be an expert to appreciate what the husky blonde from Point Anne is doing for the Hawks in this classic of the iceinens. All you need is a pair of eyes or ears.

Hull won the first game for the Hawks at Chicago. In the second game with the Hawks down 2-1 he thundered down the right side of the rink the puck glued to his stick. Glenn Hall left the nets. A sixth Hawk attacker leaped into the fray.

He ripped and drove around Warren Godfrey on the Wings defence and tore his way across the goalmouth. The very blast of the assault brought the big Detroit crowd to its feet. But the onslaught failed. The Hawks chances for a tie or victory died with it.

And Hull brought out another reason in the third game why he is, to the moment, the scintillating star of the series. He was given the job of "policing" the great Gordie Howe. Again he came up with a terrific display of power mixed with an unredressed display of craftiness that had a lot to do with keeping the mighty Detroit star off the scoring sheet until late in the game.

What Hull has done to date and what he will do in the future games may well cost the die for the Hawks cup fortunes. I do not mean he is a one-man team. Far from it. Mikita, Hay, Hall, Lissenberger, Nesterenko and company have flashed flaming desire, spirit and guts.

The Red Wings led by the doughty Gordie Howe fired the same win-or-nothing effort in the second game. This they must do tonight in order to again square the series. Who will win? My office pool ticket says Detroit 3 Chicago 1.

Twins Shut Out Yankees, Pirates Win

Dodgers Up Birds Beaten

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

Pedro Ramos, who led the league in games, lost last season, and Eli Grba, as short on victories as he is on vowels, have turned the American League upside down right at the start.

Ramos, a curve - balling Cuban, stopped the pennant-favored New York Yankees cold in their season opener Tuesday, blanking the defending champs on three singles as the Minnesota Twins made their debut with a 6-0 victory at Yankee Stadium.

And Grba, one of those $15,000 picks Los Angeles made in the expansion process, tripped up Baltimore's hopeful Orioles 7-5 with a six-hitter as the Angels jolted the Chicago White Sox, Cleveland, Kansas City and the Twins in a five-way tie for the first-day lead. All of which dumped the Yanks and Orioles, 1-2 selections in a pro-n n t picks, into the expanded second division.

Cleveland took off running with a 9-6 decision at Detroit, and Kansas City smacked Boston Red Sox 5-2. The White Sox and Washington, who opened a day earlier, were idle.

WALKS ONLY ONE

Ramos, who lost 18 and won but 11 last season, walked just one man and struck out five while pulling away the second three-hitter of his career and the first opening - day shutout suffered by the Yankees in eight years. The right-handed veteran also lined a two-run single off loser Whitey Ford in the seventh after Bob Allison's inning-opening home run had ended the slubby southpaw's two-hit shutout bid. Reno Bertoia also homered for the Twins.

Grba, never a winner against the Orioles in two seasons with the Yankees, squared his major league record at 9-9 after getting all the backing he needed from Ted Kluszewski, Big Klu, who hit only five home runs last season when he was with the White Sox, walloped a pair and drove in five runs.

A six-run second inning, three unearned, wrapped it up for the Indians, and Jim Perry, who went all the way with a seven-hitter, Bubba Phillips hit a two-run homer for the Indians, who had 16 hits—four each by Vic Power and Jimmy Piersall.

Los Angeles Dodgers, a speedy bunch of kids who may lack power but who could run everybody ragged in the National Baseball League race, are off flying, making runs out of singles, sacrifice bunts and infield hits.

It was that sequence that did the damage Tuesday night when the Dodgers opened the season with a 6-2 victory over Philadelphia Phillies and hustled in to join the world champion Pittsburgh Pirates, St. Louis Cardinals and Cincinnati Reds in a knot at the top of the standings.

Duke Snider, one of the Dodger's older greyhounds, opened a three-run inning with a single and galloped to third on a sacrifice and an infield out. Snider came in with the tie-breaking run when Charlie Neal smacked an infield single off starting of losing pitcher Robin Roberts.

COME FROM BEHIND

In the other openers, all afternoon contests, the Pirates were back in the old groove, coming from behind on Bill Virdon's three-run homer with two out in the ninth for an 8-7 victory at San Francisco. St. Louis defeated Milwaukee and Warren Spahn 3-1 on Daryl Spencer's solo home run in the 10th inning, and Cincinnati, rolling on homers by Frank Robinson and Wally Post, walloped Chicago's Cubs 7-1.

The Dodgers scored in the first inning when speedster Maury Wills singled, went to second on a sacrifice and then scampered home on a single by Tommy Davis. Wally Moon homered in the second, but Johnny Callison then squared it for the Phils with a two - run homer in the third inning off winner Don Drysdale.

Southpaw Mike McCormick was hustled in to face left-handed hitter Virdon in the Giants' ninth after the Pirates had put the tying runs on base against Stu Miller with two out. Virdon creamed McCormick's first pitch. Sad Sam Jones started for the Giants, but left in a two-run sixth. Willie McCovey batted in two runs and Orlando Cepeda drove in three, and each belted solo homers off Pirate starter Bob Friend. Ely-Face was the winner.

The Cardinals, blanked on two hits for seven innings, scored the tying' run in the eighth off Spahn on Hal Smith's triple and Spahn single by Bob Nieman. Spencer's shot then put it away.

Maple Leafs May Play Russians

FREDERICTON (CP) — The Atlantic Advocate quotes Conn Smythe, president of Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens, as forecasting a hockey series between a Russian team and Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League "within the next few years."

In the current issue of the monthly magazine, Smythe comments on the suggestion for such a series made last month by Yuri Bazhanov, secretary of the Soviet Union's Hockey Federation. Bazhanov would have the loser foot the bill.

However, Smythe makes it clear that if the Leafs go to Russia it will be "straight business" and they will have to be well paid for it.

But he says, "I personally am willing to arrange a side wager equal to the total amount, or more, of the expenses that the Canadian team will win. The only provision would be that the games will be televised so that if our team is defeated everyone in the world can see what the reason was."

PEARSON QUOTED

The Advocate quotes Liberal Leader Lester B. Pearson, a former hockey player, as saying a series between the Russians and a Canadian NHL team would be good for hockey, although the Canadians should win easily.

Mr. Pearson suggests the Canadian team adopt European rules for the series and avoid body contact.

"They could win without it, and a win on Russian terms would enhance our reputation for not only hockey ability but for sportsmanship as well."

Clarence Campbell, NHL president, says that in view of Twelfth Smoke Eaters' victory over the Soviet Union in the recent World Hockey Championship an NHL team would give the Russians a drubbing. "Such a series . . . would do international hockey more harm than good."

WILL TAKE YEARS

He says the Russians are unlikely to reach the standard of Canadian professional play for many years yet.

The Advocate carries the following additional comment:

Frank J. Selke, managing director of Montreal Canadiens—"I can see no advantage in our catering to a people who are ruthless and as lacking in

Key Man Says Pilous

Pilote Unsung Hero Of Chihawks

By W. R. WREATLEY

Canadian Press Staff Writer

DETROIT (CP) — Pierre Pilote, a little man for the big job of National Hockey League defenceman, will be one of Chicago Black Hawks' main hopes tonight when they shoot the works against Detroit Red Wings in the Stanley Cup final.

If the Hawks can pull out a victory they will have a 3-1 stranglehold of the best-of-seven series, with the fifth game in Chicago Friday.

Despite a remarkable record in the post - season playoffs, Pilote has been almost overlooked in the wild acclaim for goal-scoring forwards and the brilliance of goaltenders.

"Pilote is definitely one of the best defencemen in the National Hockey League right now," said Hawk coach Rudy Pilous after his club arrived from Chicago Tuesday night.

IS KEY MAN

"He has been a key man for us in this series and during the regular season he was one of the most dependable players we had. He has great defensive ability, can carry the puck and is extremely valuable on the power play. Above all, he is a team man.

"He weighs only 170 pounds but offsets this weight disadvantage, if any, by his smartness and effectiveness."

Pilote's record bears out Rudy's high praise. In nine games of the playoffs Pilote has counted 11 points on two goals and nine assists.

Against Montreal Canadians in six games of the semi-final series Pilote scored one goal and six assists. In the current cup final against Detroit he has scored one goal and three assists in three games.

Pilote has scored at least one point in every game since the playoff opened and the Red Wings will have to pay plenty of attention to him as well as to the galaxy of goal-getting Chicago forwards.

NOT DOWNHEARTED

The Red Wings flew in from Chicago Tuesday, seven hours ahead of the Hawks, and bustled off to their quiet quarters in a Toledo, Ohio, Holiday Inn, 60 miles away. Coach Sid Abel was by no means downhearted over his team's 3-1 loss in Chicago Monday.

"The best news Abel had on arrival was that his cripples are on the mend. Marcel Pronovost, Detroit defenseman, is expected to return to the lineup after missing two games. So is goalie Terry Sawchuk, whose shoulder injury in the first game forced him to give way to co-goalie Hank Bassen.

Defenseman Warren Godfrey, who had to leave Monday's game in Chicago because of a sore bruise, was also expected back.

Sitting in the hotel lobby, Pilote said he is sure he must be lucky in running up so many points in the playoffs.

"Since coming into the NHL I have tried to model my game on Doug Harvey of Montreal and Bill Gadsby of New York. I've watched the others, too, and have also made it a point to try to figure out the forwards as they come in.

"I can't step into shots the way Harvey does. I feel I have to do it differently, figuring out just when I should block a shot or let it go."

PLAYED WITH TEEPS

Pilote is one of the few French-speaking players on the Chicago club. He is 29 years old and was born in Kenogami, Que. His family moved to Port Erie, Ont., 14 years ago and he got his big start in hockey with the St. Catharines Junior Teepees.

He turned pro with the Buffalo club of the American Hockey League, spending three seasons with Buffalo and splitting the 1955-56 season between Buffalo and the Hawks. Since then he hasn't missed a game with the Hawks, and during the season just closed, scored six goals and 29 assists for 35 points.

Elmer (Moose) Vasko, giant Hawk defenceman, also came up with Pilote through the Hawks' St. Catharines and Buffalo farms.

"I've worked with him all the time," said Pilote. "Maybe that's some kind of record because we have been paired on defence since our junior days. Anyway, he's a great fellow and a swell guy to work with on the ice."

Pilote's French comes in handy when he talks with Delard St. Laurent, formerly of Montreal Canadiens, Al Arbour, Leo Labine of Sudbury, and Montreal born Reg Fleming.

Moncton Wants Series Down East

MONCTON (CP) — Moncton's chances of playing host to the Eastern Canadian Memorial Cup finals would be stronger if Guelph Royals eliminate Toronto St. Michael's in the Ontario Hockey Association junior A play.

Bart Yerza of Sussex, past president of the Maritime Amateur Hockey Association, said Tuesday that he had approached Canadian amateur Hockey Association President Jack Roxburg of Simcoe about staging the finals here between the Maritime champion Moncton Beavers and the OHA champion.

Yerza said, Roxburg was in favor of having the series here but had to discuss it with the OHA clubs.

CHEERS ARE SLIM

Moncton's chances of having the series played here appear slim, but they would become strong if Guelph Royals eliminated St. Michael's. Most Guelph players are not tied up by studies, a factor in scheduling St. Michael's games.

Beavers, the first Maritime team since the 1934 Charlottetown Abbies to reach the Eastern Canadian finals, are prepared to travel to Ontario if the OHA winner doesn't come East.

Moncton manager Don Ramsay said Tuesday night his club, if it makes the trip to Ontario, will attempt to have the scheduled best-of-seven Eastern finals reduced to a best-of-three or best - of - five set because six members of his team attend school.

Financially, the Moncton-Trois-Rivieres series completed Monday night was a success. The five-game set attracted 15,483 paid customers.

Pennington Gets Award

OTTAWA (CP) — Cliff Pennington of Hull - Ottawa Canadiens today was named most sentimental player in the Eastern Provincial Hockey League. It is his third title of the season.

The choice was made by the sportswriters and sportscasters in the six-team loop. They gave Pennington 18 of a possible 30 points—seven more than went to their second choice, Skippy Bancheff of Montreal Royals.

Earlier the same three players were chosen jointly as the league's most valuable players.

Billy Carter of Hull - Ottawa was third choice as most gentlemanly player with seven points.

Pennington picked up a measure of stimulus in the penalty box this season while he spearheaded the team to first place by taking the scoring title with 33 goals and 69 assists.

Bed, Grass Fires Cause Two Alarms

DESERONTO — The fire department was called to answer two alarms on the weekend. The first one was on Saturday afternoon when grass fire got out of control on the property of Norman Thomas at the Woodbine Quints camp just west of the town. This call was about four o'clock and the fire was easily controlled by the department.

On Sunday afternoon shortly after five o'clock they were called to the home of Mrs. George Hayes on Highway 50A, north of the town. Here a bed had been into flames during the absence of the owner and her family. When she arrived home she found the upper portion of the house filled with smoke and called the firemen from the home of a neighbor. One of the neighbors noted that from the time she left the phone call until the arrival of the department only 12 minutes elapsed and the apparatus travelled some six miles.

The firemen vented the upper portion of the house to gain admittance and found the fire was readily in the one bedroom but had spread somewhat through the one door. Had the fire been discovered by another five or ten minutes the whole house would have been lost. Damage was limited to some $300.

Income Tax Explained

Designed and written for the taxpayer who is not in a position to employ the services of a professional accountant to visit an Income Tax Office.

By C. A. Miller Former Supervising Assessor Toronto Tax Department

In this article we will deal with the status of the "common law" wife. There is no provision in the income tax law whereby a common law wife is recognized as such. Any payer living with a woman to whom he is not legally married can only claim exemption for himself. He is also not allowed to claim any medical expenses paid by her on her behalf.

However, if there are children of the union, then the taxpayer's return takes on an altogether different complexion. The taxpayer may claim the equivalent to married status in the sum of $1,000 on the first child. The fact that the husband is not living with housekeeper (common law wife) to look after the child, he may also claim the child's exemption of $350 on the same basis. This is the same exemption as he would get if he was living with a married person with one child.

To qualify as a full-time housekeeper for the children the law wife may not take any outside employment, even a part-time job. If she does she ceases to be a full time housekeeper. Also, the housekeeper must not be employed she will be taxed as a married person. The "husband" may still claim the married status on one child, but not on the second. The same child as a dependent as he would if the common law wife was not employed, and this still applies when she has the duties of a Mayor's Secretary-keeper. Medical expenses paid on behalf of the children are allowable if they come within the limits.

Question — I am living with a man to whom I am not married. We have one child. He is divorced. If she works do I deduct my earnings from the $1,350 to arrive at my exemption for her?

Answer — No. The only exception is a legal wife. A common law wife and child are a housekeeper for whom there is no exemption. A full-time nurse for a child may allow you to claim a child for $350 after the first year provided the married is married status. ($1000) on the same child.

Gary Crosby Changed Man Due to Love and Marriage

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A changed man is Gary Crosby.

You can sense it just talking to him. The words flow freely. There is none of the doubt and hesitancy that were once displayed by the first born of Bing's boys.

He admits that change himself.

"I was always fighting," he says. "I blamed myself for everything that went wrong."

What brought about the change? A series of physical remedies, some love and marriage.

OPENED NEW ACT

Two years ago, the four Crosbys opened their night club act in Las Vegas. Gary was all charged up, and his drive helped make the debut a success. But the tension continued on their tour, and he suffered a series of colds and throat ailments.

"My doctor told me not to use my voice," he said, "or I wouldn't have any," Gary says. "So for five months I didn't go near a microphone."

WENT AS TRIO

Yet the brothers it was ridiculous to wait around for me. They were working well together and should go as a trio. They did, and it turned out fine.

Gary admits that the turning point in his life came when he married Barbara Stuart from a Las Vegas chorus line to be his wife.

"It made all the difference in the world," he says. "What good is being a singing star if you come home to an empty room? Gary says something to work for. She has a great sense of humor and keeps me on an even keel. She just won't let me. I love Pat work her into the act."

Nancy Kwan Debuts in THE WORLD OF SUZIE WONG Opening Today at Belle Theatre

Oriental beauty Nancy Kwan makes her film debut in Ray Stark's "The World of Suzie Wong," romantic drama of East and West. Miss Kwan plays the title role opposite William Holden in the Paramount Technicolor attraction which opens today at the Belle Theatre.

Winner of a world-wide talent search, Miss Kwan succeeded to the role in Toronto before being selected by Producer Stark. She has performed with the Royal Ballet of London.

Filmed on location in Hong Kong and London, "The World of Suzie Wong" represents more than three years of planning by Stark. Having purchased Richard Mason's novel while it was still in galley proofs, the commissioned Paul Osborn to write the story that took place in Broadway, where it ran successfully for almost two years. Then Stark cast Sylvia Syms and Grahame Jon Patrick to transfer Mason's book to the screen.

Directed by Richard Quine, "The World of Suzie Wong" encompasses Michael Wilding and Sylvia Syms. Performances daily begin at 2.00, 7.00 and 9.10 at the Belle Theatre in Belleville.

JEWISH PEOPLE

instrument of the Nazi beknaty, "dragged into these sections."

Hausner contended that the crimes charged to Eichmann had been considered crimes throughout civilized world for long before Israel's 1950 law brought them into this country's legal code.

He referred to words spoken by his international military tribunals in Nuremberg, Washington, San Francisco and other cities during and after the war.

Those international decisions did not introduce anything new" Hausner said. "Murder is murder and crime is a crime.

LAWS RETROACTIVE

As to the ex post facto character of the 1950 Israeli law, Hausner cited some 30 countries that enacted similar laws for the punishment of Nazi criminals and made them retroactive.

"Ex post facto laws are a very long account to settle with the Nazis," the attorney-general said, "but they were dependent of the opportunity until the establishment of the state of Israel in 1948."

He said Israel's retroactive law had precedent in many countries in "East and west, in Asia and Europe."

He quoted British and U.S. laws and said similar legislation had been enacted by Australia, Canada, Belgium, Denmark, Greece, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway, Austria and the Soviet-bloc countries.

Shifting the blame for punishment Hagrecalled that Servatius had said in his opening state ment, that "the accused could not cannot atone for acts of his country, that he was dragged into it through no fault of his own."

Hausner's voice began to rise in volume. Suddenly, he began gesturing and his black robes whirled around him.

"Adolf Eichmann was not just an ordinary cog in the wheel," he said. "We will prove to this court that he initiated, planned, organized, and attempted to carry out efforts to exterminate the Jews in Europe."

The trial recesses Thursday during the Israeli week of remembrance of the holocaust and heroism," during which memorial rites will be conducted for the Jewish dead in the Second World War.

Hausner asserted that international law is not a body of statutes but a living law.

VOICES JUDGMENTS

"It is the expression, case by case, of the voice and judgments of the civilized world."

At the opening of the afternoon session Hausner plunged anew into a detailed reply to the defence's legal objections to the proceedings.

The attorney-general disagreed that Israel could not try Eichmann because the crimes in question were committed outside Israel's borders. Israel, he said, is "a good company with many other nations who had laid down regulations for the punishment of offences committed abroad," for reasons of state or economic policy or the security of the people.

COMMONS HEARS

debate on the 1961-62 spending program of the agriculture department.

C. A. Millikan, Progressive Conservative for the Ontario riding of Prince Edward-Lennox, said he pays it a bonus for ploughed corn. He would be willing to pay this price if the western farmers were getting it.

The Canadian farmers were paying exorbitant prices for machinery, he said. It was not regulated by the western "grain bills or bruises."

Mr. Millikan said the eastern as well as western feeder must be protected against exorbitant prices.

MINISTER'S PROTESTS

Agriculture Minister Alvin Hamilton accused the Liberals of trying to set the eastern against the western farmer.

Augustin Brassard of (— Lesage) said this was not so. Quebec members were interested in the welfare of both eastern and western farmers. But there should be a fairer share of subsidies for easterners.

Mr. Brassard added that Mr. Hamilton should be consistent and see that Quebec has farmers too.

Mr. Hamilton said the difficulties of trying to obtain a fair price for grain because income for agriculture "are big in countries" are by without starting a fight between the two different groups."

CCF Leader Argue accused Mr. Hamilton of trying to torpedo federal freight subsidies on movement of feed grains to Eastern Canada.

NOTICE REFERRED

Mr. Hamilton said he has noted a growing amount of criticism of the Canada Grain Act. Canada over the a subsidies, which will amount to $20,000,000 in 1961-62.

When Mr. Argue pleaded him don on the chance every effort to establish that he knows of no organization that has ever approved resolutions seeking elimination of the subsidies.

Mr. Argue charged Mr. Hamilton of "loose and irresponsible" statements based on private conversations with unnamed persons.

Mr. Hamilton retorted that the Commons knows from long experience that Mr. Argue often talks loosely and who gives misinformation to this House."

CALLS SUBSIDY

Mr. Millikan described the freight rate assistance as a subsidy to western farmers. He was glad the western farmer got a fair price for grain for the grain he is producing."

Mr. Argue said the subsidy was to reduce the cost of moving feedgrain to eastern Canada and to enable a lower price for eastern buyers.

The CCF leader later applauded Mr. Hamilton's announcement that speculators were exposed to keeping farmer from the cause of short supplies of feed grains.

A small deal of the night, although was taken up with a wrangle over wheat sales to China. Canadian wheat board should be permitted under the Item providing funds for the board of grain commissioners.

SEEKS WITH OPPORTUNITY

Deputy Speaker Jacques Flynn ruled that such a debate should not be allowed. He was upheld by a vote of 108 to 30.

Dr. Nasserden (PC—Rosthern) and Mr. Horner (PC—Jasper-Edson Corpfoot - Maple Creek) sided with the Liberals on the ruling.

It was the third time in this Parliament that Mr. Nasserden has failed to get legislation passed.

Mr. Argue accused the government of "chosen" as "repugnant" as that employed by the Communists in Czechoslovakia which "stinks."

He said Mr. Flynn had made a "grave mistake." He declined the suggestion of Veterans Minister Churchill Gregory, Conservative, House leader, that he withdrew the remark.

The farm debate is scheduled to resume today.

announcer said:

"This is Moscow. All radio stations of the Soviet Union ... We are broadcasting the first statement on the world's first flight by man into cosmic space. ..."

As he reached the words "into cosmic space," the announcer's voice rose dramatically and he paused for the full implication of the line.

The launching had been preceded by rumors that spread through Moscow's diplomatic and Soviet capital Tuesday that Russia had successfully put a man into orbit and brought him back.

But the official announcement made clear that the launching had taken place today.

(Apparently the Communist daily Worker on Tuesday had jumped the gun by a few hours by announcing in today's edition — available Tuesday night—that the Russians had launched the first man into space and brought him back safely.)

Gagarin's flight came almost exactly three years and six months to the day after the Soviet scientists launched the first artificial earth satellite, Sputnik I, put into space on Oct. 4, 1957.

Twelve Soviet satellites have been successfully launched since then.

Russia Will Lead U.S. Long Time Says President

Claims News Will Be Worse Before It Is Better

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy said Wednesday Russia will remain ahead of the United States for some time in the space race—that "the news will be worse before it is better."

But he said he is hopeful the U.S. will be first in other scientific achievements of much greater benefit to mankind than the spectacular Soviet feat of sending a man into orbit around the earth and bringing him safely back.

While Kennedy credited the Russians with "a most impressive scientific accomplishment," he did not regard it as any sign "we are behind if the free world," in the struggle against communism.

But in setting forth these views at a press conference, the president did sound a note of warning. He said:

"I do regard the total mobilization of men and things for the service of the Communist bloc under the last years a true source of great danger to us. I do not regard that today, you have to live with that danger much most of the rest of this century."

DRAWS BIG CROWD

This ninth Kennedy press conference in three months was the largest ever held in the executive office building, surpassing the previous record set at his first on Jan. 25.

He drew laugh with the opening question, asking: "We are behind"? He pledged that under no circumstances will U.S. armed forces be engaged in any move to overthrow Cuba's Fidel Castro and installed Cuban exiles short of calling Castro a Communist and he said that under present circumstances the U.S. continues to oppose admittance of Red China to the United Nations.

He also said he is hopeful that Russia will reply "this week" to the British proposal for a quick conference on Laos.

Before the press conference, Kennedy received Soviet Premier Khrushchev a congratulatory cable on the man-in-space victory.

The cable, which said Kennedy told the Kremlin that in the continuing quest for knowledge of outer space our nations can work together to achieve the greatest benefit to mankind."

EXPERIENCE

In reply to a question about the significance of the Soviet achievement, Kennedy said the U.S. has expected all along that Russia would win the spaceman race.

A reporter told the president that a recent poll indicated he said he is tired of seeing the U.S. second to Russia in the space race.

"Well," Kennedy replied, "the Soviet Union has had a certain advantage in securing these large (rocket) boosters, which enable them to put more greater weight, and that advantage is going to be with them for some time.

"However tired anybody may be, I am not as tired today as I was then. I am, it is a fact that it is going to take some time."

As for the U.S. effort, it will be carried out "with due regard to the interests, to the life of the men involved," Kennedy said.

Former Head Of Hockey Loop Drowns in Lake

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—John Digby Chick, Windsor businessman and former president of the American Hockey League, was drowned early today when his car plunged into 18 feet of water from the east wall of nearby Port Dalhousie harbor on Lake Ontario.

The 69-year-old sportsman retired as AHL president two years ago, and the car he was driving had been presented to him at a testimonial on his retirement.

Crew members of the dredger Charles Dick, across the harbor, saw the car go in and said it floated about 100 feet or two lengths before sinking. Police recovered the car and the body. There were no passengers.

WIFE, SON SURVIVE

Surviving relatives include his wife, an invalid in hospital at Windsor, who was not notified immediately of his death, and a son John, at Windsor.

Mr. Chick was agent for the National Sand and Materials Company, owner of the dredger Charles Dick, which was tied up in Port Dalhousie harbor. He had come here from Windsor to visit the vessel, which was dredging sand from Lake Ontario.

He left his hotel in a rainstorm and went to the east wall of the harbor, only to find the dredge had shifted to another berth. As he was leaving his car, he apparently misjudged the distance to the edge of the wharf, and the car toppled over at 12:30 a.m.

Joe Dupree, wheelsman of the dredge, saw the car go over.

Two mindivers, Jack Gordon and Wolfgang Heinze, located the automobile three hour later, tied on the sling and it was hoisted out.

While he never played professional sport, he became one of the top hockey officials of the continent when he became president of the AHL in 1956. At one time, he was mentioned prominently as possible president of the National Hockey League.

EAN BASEBALL TEAM

He had interests in hockey and baseball. He operated a baseball team in Windsor years ago, and was shareholder and president of the original Windsor Bulldogs of the International Hockey League 40 years ago.

During the Second World War, he was given much credit for keeping hockey going in the United States when playing make possible a supply of Canadian players.

Besides his sports interests, he was active in business and political affairs. He was a former Sheldonet of the Ontario Road Builders' Association.

Murder Charge Laid

TORONTO (CP)—Bryan Roberts, a 10-year-old found beside his dead mother with his head battered, today was reported out of immediate danger but doctors say his brain may be permanently damaged.

Soon after police found Roberts and Mrs. Violet Roberts' body in their York Township apartment last week, they arrested Charles Roberts, 54, the boy's father, and charged him with murder.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Rain which began in the western Lake Erie region on Wednesday has spread northeastward and covers the remainder of Southern Ontario. Skies are cloudy over central sections and generally clear over Northern Ontario. As the storm centred south of the lower lakes moves northeastward, rain and snow will end in southwestern Ontario this afternoon and skies will clear during the evening.

ONT. LIBERALS EXPECT HEAVY REGISTRATION

Prominent Party Leaders to Speak

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Liberals today opened the first of two annual meetings that will be highlighted by a study of federal and provincial matters, elections of officers, and the guest appearances of two prominent party leaders.

The Ontario Woman's Liberal Association met briefly today with a full slate of business, a luncheon speech by Senator John Connolly, president of the National Liberal Federation, and the spectacular Soviet feat of sending a man into orbit around the earth and bringing him safely back.

While Kennedy credited the Russians with "a most impressive scientific accomplishment," he did not regard it as any sign "we are behind if the free world," in the struggle against communism.

But in setting forth these views at a press conference, the president did sound a note of warning. He said:

No Laurels to Earn in This Trial, But Eichmann Counsel Likes Fight

COLOGNE (AP) — Robert Servatius is an old hand at defending Nazis in court. That is probably why he was called to defend Adolf Eichmann against charges of conspiracy to murder killing millions of Jews during Hitler's regime.

The 57-year-old, heavy - set lawyer never was a member of the Nazi party. He says he opposed the Hitler regime from the beginning.

Servatius speaks of his Nazi defence work without enthusiasm. He says he does it to see that there is an adequate counsel for the defendants. In accepting the Eichmann case, he spoke of a "heavy duty." Eichmann went on trial in Jerusalem Tuesday.

Eichmann Remains in Cell As Jews Mourn Losses

JERUSALEM (Reuters) — Adolf Eichmann sat in his closely-guarded cell today while Israel mourned the millions of Jews he is accused of murdering during the Nazi era.

The trial of the former Nazi colonel was suspended as observation of an annual day of remembrance for the estimated 6,000,000 European Jews who died from beatings, starvation, overwork and extermination in Hitler's gas chambers.

A wail of sirens announced a two-minute silence throughout the country in the bright morning sunshine as the workers downed their tools and stood with bowed heads.

On the stony Mount of Remembrance west of the Holy City hundreds of Israelis broke into uncontrollable sobbing as the ashes of concentration camp victims were lowered into a vault in the symbolic burial of the Jewish victims of Nazism.

A three-man West German observation delegation, headed by Hans Sterchen, section head in the West German government information office, attended the burial service in the Memorial Tents on the hillside building on the mountain slopes.

Rabbi Mordecai Nurock, whose entire family was murdered by the Nazis, was selected to kindle an "eternal flame" shortly after the burial.

Henceforth the flame will be relighted daily in memory of the lives of the more than 30,000 Jewish communities destroyed by the Nazis.

Flags flew at half staff through the country as Jews headed for memorial gather-ings, especially in the larger services and mass rallies.

There was no relaxation of the constant watch outside Eichmann's cell in Jerusalem's maximum security centre.

Rehavs of police maintained rigid security measures, shutting their food with the prisoner, no one knowing until the last minute which portion would go to Eichmann.

This day of remembrance, by an ironical twist, gave Eichmann a brief respite from a bitter attack in his trial which enters its third day Friday.

The prosecution Wednesday painted Eichmann as the evil genius of the Nazi plan to wipe out the Jewish race.

The pale, stooped figure in the glass prisoner's box squirmed visibly as prosecutor Gideon Hausner labelled him a race killer and dismissed defence arguments that the Nazi leader was only a spawn of Hitler.

Hausner said that Eichmann, as chief of the Gestapo's department of Jewish affairs, succeeded in part in committing the crime of genocide."

Under the impact of Hausner's prosecution, Eichmann rubbed his hands over his face, clasped his party-bald head slightly and vigorously blew his nose.

It was about the only sign of emotion from Eichmann, who at times during the slow-moving second day of his trial appeared almost bored.

Adenauer Reported Pleased With Talks With Kennedy

WASHINGTON (AP) — West German Chancellor Adenauer was reported to have left Washington by his foreign policy talks with President Kennedy. He apparently was regarded as U.S. firmness under the new Kennedy administration in dealings with the Soviet Union.

The two men wind up their conference with two meetings today. Berlin was scheduled as a principal topic for this session.

Sunday the 85-year-old German statesman will fly to Austin, Tex. He will be a guest at Vice-President Lyndon B. Johnson's ranch. He is scheduled to address the Texas state legislature Monday before departing on his return flight to Germany.

Official Washington assurances on U.S. policy with respect to West Berlin in a meeting with State Secretary Dean Rusk at the state department late Wednesday. Rusk told him and Foreign Minister Heinrich Von Brentano that the United States is under no duty thereby to take whatever action may be necessary to meet any threat to its rights and obligations in West Berlin.

This reassurance was one of the things Adenauer came here to get.

He wanted to form his first-hand impression of the new president and to determine for himself if Kennedy intends to build up the military strength and political unity of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization while he undertakes at the same time negotiations to improve relations with Russia.

German officials said Kennedy had made clear that he has no intention of shelving the plan for furnishing NATO with a nuclear striking force — provided the European allies want it.

PC BACKBENCHER IN HOT DEBATE WITH MINISTER

Wants Farmers' Bill Revamped

OTTAWA (CP) —Jack McIntosh, quick - tempered government back - bencher from Saskatchewan, clashed with Agriculture Minister Alvin Hamilton Wednesday in heated Commons debate over the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act.

"I think it is time that the minister sewnup the whole agency out there," the member for Swift Current—Maple Creek said as he criticized what he described as lack of agreement between field workers and head office personnel administering the act.

Mr. McIntosh, 51 - year - old farmer-rancher and Liberal MP first elected to the Commons in 1949, sided with Opposition Tuesday in unsuccessful attempt to upset a ruling by Deputy Speaker Jacques Flynn in debate on the $172,181,893 spending estimates of the agriculture department for the fiscal year.

The agriculture debate is expected to be completed today with the Commons then moving on to consideration of the estimates of the defence department.

HIT PFE INCREASES

Mr. McIntosh criticized the government for increasing the PFE rental rates charged for use of government - operated community pastures by 100 per cent for the coming season.

"Politically speaking I do not like it," he said.

Fee increases for cattle grazed on the community pastures were thoroughly discussed necessary because they "had to meet their way". However, one community pasture, "in which I have a great interest," last year had a net profit of some $10,000.

Mr. Hamilton replied that because one pasture was showing a profit it didn't mean fees should be decreased.

He went on: "Agriculture had to be considered, and the last increase is the fee is 5% cents a day at head from three cents was made only to make the whole pasture system on a break even.

TRADE INSULTS

Earlier in the day Mr. Hamilton and CCF Leader Argue traded insults in a verbal slugging match.

Mr. Argue, who represents the Saskatchewan riding of Assiniboia, was described by the minister as the "ass in Ottawa."

Mr. Argue accused Mr. Hamilton of using the "McCarthy tactic" of "smear, smear and of "slurring" his constituents with a "sly remark." He challenged the minister to repeat the "scurrilous attack" on any public platform in the Prairies.

Loss was estimated at more than $200,000.

Twenty Persons Including Whites Slain

LUANDA (Reuters) — Some persons, including a white woman and child, were slain this week by terrorists operating in the Portuguese West African colony of Angola, near its border with the Congo, it was reported today.

Terrorists killed one woman, child and 10 other whites in an attack on the village of Uncs Wednesday, Reuters said. Uncs has since been occupied by Portuguese troops.

(The Lusitania news agency reported its correspondent in Luanda said nearly 100 of the terrorists were killed in a desperate resistance by the Luanda Banks.)

Two army officers and a "number" of soldiers also were slain in a terrorist ambush this week in the northern territory of Angola.

Red Papers Set Aside Statistics, Play up Human-Interest Stories

MOSCOW (Reuters)—The Soviet press was aside by statistics, statistical accounts of Russian achievements today and devoted thousands of words to articles told of his home life, his boyhood and his military career.

The youth newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda told of the excitement of Gagarin's parents eyed wife Valentina as her husband hurried through space and of tears of joy streaming down her cheeks when Moscow Radio announced he had landed safely.

Valentina, 26, had sat known in advance of her husband's flight. She said she knew he was training for something "important" but he had given her no details. He left home several days ago without saying where he was going.

The correspondent for Komsomolskaya Pravda, without saying where the Gagarins live, described their home as "an ordinary house in an ordinary street."

"An ordinary woman opened the door," he wrote. "She lives in her own world. She loves. We noticed the wallpaper with flowers on it, the curtains, the bookshelves and the inevitable radio set."

The cosmonaut's father, Alexander Gagarin, told a Tass reporter at his home at Gzhatsk, near Smolensk, that the news of boy Yuri used to dream of space flights.

"He liked reading books about airmen, Jules Verne's novels, the works of Tsiolkovsky (pioneer Russian interplanetary rocket designer) and dreamed of the time when people would fly to the other planets," the elder Gagarin said.

Valentina gave this description of her husband: "He has a calm, even nature, a great sense of fairness, and is an all-round sportsman."

Moscow Plans Hero's Welcome For Cosmonaut

Is Ready to Fly Again If Asked Says Gagarin

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Yuri Gagarin described today how he floated around inside his space ship and gazed at the fascinating beauty of the earth from more than 100 miles out in space.

"It is difficult to render it in words," the 27-year-old cosmonaut said in an interview with the Soviet press agency Tass.

He said he was suspended in mid-air, with objects swimming around him in the cabin. Despite weightlessness, he was able to eat and drink normally, he said.

"I felt fine and my state of mind was excellent," he said. "I could have gone flying again straight away but as I would have been required."

Gagarin described the strange colors—bright orange, shimmering blue and inky blackness—along the curvature of the earth as the illuminated atmosphere shades off into the darkness of space.

"This transition from the blue to the dark is very gradual and lovely."

But the Soviet spaceman had no fear his cosmonaut ship would crash.

"All my thoughts and feelings Khrushchev and the government of the program of the flight." he said in an interview with the Soviet news agency Tass.

"I wanted to carry out all the tasks that I had to do as well as I possibly could. There was a great deal of work. The whole flight passed normally."

Gagarin said he had no feeling of loneliness in space.

"I knew well that my friends, the whole Soviet Union, were thinking of me and helping me. I was sure that the party and the government always ready to help me if I found myself in difficulties."

HERE FULFILLED

Gagarin said he always had wanted to be a cosmonaut.

"I dreamed of it as a space traveller. The wish to fly into space was my personal wish. When they entrusted me with it, I began to prepare for the Parking Meters On Front St. To Be Replaced

Parking meters along Front Street are going to be turned in on new models.

Glencoe E. Thompson, chairman of the Belleville Parking Authority stated that approximately 175 meters on both sides of Front Street would be replaced with new ones in approximately a month's time and the cost of the meters would be paid out of revenue.

Coin slots of many of the meters on Front Street are worn and the meters are not working properly with the result that the city is losing money, Mr. Thompson said.

The new meters will be the same type but will be double headed which means that approximately one half of the present ports will be eliminated.

Suggests U.S. Should Join Commonwealth

LONDON (Reuters)—The editor of the London Sunday Telegraph said Saturday night the "biggest single political step" the United States could take in the next 10 years would be to join the Commonwealth.

Editor Peregrine McCallum told the American Chamber of Commerce here that the Commonwealth is now no longer "British" but is a group of independent nations with a special relationship.

"So far as I see the partnership of the Commonwealth involves no abrogation of sovereignty except in this country," McCallum said.

There are many advantages for the U.S. to join the Commonwealth, he said.

The organization is bigger than the U.S. itself and "I think the Russians would find it a most enlightening action by the United States," he said.

In addition, it would maintain the balance of power in the Commonwealth, which now has a preponderance of African and Asian members, McCallum said.

The U.S. could better aid underdeveloped countries within the confines of the Commonwealth, an organization established for that purpose, he added.

flight, and, as you see, my with was fulfilled."

Of what he saw from the space ship Gagarin said:

"The dark side of the Earth was clearly visible; the coasts of continents, islands, big rivers, big surfaces of water and structural features were clearly distinguishable.

"I saw for the first time with my own eyes the earth's spherical shape. You can see its curvature when looking to the horizon.

"I must say that the view of the horizon is quite unique and very beautiful.

"It is possible to see the reflections of sunrays from the light surface of the earth to the atmosphere's dark sphere which one can see the stars. This blinding line is very thin, just like a belt of film surrounding the earth's sphere.

"I did not see the moon. In space the sun is shining two or three brighter than on earth. Stars are very well seen. They are bright and distinct.

"The whole picture of the sky is more contrasted then when it is seen from the earth."

Gagarin said that when weightlessness developed, he felt something.

"Everything was easier to perform. This is understandable. The head and arms weigh nothing."

'LIKE ON EARTH'

"Objects are swimming in the cabin, and myself, I did not slip in the cabin, as usual, but I was suspended in mid-air. During the state of weightlessness I felt and looked as though I was like on earth."

The difference between the earth's light and the blackness of space "is of a delicate blue colour."

"And this transition from the blue to the dark is very gradual and lovely. It is difficult to render it in words.

"And when I emerged from the shadow of the earth, the horizon looked different. There was a bright orange strip along it, which again passed into a blue hue and once again into a dense black color."

Gagarin continued to take notes in space and "handwriting did not change, though the hand was weightless."

"But it was necessary to hold the writing block or otherwise it would float away from the hands. I was in communication constant ly with the ground using a telegraph key. As I have become accustomed, weightlessness has no effect on the ability to work.

"I was passing from weightlessness to gravitation, to the state of increased gravity force, happens smoothly.

"Arms and legs feel as pressed to the chair, as during weightlessness, but now they have weight.

"I ceased to be suspended over the chair, but sat in it.

"When I returned to the earth I was overjoyed, I was warmly met by our Soviet people. I was told that the first spring. He stated that the show at Cleveland was not good in the former years, while the show at Harrisburg, Pa., probably fell in the same category.

GOOD BUFFALO SHOW

Mr. Kingdon was enthusiastic of the show held at Buffalo, N.Y. "At this show there was no stage show, just books, and there were many eager customers crowding around trying to find a suitable place in Canada to spend a summer holiday." The manager stated the Association had received over 5,000 inquiries about accommodation; he was sure that many of the inquirers would be here this summer to spend their tourist dollars. He defended the amount of money spent on these shows, stating it was one of the finest ways to introduce people to the area.

Mr. Rose, in handing over the gavel to Mr. Cleeve, thanked the members of the Zone for their co-operation and told of the struggles the Zone had in getting on its feet. The industrial development of a community through a co-operative association is an ideal setup and will prove itself as time goes on.

The members enjoyed a delightful social hour and a delicious roast beef dinner provided by Mr. Yanover.

Two Belleville Youths Guilty Of Charges

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)—Donald Jodoin, 20, and Norman Pender, 20, both of Belleville, and Carl Quinlan, 18, of Toronto, pleaded guilty today to charges involving worthless cheques. They will be sentenced Monday.

Jodoin and Pender were arrested at St. George Wednesday night after their Ontario car crashed through a police roadblock. Coghlan's arrest was made at a bank.

Earlier this week all three received a six-month suspended sentence resulting from theft of a radio.

Harold Cleave New Chairman Of LODA Zone

The Lake Ontario Development Association, sponsored by twenty-one local area municipalities in this area has grown by leaps and bounds and from the size of the first meeting held at the New Belleville Hotel will be attended by both members and observers. Wilmot Rose of Picton, the zone's outgoing chairman of the Zone and Aid. Jack Ireland, past president of the LODA with Don Kingdon, general manager were all on hand to guide the meeting and outline the work that had been accomplished since the last meeting.

Ald. Lorne McDougall representing Mayor Worship, Mayor A. McLean Haig, and the Warden of the County, Harleigh Hamilton, brought greetings from the County of Hastings. Both men spoke briefly, wishing the association every success and the appreciation of the municipal representatives in its effort to make the community more industrially minded. The following were represented by Carl Thompson, general manager of Trenton and J. E. McArthur. The municipalities represented were Belleville, Bancroft, Tweed, Trenton, Brighton, Madoc, Tyendinaga Indian Band, Bloomfield, Picton, Dungannon township and Napanee.

THREE NEW MEMBERS

Three new members to the zone, Bancroft, Napanee and Tyendinaga Indian Band, were admitted to membership during the evening. The new election of officers for the coming year, Harold Cleave of Bloomfield was elected chairman, Mr. Cleave has been an active member since the inception of the Zone and has attended some of the Sportsmen Shows in the United States. He is energetic and enthusiastic and the Zone probably could not have found a better Wicket of Thurlow township to lead it. His election was unanimous choice for vice-chairman, while the Reeve of Madoc, William Shannon and Ald. Jack Ireland of this town were elected to the directorate. Lorne Dickmeder replaced Earl Defoe as secretary-treasurer.

A film "Gold Mine of Main Street" which depicts the tourist industry can play in the development of a community was shown to a small group following the business session.

The president of the Association gave a detailed outline of the work that has been done for the zone in his year of office and thanked all for the co-operation given on the several projects. Don Kingdon, the manager of the association, spoke at length on the work done at the various Sportsmen's Shows in the United States. He stated that the show at Cleveland was not good in the former years, while the show at Harrisburg, Pa., probably fell in the same category.

Minister Sees Another Record Tourist Year

NORTH BAY (CP) — Ontario enjoys 60 per cent of all Canada's tourist business and 1961 should see another record year, Travel and Publicity Minister Cathcart said Wednesday night.

He told the North Bay Lakeshore Resorts Association that enquiries at government reception centres pointed to an overall increase of tourists in 1961. Last year about 20,000,000 tourists visited Ontario.

He said the Niagara Falls centre has had an increase of registrations in the first three months of this year, from 866 in 1960 to 1,351. The Point Edward Blue Water Bridge has reported 9,477 tourists so far compared to 4,200 in 1960.

Mr. Cathcart suggested that groups establish regional tourist associations to benefit from a new government grant program of matching grants to be used for publicity.

Tourism has become a $300,000,000 a year business in Ontario, Mr. Cathcart said, but the money spent by resort owners are not the only people to benefit.

Other businesses benefited also by the sale of furniture, appliances and other items necessary in operating a resort, a number of tourist establishments, he added.

Women's Group Hears Debate On Armament

OTTAWA (CP)—Egan Chambers, parliamentary secretary to Defence Minister Harkness, said Wednesday right Canada needs Bomarc missiles for defence.

He told a meeting of the Ottawa chapter of the Voice of Women, a peace - promoting women's group, that the Bomarc can achieve its aim of destroying enemy bombers with nuclear missiles more effectively if equipped with a nuclear warhead.

Mr. Chambers formed a panel with Charles Taylor, Board of Southam News Services; and Judy LaMarsh, Liberal MP from Niagara Falls.

Mr. Lynch said the problem was that External Affairs Minister Green was "trying to get on with disarmament while his colleague Mr. Harkness arms armament."

He then urged the public to support Mr. Green and his efforts for effective disarmament measures. "He will be a great minister if his policies can match his words."

Miss LaMarsh stressed the destructive force of nuclear weapons and lauded the host for their edimination.

Town Briefs

TRENTON — Gerald A. Weaver, businessman, said Wednesday that excavating should start next week on a property owned by him on Dundas Street West next to the Odeon Theatre. He said that the building to be erected would house a branch of the Royal Bank of Canada and a Simpsons-Sears store.

Town Engineer Walter Murray said yesterday that he had been forced to call for a cessation of work on a Queen Street property because the contractor had not complied with a request that council be consulted on theproposed extension work. Mr. Murray said that he had been unable to issue a permit for an extension to an existing building because such an extension would be in variance to the zoning of the area. The contractor had gone ahead with the work, without a permit. Accordingly the engineer ordered that the work be stopped until council can consider the matter.

The public works' department was engaged Wednesday in filling pot holes on Dundas St. West.

Renegotiation Of Uranium Pact Postponed

OTTAWA (CP) — Renegotiation of Britain's 1957 commitment to buy 12,000 tons of Canadian uranium valued at about $200,000,000 will be delayed as a result of talks here on the subject by Prime Minister Diefenbaker and Macmillan, it was disclosed today.

A four-man team of Canadian experts, headed by W. M. Gilchrist, president of EldoradoMining and Refining Limited, had been scheduled to meet officials of the British Atomic Energy authority in London; April 17.

However, Mr. Gilchrist told the special Commons research committee today that there has been a change in plans. He said no date has been set yet for the meeting in London.

After the committee adjourned, he told reporters the London meeting has been postponed as a result of talks between Mr. Diefenbaker and Mr. Macmillan, here earlier this week.

He said the London meeting will not be held until the British commitment has been discussed at cabinet level by both countries.

Mr. Gilchrist said he expects the renegotiation talks will not take place until late this month or early May.

On Tuesday, after meeting Mr. Macmillan, Mr. Diefenbaker said both countries have reaffirmed their willingness to renegotiate the commitment. Mr. Macmillan also told a press conference that he and Mr. Diefenbaker reached "full understanding" that the deal should be renegotiated.

Trade Minister Hees told the Commons late in March that the Canadian government feels it cannot accept any reduction of the 12,000 tons. However, he said "there might be a possibility of some alteration in the price."

During today's research committee questioning members voiced over Liberal objections not to call as witnesses on the uranium deal Trade Minister Hees, Liberal Leader Pearson or Robert Winters, president of Rio Tinto Mines Limited.

Douglas Named Banquet Speaker

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier Tommy Douglas of Saskatchewan will deliver a major address at a banquet planned by the Ottawa New Party committee April 22, it was announced today.

SPRING LOOK FOR AIRMEN — Centre of admiration, an airman at St. Hubert, Que. models a new-style peak hat which is gradually coming into service with the RCAF. To be worn by all Regular Force airmen below officer rank, the hat replaces the old, familiar wedge cap worn by the airman on the left. The wedge cap, used by the RCAF for more than twenty-two years is not about to be retired however, as it is expected the cap will still be issued to Auxiliary Force airmen and air cadets. The admiring airwoman on the right wears the distinctive headdress designed especially for airwomen when they entered the service in 1951.

A Heritage Restored

Something old, something new, something borrowed——

Probably there was nothing blue about Major Yuri Alekseyevich Gagarin's space apparel, as he burst from the cradle of his species. He would have made a poor bride anyway.

There was much borrowed though — not merely the science fiction writer's weird togs become actualities but the accumulated skills and knowledge of mankind, laboriously mastered throughout tedious centuries, without which other men could not have provided Major Gagarin with his chariot.

There was something new—a date to overshadow 1492, April 12, 1961, that historic day which all future generations will regard as marking the dawn of a new age. Whether Gagarin's name will be one to conjure with down through the coming centuries, or whether he will be fated to play Leif Ericson to some future space columbus, we cannot now guess. But he himself will live out his days in the knowledge that he is the true pioneer.

This is not to suggest that Gagarin's role, in any realistic appraisal, is other than a minor one. He merely loaned his body for the trip made possible by the brains of other men. And yet, by this loan, he restored to the human race something precious of which it had been robbed in the years since Columbus sailed westward into the unknown. By his physical and moral courage, he gave back to mankind an old heritage, that of a new frontier. He restored to the human race a challenge to adventure physically into the unexplored and this restoration of an old treasure is of the utmost importance. Yesterday there was no place that man could go where man had not been before — if we except a few puny mountain peaks. Today all space is unrolling before future generations and there is no limit to the rollcall of impossibles which will make man's spirit soar, his heart leap into his throat—and his body shrivel into dust in some distant, dark and dreadful land.

It is no answer to say, as some will, that man is everywhere surrounded by challenges to his intelligence, that the secrets of the earth are still largely veiled from his view. These challenges do the mind, while indispensable and certain to play the major role in propelling future generations in their ventures from their native cradle earth, are still not enough. For man is still a physical, as well as a mental or spiritual, actuality and to rise to his full stature needs to put his body, as well as his mind and his spirit, to the test of full struggle.

There will be many, of course, who will view Gagarin's step into a new epoch in the light of the current international situation, as yet another Russian victory in the Cold War. Yet how narrow is such an outlook. It was not Gagarin the Russian but Gagarin the man who burst through the bands of gravity and when, in 89 fleeting minutes, surveyed the earth's former domain from this new peak in Darien.

There are even those who question the right of man to seek new worlds to conquer, who would have him remain earthbound when it lies within his power to break the fetters which have held him since the dawn of his race. So must their spiritual forefathers of 1492 have wondered aloud what good purpose could be served by the discovery of another continent.

Some reservations to jubilation are, of course, in order. It will do mankind no good to be prepared to start the adventure into space if he stupidly destroys the base from which future explorations must be conducted. If the years following 1961 duplicate those following 1492, if Russia tries to play the Spain of space, if the search is only for gold, if whatever natives wait to greet man are slaughtered or enslaved, if the galleons of space are boarded and scuttled, then indeed will Gagarin's journey have been in vain, for mankind cannotwaford to duplicate in space, in the twenty-first century, his mistakes in the western hemisphere in the sixteenth century.

Surely though half a thousand years must have taught man something more than how to split atoms and overcome the force of gravity.

Twenty Years After

"As a child of seven, just starting school, he and his family experienced the Nazi invasion and fled into the hinterlands."

Who? Major Gagarin, first man to orbit the earth.

The years, they know, how they roll away!.

And yet not for all at the same pace.

For Gagarin twenty years bring him from a schoolboy fleeing afoot before foreign invaders to the world's first astronaut.

For Adolf Eichmann they represent only the period of waiting between crime and trial.

Strictly Personal
Friendship Is Important In Marriage

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices:

Probably the most inelegantly ostentatious remark a woman can make to a man is "I'm thrilled" after a heavy meal or for nothing is more appealing to a man than the thought of a stuffed woman.

Speaking of women, why do some cities seem to have a richer, lovelier creatures, and others so few? I never see Dallas, for instance, without wondering at the abundance of beautiful women, and I never visit Milwaukee without wondering at the scarcity.

Somehow—without meaning to—today's columnist seems to be turning into a frivolous commentary on females, so I might as well confirm or suppress that the standard of athletic bosoms is rising and dropping throughout the country; they are more charming, less tasteful and less confined than they were a few years ago.

"Love," said Samuel Johnson, "is the wish of the mind, and the folly of the wise." And it is sometimes true that the foolish people can intuitively make good love choices, while intelligent people often make appallingly unsuitable mates.

There is apparently no "too much" love in marriage also; the kind in which children are recorded as an afterthought upon the couple's mutual stroking of each other's egos. Indeed, this narcissistic love between parents can be more damaging to a child than neglect.

There is no female equivalent of the Peeping Tom because women gratify themselves verbally rather than visually — long letters, telephone calls mixed with gossip about other women, even reading aloud to the feminine way of peeping through windows.

Whenever a woman, at a dinner or party, starts praising another woman, without any provocation, I immediately suspect that she is dissatisfied with her marital lot; couples who are happy and sure of each other rarely bother to broadcast the virtues of their mates.

I think a lot of modern young people get married simply because they are tired of sitting on bar stools far into the night; dating fatigue has become a powerful matrimonial influence than any positive emotion.

"It is not lack of love," observes Schopenhauer, "but lack of friendship that makes unhappy marriages." And certainly the most successful marriages are those who "love" each other in a strangely tortured way, but do not really like each other as much.

Fail to Give Children Time

Galt Evening Reporter

It may be that we are over-doing our efforts to keep young children "busy and out of trouble". We happily give them this, that and the other thing in the great desire to be what we term "good" for them — but do we give them time?

The question is suggested by the recent comments of Willard Abraham, chairman of the United State University's department of child development. He is observed: "Too seldom do we see groups of children sitting on the grass, playing games or dangling with their toes. Too rarely do we see them respectfully eating an ant hill, the petals of a flower, the intricate handiwork of a cocoon, the rich beauties of nature to which they are closer than we, sometimes by two or three feet and by 20 or 30 years."

He thinks that as their parents and teachers, we have to guard them from the, from our demands and expectations, from the "realistic world" which is rushing to topple their fragile make-believe one. They need time for the hatching of their own designs, conversation and books based on their own interests. There are moments when we have to go out of their way so they can grow.

Most of all, says Dr. Abraham, they need time to wonder, why and to see the unusual in their complex thoughts rather than in the "real world" of encyclopedias. Libraries and special answers so soon imposed on them. They will reach that world fast enough anyway. Their mind must have time to develop. Time to grow, can be created, to meditate, be quiet, maybe even to be bored. Boredom is their complex thoughts rather than in the "real world" of encyclopedias. Libraries and special answers so soon imposed on them. They will reach that world fast enough anyway. Their mind must have time to develop. Time to grow, can be created, to meditate, be quiet, maybe even to be bored. Boredom is the very thing. They need a vacation from excursions, phonics and organized games.

What he calls for is the walking of an infinitely fine line between pressure and guidance, between overindulgence and reasonable enrichment, between loading and laziness on the one hand and thoughtfulness on the other.

THE GOOD OLD DAYS

One thing we hear a great deal about, especially from older people, is the good old days. Then we were wiser then, it seems, and strong men stronger. People lived better, children were more virtuous, houses were built better, and women were more beautiful.

Don't you believe it!

There are several reasons why people tend to look back at the good old days through rose-colored glasses. One is that they often remember the good and forget the bad. Another is that they are usually thinking of their youth, when they were relatively free from responsibilities and obligations, and when they were at the very peak of physical strength and fitness. And those who think that their youngest days are recalling a period when they were not yet aware of the pressure of time — when the future seemed infinite before them.

The truth is that we are springing the good old days right now. Advances in medical and technological science make us able to live longer and accomplish more than ever before. We can put more into life and get more out of it in the good new days than was possible in the so-called good old days.

The question is, are you turning back nostalgically to the past, or are you making the most of the present?

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

April 13th, 1941

A very unusual spectacle was witnessed from Point Traverse when Lt. Prince Edward County on Monday night; no perfect were atmospheric conditions, that across Lake Ontario, forty miles away, the myriads of electric lights of the city of Oswego were plainly visible to the naked eye. Flashing red pilot lights on breakwaters of the Oswego Harbor were seen. Hardly does such ideal weather permit this unique sight, but it does appear annually and usually in the spring.

The local fire department answered the 100th fire alarm of the 1941 season on Wednesday, and the number for the year is rapidly mounting as the result of an epidemic of grass fires occurring during the past week. This number, however, is a considerable reduction over the alarms received at a corresponding date last year.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cousins have returned to Collins Bay after visiting their daughter, Mrs. P. Alexander, and Mr. Alexander.

Mrs. J. Sinden of Toronto is spending the weekend in the city with her son and daughter, Mr. R. J. Sinden, and Mrs. Sinden.

Hate Is Real Defendant

Christian Science Monitor

The Eichmann trial, which is about to begin in Jerusalem, has raised questions in numerous parts of the world. The holding of it has also been vigorously assailed by other commentators.

It would be more desirable if the Israeli Government had let that in which the crimes involved were done. And one could better if the evidence could be presented before an international court of the United Nations tribunal.

But the war crimes trials with an American prosecutor at Nuremberg have long since taken place, and Adolf Eichmann, asserted chief engineer of the extermination of millions of Jews under Nazi rule, was in hiding until Israeli purveyors of the plan were reportedly hunted him down in Argentina.

The indictment against him is in terms of "crimes against humanity" and "crimes against the Jewish people." The statutes of Israel under which the charges are drawn are apparently ex post facto. But deep complicity in mass murder was against the laws of most states before the excesses of the 1939-45 took place.

If the dramatic recalling of gruesome history is to have a value, it will not be so much in the spotlighting and possible punishment of one wasted, wrong-headed individual as in a reminder to all peoples to beware of being swept up in any wave of hate such as that which for a decade engulfed Central Europe.

Resume Study Of Far North

Galt Reporter

This summer, Canada is resuming its efforts to unravel more puzzles that lie under Arctic waters and ice. This is the third consecutive year for the Polar Continental Shelf Project. The 1961 operation is the largest so far with some 70 scientists and supporting personnel, an airlift of a fleet of airplanes and helicopters, and budget of more than $1,500,000 provided by the Department of Mines and Technical Surveys.

This "chair" is roughly an extension of land under a shallow depth of ice-covered water running about 1500 miles from Greenland to Alaska. The shelf and its surface extend 50 to 500 miles out into the Arctic ocean. Platforms and area contains belong to us. The problem is to know the physical qualities of the water over the shelf to help in freighting supplies in there and to test the composition and structure of the ocean floor to probe its mineral deposits.

The scientists want to define the thickness of the ice and more precisely. They want to know if it does hold a vast store of valuable oil minerals or supplies of oil and gas like those which have been found in the archipelago of islands there. They are concerned with the possibilities of submarine navigation in the western islands particularly in the Northwest passage. If there could be exploited as a commercial fishing ground, a reindeer industry and a tourist trade.

The project might well be called Operation Catalding Up, the Montreal Star suggests. We are woefully short of knowledge about the Arctic. From one fact the fact is that an embarrassingly large part of our very limited knowledge comes from the Russians. For many years they have been busy making soundings in Arctic waters and passed the information along as a good deal of it. Recently at a lecture to the Arctic Institute of North America, a McGill scientist who recently visited Russia reported in this crack to a genial Russian expert:

"You know, we should send a bill to you Canadians for all the work we've done for you."

Fat Heavy Liability

Chatham Daily News

Excess weight is recognized by physicians as a hazard to health. The extent of the menace is indicated by the latest statement of New York medical experts that the population of the United States averages a ton of 2,000 pounds overweight.

This overweight is a serious matter in that it causes many early deaths, particularly from heart ailments. It is also serious perhaps is the suggestion that it is a factor in the poor showing of North Americans at the Olympic games.

The reports say the Armed Forces and the F.B.I. carried out campaigns against excess fat, even harassing promotions to men who could not keep their weight down.

They say strictures against excess weight and the use of scales and measurements of the weight-reducing experts have made Americans the most overweight conscious nation.

A recent Gallup Poll revealed that one of three persons questioned was planning to diet.

Last year the Society of Actuaries completed a study of the survey of five million insured people, and found that:

Persons who are ten weigh 23 pounds above average, the death rate is 25 per cent above that of the rest of the population. The death rate is lowest among men and women whose weight is 15 to 20 per cent below average.

Fat people are likely to have diabetes digestive ailments, heart and circulatory diseases.

In addition the U.S. National Heart Institute has revealed that overweight greatly increases the risk of kidney disease.

Without obesity or high blood measure, the institute says about 10 of every 1,000 persons contract serious cardiovascular diseases.

With one of these handicaps the rate rises to 79, but with both it goes up to 143 in 1,000.

In addition, the company says overweight persons make poor risks in surgery.

Over-eating is the chief cause contributing to excess weight, and must of its results complained about stem from this, say the medical men.

To Your Good Health
Some Folks Wrinkle Sooner Than Others of Same Age

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

Some people accentuate wrinkles by facial expression — they scowl easily or frequently. In time wrinkles become permanently set.

This does not mean that one should go around being an expressionless deadpan. On the contrary, an active play of expression on the face doubtless is helpful in keeping up the tone of muscles, skin, and other tissues.

For that matter, massage of face and neck tend to firm up these tissues a bit, but eventually, of course, you have to expect your fair share of wrinkles regardless.

How to get rid of wrinkles? I don't know, short of plastic surgery.

How to avoid them, as much as we can? Stay in good physical trim. Don't let yourself get on excess weight, because when you have to take it off again, it's an invitation to wrinkling.

And above all, if wrinkles worry you, don't go through the repeated cycle of getting fat, reducing, getting fat, losing the whole thing over again. Such repeated stretching and contracting of the skin takes its toll.

THE PACKSACK

BY GREGORY CLARK

There are various obsessions to which humanity is liable—money, food, sex, sport, religion. There are a thousand of them. Most of us appear to be obsessed at one time or another with something. Most of us, except on unique occasions, we are fortunately not obsessed with the same thing at the same time. In the previous century in this respect, religion was one of the things people could be obsessed with most conveniently, and those so obsessed were able to rouse and excite the majority of the population into what appeared to be a pretty great interest in politics. Those few of us still obsessed with politics deplore the passing of those good old days.

In my boyhood, every house in the street had its obsession, and the one that hadn't a church affiliation had a temperance or an oddity. I have lived to see the slow decline in the number of those obsessed with religion to the point that there are not enough people now to dominate the community.

Sex has always been an obsession in this world of weary, hearty, furtive, frank, hypocritical. But as far as I can recall, it was not a fifty years ago, as widespread an obsession as it is today. Somewhere between the interest our world in 1900, when we were able to choose from a wide variety of obsessions, and we kept sex in its place. It seems, however, to be gaining.

TODAY'S TALK

RESTFULNESS

I am of the opinion that if all the great and notable men who have achieved great fame and wealth have succeeded in nearly every case they would say that if they had life to live over again they would spend less time making money and more time making friends.

I have noticed that most very rich and powerful men are restless, nervous, tense and in great clouds of worry across their faces.

I have noted another thing — their quick response to the smallest noise would appear to be evidence of inner understanding, what restfulness!

Red Pine Stand Near Griffith Scenic Highlight

For a person interested in trees and forests, one of the scenic highlights of a trip from Deere to Kaleher is a stand of red pine near Griffith, north of Highway 41 near Ploype. The stand extends for about a quarter mile along both sides of the road just before the highway crosses the Madawaska River. Due to the density of the stand the trees are clear of branches for fifty feet from the ground and the forest floor is devoid of underbrush. These two conditions — a few branches and no underbrush, contribute to provide the passerby with an unimpeded view into the stand. The trees in the stand are tall, straight and of fine form.

Measurements indicate that the stand is over eighty (80) years of age and about seventy-five (75) feet in height. The largest trees are over twenty inches in diameter.

Mr. Gilbert Godin one of the oldest residents of Griffith, recalls passing the stand as a boy when the trees were tender saplings no more than a foot tall. The development of so fine a stand, over one man's lifetime provides an excellent example of the productive capacity of some of the sandy soils of the area.

Measurements on sample plots yield some interesting information about the growth and volume of the stand. The estimated volume per acre is 24,753 feet board measure. Converted to more familiar terms, this is enough lumber to build two average houses. The market value of the standing trees on one acre is about $400.00 and the value of lumber sawn from them would be about $3,500.00

These figures indicate that a thing of beauty may be quite valuable as well as lovely or lovely forever. Since most of the stand is located on highway right-of-way it will likely continue to give pleasure to the eye of the traveller for many years to come.

Rail Firemen's Leader Resigns

WINNIPEG (CP) — A second official of the railway firemen's union who led a move for a separate Canadian section of the international union has resigned, it was learned Wednesday.

Roy Morris is one of the leaders of the fight against the head office of the International Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen (CLC) now is in hospital here.

He was general chairman of 22 lodges of Canadian National Railways employees who voted to withhold dues from the international office at Cleveland because of their dissatisfaction with handling of the union's Canadian affairs.

During settlement talks during the dispute, international officials said a referendum would be held on the question of a Canadian division. There has been no announcement that the referendum was held, but most of the lodges resumed dues payments to the international.

Officials of the Quinte Traffic Club, who entertained their wives at the Knights of Columbus Hall last night, posed with the guest speaker — Herbert B. Paar, assistant general sales manager (freight) of the CNR (in following a banquet (standing) R. H. Godden, club vice-president;

50 per cent.

Integrated with these developments has been a five-year program of track rehabilitation which was recently completed in the western division, "to sharpen our performance in the matter of speed freight schedules". Included in this was the lengthening of passing tracks in relation to the longer trains permitted by efficiency of the diesel locomotive and the reduced 7 per cent over steam in locomotive performance. But it also pays additional dividends in the intangibles relating to 1m proved public performance.

"Incidentally," said Mr. Paar, "it is interesting to recall that 10 years ago and its probable duration, as a gap between the steam age and the nuclear fission age."

He said that close upon dieselization, in the implication for the immediate future, are the steps being taken to carry the principle of speed in over-the-rails performance into the end operation of marshalling trains at origins, breaking them up and getting them to unloading sites as quickly as possible.

The CNR has embarked on a terminal project at Toronto which will encompass tremendous changes in the scope of operation, not only in relation to traffic of local identification but in the handling of cars to and from points between in a by-passing operation which avoids congested downtown areas.

MODERN HUMP YARD

"This vast project, including what now is indicated, will be the largest and most modern hump yard in North America and has a target of completion in 1963," he said.

A $15' million electronic hump yard with satellite facilities which was put into operation at Moncton, N.B., last November, has "implication . . . which are tremendous in improved service and efficiency."

"CNR freight schedules to and from Halifax were shortened by 24 hours pending the opening of the hump yard," he said, "and the additional efficiency factor of the latter should be most constructive when it is considered that a complete train can be processed in the new yard in four hours against a former factor of 24 hours."

A new hump yard which is expected to be opened at Montreal next month will be geared to process incoming freight so efficiently that it will be ready to proceed to receivers in the astonishing short time of three hours after arrival."

CUT 50 PER CENT

The big modern Symington yard in the CNR's western division, which will be opened in May, 1962, will be able to handle 7,000 freight cars a day with the average time needed to work a train being cut by

Govt. Cleared Of Charges Of Bribery

WINNIPEG (CP)—The Manitoba legislature Wednesday approved a report of its public accounts committee which cleared the government of charges of political bribery and threats in its highways program.

The House approved the report 33 to 12 on a straight party split between the Liberal-Progressives and the Progressive Conservatives. All CCF members sustained.

Opposition Leader D. L. Campbell, who raised the charges, told the House: "I shall take the case to the public and ask what they think about this thing."

Mr. Campbell, former premier, said proof of his charges had been furnished by a letter and the statements of two witnesses.

The letter was written by former public works minister Errick Willis, now lieutenant-governor of Manitoba, to the council of the rural municipality of Springfield.

The two witnesses, residents of Pembina constituency, said that during last fall's Pembina by-election they were told a road would not be built unless the government candidate was elected.

Agriculture Minister George Hutton said Mr. Campbell "misused" his responsibility as Opposition leader.

Refuse Bail To Biernacki For Second Time

MONTREAL (CP) — Tomasz Biernacki, 37, charged with spying for an unidentified foreign power, was refused bail today for the second time.

Judge Paul Hurtubise ruled that his decision refusing bail at Biernacki's arraignment Monday would stand.

Defence lawyer Paul Aubut's application for bail on behalf of the Polish - born engineer was opposed by Crown prosecutor Jean Mignault.

Biernacki's preliminary hearing is set for April 18.

Mr. Aubut said that in "several more serious cases" of a similar nature bail had been granted.

He mentioned Fred Rose, Labor - Progressive MP charged with espionage during the 1946 spy case in Ottawa. Evidence of that Russian spy ring was disclosed by Igor Gouzenko, a former cipher clerk at the Russian Embassy.

Mr. Aubut said bail for Biernacki "would let people all over the world see that in Canada no one is judged guilty before being declared guilty."

He said that he had assured his client that he would have the same privileges as an ordinary Canadian citizen despite being in a foreign land.

Mr. Justice Hurtubise interrupted here to say that "there are not two laws in Canada."

He said that "all the latitudes allowed by law" have been given Biernacki.

'Lines on Life'

By Dr. Stuart E. Rossiter

A small town or congregation, whose members must have much free time to waste, was personified in the throes of raging controversy. Early in July, they could contain their hurt no longer, and the two warring factions split away from one another: a town which had difficulty mustering attendance for one congregation, now had the dubious honor of possessing two. The pair of congregations had many years of difficulty; but only did they maintain cold and unfriendly relations toward one another, but in the name of their own separateness they succeeded to dividing the whole town straight down the middle. The attitude grew and grew: it you were for us, then you must be against us!

One bright day, one of the townsmen's children went off to college. There, in his academic environment, he decided to make a study of his own community as a piece of social research. He probed and probed and finally came up with the basic cause for the division among his townsmen. For a long time bright, progressive organization of that little community had enjoyed calm and happiness. Then one day a comet's very bad erupted. What had previously been a matter of leaders insisted that the evening prayers conclude with the words, O Lord: The dissenting group claimed that the correct phrase should be: Grant us abundant peace. O Lord: That's how it all began, conflict, division, hatred and division all in the name of God.

Men consistently quarrel over trivialities and in the name of theology. But what is more: in the heat of unnecessary battle, they often let life's bigger and more rewarding prizes escape them, unnoticed.

They are so like those birds described in the story of the baker's loaf which, fell to the ground. When the bread hit the ground, a crumb broke off and lay beside it. Suddenly, as if from nowhere, three sparrows swooped down and fell upon the crumb. After the battle which took two of the birds flew away without a bite while the other, seemingly the victorious, departed with the meagre spoils.

In the frenzied battle the loaf was left untouched. With a broader view and a wider range of vision each sparrow could have been happily satisfied with lots of bread. The prize was lost in the fight over trivialities.

In the wide, wide world there does not seem to exist anything but narrow vistas. In our homes, families, communities, nations, we are often too busy fighting over the crumbs to recognize the unclaimed loaf.

Life, it has been observed, is too short to be little! Let us seek to avoid the petty and insipid and concentrate on that which is big and beautiful.

Quinte Craftsmen Finish Work

Tuesday evening the Quinte Craftsmen, under the direction of Mrs. Charles Ling, completed their leadership course for the season until next fall. The various articles made included: purses of all sizes and colors; wallets in many styles; pocket secretaries for both men and women; bookends; pencil cases; gloves and belts for male and female, as well as combination key cases, license cases and change purses, all of which were beautifully done.

Following the close of the meeting, a social time was enjoyed with groups of the year's work as well as the work of the previous year, the craftsmen were entertained.

Miss Helen Suiman intrigued everyone with a delightful and hilarious reading. Miss Loretta MacDougall showed colored slides of the four seasons, which were lovely and the Messrs. Roger and Silsbe sang selections of Mrs. Ling, favored with piano solos.

Mrs. Ling was presented with a beautiful cushion one green and one in cinnamon shade by the craftsmen, in appreciation of her fine help in teaching them the intricacies of leathercraft.

Several guests were present from Holloway and the surrounding district.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Ling's three daughters-in-law, Mrs. Cecil Ling, Mrs. James Ling and Mrs. George Ling.

Lutheran C.W. View Film on "Two Islands"

The regular meeting of the ULCW was held in the Grafton Women's Mission Hall on Tuesday evening. Devotions were led by Mrs. B. Wilman, Mrs. Neal, and Mrs. D. Darroch.

The topic for the evening was in the form of a film called, "Two Island Churches". It showed how offerings are used by the Lutheren World Action. Samoa, and New Guinea have grown to Christianity under the leadership of the medical missionaries. How one island was not much more advanced than the stone-age and, how the other had learned the ways of the modern world, and the difficulties and beliefs of the tribes that the missionaries had to overcome. For instance, one tribe thought furniture came from some magical trick. Now, under the guidance of Lutheran missionaries, they have learned how to make their own furniture, how to build more substantial homes, and most important, they have learned the way of God.

The island has one doctor for thousands of people. He has several clinics, plus seventeen out-patient clinics. One Pastor has 30 congregations from one island. Besides going several miles by boat to conference. The natives of these islands have learned the Christian way of life, but there are too few missionaries, doctors, and pastors to educate all the tribes. Lutheren money goes to support these people, to build hospitals, schools, and churches. The advance is slow but there is still plenty of work to be done in these countries.

Devotions were closed by the singing of the hymn "Spread, O Spread Thou Mighty Word".

As the husband of ULCW members were attending this meeting, a short business discussion was held.

A delicious hour followed the close of the meeting with the playing of games and the serving of lunch by Mrs. Lorne Fever, and Mrs. Max Wodzak. Mr. Fever Bartleman, on behalf of the men, thanked the ladies for an enjoyable evening.

A rolled shoulder of veal filled with a delicate stuffing makes a different and economical and delicious company meal. The easy carving will be appreciated by father. Always cook veal to the well-done stage. Mary Moore gives two veal recipes today.

Treat Veal Gently

By Mary Moore

Veal requires gentle treatment.

Somewhere in my travels I was served a veal cutlet that was done to death and I was disgusted.

Although stewing veal is 69c a pound in our area it is a meat-saving way to buy for a family on a budget, especially when it is stewed.

Our crowd was home for dinner last night so I made Veal Paprika. The consensus of opinion was "Good" in fact "Top" — and worthy of space in this column.

VEAL PAPRIKA

One and one-half pounds boneless stewing veal (shank); 2 tablespoons margarine, 1 medium-large onion chopped, 2 cups hot water, 2 chicken bouillon cubes, 1 tablespoon (Yes — 1 level tablespoon) paprika, 3-4 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoons flour, 1-4 cup cold water, 1-2 cup commercial sour cream.

Melt margarine in pressure cooker (or large frying pan) and add chopped onion and cook out in fat cubes. Gently saute until golden. Add 2 cups hot water and chicken bouillon cubes and cook at 10 pounds pressure for 1 hour or simmer covered for 2 hours or until veal is tender. Mix together in a bowl the paprika, salt and flour and when blended add cold water and sour cream and mix to a paste. When veal is tender stir in paste until thick. Meanwhile cook o generous amount of noodles (a little more than half package to serve 5) in boiling salted water until tender. Drain noodles and arrange on platter. Pour veal paprika over and serve piping hot to 5. Note: Rice may be used instead of noodles if desired.

ROLLED STUFFED SHOULDER OF VEAL:

Three pounds veal shoulder boned but unrolled, 1-4 cup shortening, 1 tablespoon chopped onion, 2 teaspoons chopped parsley, 1-2 teaspoon celery salt, 2 cups coarse soft breadcrumbs, 1 egg, 1-2 cup meat stock or 1 bouillon cube in 1-2 cup hot water, 1 1-4 teaspoons salt. Wipe meat with a damp cloth. Melt half the shortening in a heavy frying pan, add the onion and cook slowly until soft; then add

Successful Living

Wants Help for Retarded Son

DEAR DORIS:—The doctor says my little boy is definitely retarded and will probably not be able to go to a regular school. While I know he is slow, I think he can learn a little. Is there any place I can get help with at least teaching him to do simple things?—MR. P.

DEAR MR. P.:—In the past 10 years Ontario has really made progress in helping backward children. The parents started it by getting together and making the beginnings of classes for their boys and girls. Local groups then pooled their efforts and the Ontario Association for Retarded Children was formed.

Today there are 77 local associations for retarded children in Ontario, and 80 have schools. These are subsidized by government grants according to number of children registered.

In Belleville, the person to call for information is Mrs. J. Halloran, corresponding secretary, Belleville Association for Retarded Children, 43 Mitchell Ave., Belleville.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—I am 27 and am engaged to a dentist. Lately I have visit parties who are my friends. In just six like a bump on a log. He used to be much peppier and really make an effort.

I'm afraid this is what he is really like. I don't want to marry a man who never says anything. What do you think?—STENO.

DEAR STENO:—It depends. Is he tired, or just not interested in what you talk about?

Create a situation in which he is not tired—a hike or a holiday, maybe — and get him conversation about the things you care about. Then find out whether he can respond in kind. And whether you care about the things he likes.

If you are really feeling a lack of boredom or worse, find it out now.

DEAR DORIS:—My husband injured his leg in an accident and cannot keep on at his job which meant standing at a machine all day. Now he has taken a course in bookkeeping which was paid for by the federal government.

The trouble is, the only job which is suitable is 300 miles from here, where there is a factory like the one he worked at here. I object strongly to moving and leaving all my friends. Why should our whole life be upset by his bad luck?—WIFE AND MOTHER.

DEAR WIFE AND MOTHER:—His bad luck is your bad luck. You married him for better or for worse. Be glad there was a government training course and that there is a job he can do.

If you stop him now, your husband may get so discouraged he will not have the heart to try again. You are his support; you and his children are his reason for living. People with big handicaps can rise above them and live wonderfully useful and happy lives if their dear ones encourage them and keep them going.

There is a new life waiting for you in the new town. Believe this and tackle it with some zest. The rewards can be great.

(Doris Clark will be glad to help you with your problems. Write to her, care of this paper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Neighbors Fete Bride-to-Be With Shower

WELLINGTON—Mrs. Clifford Hough and Mrs. Jack Usborne of Burr's were co-hostesses at the latter's home recently when they entertained at a buffet supper and linen shower in honor of Dr. Sally Sadler, Wellington. The dining room table was covered with an exquisite Italian cut work linen cloth, and arranged with dishes of tempting food.

The guests sat at five small tables and were served by the Misses Lyn Parks, Gaile McFaul, Carole Hough, Barbara Clark, Brenda Osterhout and Sharon Edwards.

After the delicious supper, court whist and musical forms of the evening's entertainment. Mrs. Clifford Hough addressed the bride-to-be and extended best wishes from the Burr neighborhood.

Mrs. Usborne presented the lovely Girtle in a wishing well, which was filled many times by the youngest guests.

Mrs. Jack Usborne was all opened and admired, Dr. Sarles expressed her appreciation and warmly thanked the ladies for their nice gesture.

Chicken Scallop One-Dish Course

CHICKEN SCALLOP

Chicken Potato Scallop is a delicious way to serve the popular tender young broiler-fryer chickens so plentiful now. According to the Poultry Products Institute it provides a one-dish hot main course to serve with a crisp salad for a satisfying dinner. Simply top your favorite scalloped potato and onion recipe with the required number of portions of cut-up chicken which have been coated with seasoned flour and fried to a golden brown (about 15 minutes). Cover casserole and cook in a moderately hot oven of 375 degrees F. for one hour. Remove cover and bake ten minutes longer to crisp chicken. Serve potatoes and chicken are both fork tender.

EGG BUNWICHES

Scrambled Bunwiches are a quick trick for the family lunch which is suggested by the Egg Producers Institute. Scramble the eggs as usual adding bits of crisp cooked bacon. Spread split warm wiener, hamburg or bacon buns with butter and Chili sauce or ketchup, fill generously with hot scrambled eggs. Serve with crisp salad fruit and cookies for a satisfying luncheon.

COOKED CHICKEN MEAT

When a recipe calls for cooked chicken meat, simmer broiler-fryer chickens in covered kettle until meat is fork tender (45 to 60 min.) Allow one-half teaspoon salt per pound of chicken and one and one half cups of water for a 2 to 3 pound bird. Add additional seasonings as desired such as celery leaves, onion, carrot, bay leaf, monosodium glutamate. If using pressure cooker follow manufacturer's directions and cook at 15 lbs. pressure, 15 to 20 minutes.

Nice for Necklines

President's Physician Says Treatment for Sore Back Of Kennedy Not Cure-All

By FRANCES LEWINE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House doctor's mail these days includes pleas from people all over who suffer with back pain.

Dr. Janet Travell, who helped President Kennedy get over his back troubles, is sorry her treatment is far from a cure-all and works only in very specific cases.

"Not everyone who has a back pain is going to be benefited" by the use of a nine injection treatments she has used with such success, Dr. Travell emphasizes.

Since she was appointed White House physician — the first woman ever to hold the post — Dr. Travell has hardly had time for medical duties.

The 59-year-old, grey-haired, motherly looking and gentle-voiced doctor has been busy getting set up in her small three-room office in disposing of the lower level of the White House not far from the swimming pool she recommends for use by her famous patient.

In the first weeks her office bookshelves were still empty, but the incoming letter basket was filled with mail from people who advised her "to take good care of our president" and those who write for advice on what to do about "a pain in my back."

LEFT GOOD PRACTICE

Dr. Travell, a New Yorker from a family of doctors, gave up a lucrative practice and teaching to become Kennedy's White House physician. She will concentrate now on the president and his family, plus officials and cabinet members who surround him. White House staff and high level White House visitors.

Routinely, she gets to work about 8:30 a.m. in time to drop in on the president at breakfast to ask how he's feeling. Since she has taken over Mrs. Kennedy as a patient, too, Dr. Travell tries to go to the family living quarters every morning to see the First Lady.

Dr. Travell has been a pioneer in the work of charting patterns of pain in the body.

Dr. Travell, who graduated first in her class at Cornell Medical School in 1936, is a doctor of orthopedic medicine with long teaching experience in pharmacology. She found that many aches and pains resembled heart ailments in that a cramp or spasm often caused a muscle to shorten and lose the power to relax.

This cuts off the normal blood supply and the resulting pain is similar to that which develops when the heart blood supply is curtailed. Dr. Travell relieves the pain by injecting relaxing doses of novocaine into the cramped muscle.

While the treatment worked for President Kennedy, Dr. Travell cautions that her treatment is not a cure-all and will be effective only on well-selected patients.

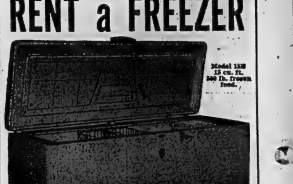
Women Taught To Buy What They Need

OTTAWA (CP) — Co-operative women's guilds are teaching women to buy what they need, "not what they are lulled into thinking they want," Mrs. Robert Cappie of Virden, Man., said Tuesday.

Mrs. Cappie, Manitoba president of the guilds, spoke to the annual women's meeting that precedes the Co-operative Union of Canada congress starting here today.



She was supported by the Saskatchewan president, Mrs. Tony Jankun of Foam Lake, Sask., who said tests showed how women moved in a trance along store shelves and didn't snap out of it until they heard the cash register ring.

The guilds, with some 1,700 members in the two provinces, combat the hypnotic effect of modern advertising and display with a six-part education program for consumers.

Both provincial leaders said they hope for growth of the guild movement in Ontario — at present there are only two.

The Experts Say

Excellent Cook Left Many Of Her Recipes for Posterity

By DEIRDRE MUNGOVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Marchetta Marin used to insist that no Italian dinner was complete without a platter of hors d'oeuvres known as antipasto.

But even more important was the spaghetti sauce and she was acknowledged as an expert in making it.

When she died last October at 76, the woman who learned the art of cooking in her father's hotel in Sicily before she came to Canada as a bride left many of her old-country recipes in a worn black book.

For the antipasto, she would arrange on one plate slices of Italian salami, cheese, black olives, stuffed green olives, celery and sweet pickles. On another she would place fillets of anchovy in a petal formation topped with sprigs of parsley.

All her spaghetti - and - meatballs dinners were accompanied with piping hot, French bread spread with garlic butter. And she maintained that since the spaghetti sauce was the most important part of the meal, it should be prepared with special care.

Her recipe:

Grease a large pot and fry finely cut onions and one small garlic clove. Add half of a six-ounce can of tomato paste which has been dissolved in a cup of boiling water. Add two 14-ounce cans of tomato sauce, two cups of water, one tsp. sugar, one-half tsp. salt, a dash of pepper, two or three whole cloves, two bay leaves, one tsp. sweet basil and one-quarter tsp. ground allspice. Cook slowly for 1½ hours.

Prepare the meatballs next. Place one pound of ground round beef steak in a large bowl. Dry out two slices of bread in the oven, place them on a plate and pour cold water over them. When soft, remove the crust. Squeeze the bread until the water is gone and it has become a paste. Add it to the meat along with two tbsps. finely cut parsley, three tbsps. grated cheese, one-half tsp. salt and a dash of pepper.

Work everything in the bowl with your hands and mix well. Add an egg and a few grains of garlic salt. Roll the meat into small-size oval meatballs and fry in a greased pan. When cooked, set them in the oven to keep hot and pour the grease from the pan into the tomato sauce. Pour a little water into the frying pan and add this to the sauce.

The spaghetti is the last part of the dinner to be cooked. Place 1½ pounds of spaghetti in boiling salted water in a large pot. Cook until tender—12 to 15 minutes. Pour cold water into the boiling water, stir the spaghetti and strain. Add some of the tomato sauce to the spaghetti and serve on large plates.

The meatballs may be served as a separate platter or added to the tomato sauce.

The recipe serves eight. And don't forget the chianti.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Lonnie Q. — He talks too much and embarrasses me with my friends.

Mr. E. Q. — I'm fascinated by people and eager to know them better.

Lonnie Q. — My dad is one of those talkative, effusive gents who'll bend anybody's ear who lets him. Give him an audience, even an alert little puppy, and he's off on a conversational jag — even if it's one-way!

All through my adolescence and college years, I used to squirm as he held my friends captive audience, and made them laugh out of politeness at his crummy jokes. But now that I'm an adult, married and a father myself, I don't want him trying the same thing with all my neighbors when he drives out to visit us.

I was mortified last Sunday when he accompanied us on a stroll with the kids, and held us up for 20 minutes while he discribed his whole World War I experience to a man who, like myself, never say more than hello to.

Mr. E. Q. — I'm sorry. Lonnie thinks I talk too much. But I just because it rubs him the wrong way is no proof it annoys others. I think most people enjoy a friendly approach and a chance to shoot the breeze.

It just happens that people fascinate me. I love to hear their yarns, even the flat stories. I guess; I'm like Mr. Milty in the James Thurber stories. I identify with whomever I'm listening to — anyone from the winner of a pie eating contest to the youngster who failed Latin. But in order to get people to open up, I have to tell them something about myself, act like a "regular guy." It's no act, though. I'm sincerely interested in the next fellow.

When I say anything more than how do you do, however, Lonnie blows a gasket. I think he's intolerant, and acting like a stuffed shirt.

The Council — Lonnie sounds like a most insecure person to be so worried over the effect his father's jabber has on his friends. Let him bear in mind that there's always a chance the button - holed listener is really enjoying the colloquy, and is waiting his turn to chime in. And, if not, most people have worked out defenses for getting unbuttonholed. Lonnie should take one others:

Remember that you come and go, among Lonnie's circle of friends, but that these are the people he lives near, sees every day. There are some things he may not want them to know about his family. Also there are things some of them may try to "worm" out of you, since he won't tell them. Therefore, the second tongue-tripper: Be discreet.

In other words, we must assume that in Mr. Q.'s torrent of talk there is no "lapsus linguae" to affect Lonnie's privacy. Unlike his trusting, outgoing father, Lonnie is the cautious type.

But, just so, Lonnie must accept his father as a type, a package deal with both endearing and, perhaps, annoying traits. So he lacks poise! Many of the warmhearted people in the world do. They gush and effervesce, and if they wind up with no dignity left, they usually have a long roster of friends to take its place.

We suggest that Lonnie start looking at his father with fresh eyes, unclouded with the childish resentments which keep him trying to "tame" the shellliest extrovert. Why be "mortified?" Why stick pins in this bouncy Mr. Cheer-up? This son might be surprised to learn how many of his friends if he asked them, would holler "More!" instead of "Nuff!"

Here too maybe, one man's pa is another man's pal.

QUESTION BOX

Question — I recently became engaged. The girl I am to marry lives in the city where I and my family reside. Because we live way out in the suburbs and she lives in the city itself, she has never met any of my family. I say that she and her parents should come and see my parents first. She does not agree, the idea being that it is the other way around. As this is causing our first disagreement, please let me know if I am right or wrong — Mr. L. E., Chicago, Ill.

Answer — Wrong. The parents of a young man should make the first call upon the young girl and her family. The reason for this is that his parents are actually welcoming their son's bride-to-be into their family.

Question — I am having a large formal wedding in May. The invitations went out last week and the gifts are starting to come in. We have put tables in the "rumpus room" on which to display them. I say that the cards should be left attached to the gifts. My father says he is sure I am wrong. That the cards should be removed. Who is right? — Miss G. N. R., Meadville, Pa.

Answer — Your Dad is absolutely correct. Cards should never be left on wedding gifts. They should be removed and a careful note should be made in a gift book regarding each present as it is received. The name of the sender, a description of the gift, and what store it came from, should be recorded, so that there will be no mix-up when it comes to writing the thank you notes. But remember, it is very poor taste to leave the cards on display, just as it is that gift checks should never be put on the tables for others to see.

Canadian Troops in Congo May Move to New Quarters But No One Eager to Go

By PETER BUCKLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LEOPOLDVILLE (CP) — A move to different accommodations seems in store for Canada's troops in Leopoldville, and the consensus is that it's bound to be for the worst.

A rare stroke of good fortune put the Canadians in a temporarily vacant boarding school known as the Internat last August, and good fortune has kept them there despite the pressing need for educational facilities in The Congo.

By next September, however, when a new school year starts, there is every indication that the headquarters for No. 57 Canadian Signal Unit will have been changed.

"It is absolutely necessary that the Internat be available next fall," said Charles Cerlemacs, a Belgian who acts as counsellor in Leopoldville province's education department.

Although negotiations are continuing between the education minister and the United Nations, which leased the Internat for use by the Canadians, the tone of Cerlemacs's statement leaves little room for optimism.

FAMY FOR SCHOOL

The Internat is part of the Athenee Royal, a complex of school buildings in a well-to-do section of modern Leopoldville. Originally designed for the sons of the future colonial administrators of The Congo, the Athenee has become the independent Congo's prestige school.

The Internat in former days housed more than 200 children from outside Leopoldville.

Said Cerlemeals: "European technicians working in the interior of the province and Congolese outside Leopoldville who went to maintain a certain social standing will wish to send their children to the Athenee.

"We must be able to accommodate these children, and the Internat is the logical place."

No other place that comes to mind in Leopoldville has the Internat's advantages for the Canadians.

Olympic - sized swimming pools are a rarity, but such a pool lies outside the door of the Internat and has been valuable in helping the Canadians adjust to the heat of the tropics.

SPORT FACILITIES

Clay tennis courts and a combination soccer field are within a few paces, and a volleyball court and gymnasium are among the Internat's facilities.

The accommodations could hardly be better. The men sleep in small individual cubicles in two wings formerly occupied by boys and girls at the school. The sergeants' cubicles on the second floors have sinks and abundant elbow room.

There is even a touch of the incongruous. Snow White and the dwarfs, rabbits and other cartoon characters decorate the walls of the hallways.

In a separate building, the officers have most of their offices, formerly occupied by the Internat staff. When their work is finished they have only a few hundred yards to go to the rented apartments and villas they share by twos and threes.

Because of the number of dining rooms and lounges provided for the former students, the Canadians have both wet and dry canteens and a sergeants' mess in the Internat.

SORRY TO LEAVE

A huge kitchen run by Canadians and Congolese provides food for everyone but the officers, whose mess is two blocks away in a separate villa.

Each of the three separate buildings of the Internat is connected by glass-roofed causeways, cutting across palm-shaded lawns. The dormitory wings also house other offices and the army post office. A laundry building stands apart.

Although any move would still be several months away—in a country where several months can mean several complete changes in the over-all picture—the only hope for the Canadians is a change in plans by the education department before September.

"For myself," said one Canadian officer, "I'll be glad to be going back to Canada this summer if we're moving out of here.

"This place has been too good. It would spoil me for any where else."

EDUCATIONAL TV

The British Broadcasting Corporation provides a total of 4½ hours of educational television each week.

CANADIAN CONGO HOME — Several hundred members of Canada's signals unit in Leopoldville live in the Internat, offices and dormitories attached to the Athenee Royal, a Belgian-built school now attended mostly by Congolese students. The Canadians may have to find new quarters next fall, however, because the Congolese government wants to use the Internat once again for students from outside the capital. The Internat offices are shown in foreground, almost hidden by the trees. One of the dormitories is at right. (CP Photo)

DESERONTO

Captain Keech Inspects Steamer John A. France

DESERONTO — While the guest of his brother, Captain Clifford Keech last week, at Niagara Falls, Ontario, Earl Keech of this town had the opportunity to make an inspection tour of the steamer, John A. France. This vessel is a giant among lake vessels and Earl was properly impressed with the craft which has a length of 722 feet 6 inches and a beam of 75 feet. Her six cargo holds contain one million cubic feet of space and can haul 26,000 tons of iron ore or 925,000 bushels of wheat per trip.

He was particularly impressed with the living quarters of the crew which comprised eight officers and 33 unlicensed personnel. The rooms are air-conditioned and all officers have single rooms with bath, and the crew sleep two to a room.

The forward and aft sections of the ship are connected with a tunnel running under the main deck so no one is required to out on deck in stormy weather.

Included in the navigating equipment are two radars, one for long distance navigation, and the new short range radar for river navigation. There is a telephone system to all important sections and a public address system that can be used for the issue and acknowledgement of orders.

Earl and Cliff spent the better part of a day in touring the ship which, requires 6,500 gallons of water and travels at 17 miles per hour.

Canadians Fare Better In These Difficult Times of Recession Than U.S. Citizens -- Diefenbaker

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker said Wednesday night Canadians have fared better in these difficult times of recession than the citizens of the United States.

He made the statement on the CBC free-time political broadcast, The Nation's Business, in review of progress made to date on the "far-reaching program of federal government action which was placed before Parliament in the speech from the throne last November."

Mr. Diefenbaker said that more than three-quarters of that program now has been implemented by legislation of other government action. Priority had been given to measures designed to create new jobs and to ameliorate the effects of recession which had borne heavily on the economy of the North American continent.

"Canadians have generally fared better in these difficult times than the citizens of the United States," he said.

"This will, of course, be debated even by those who are engaged in day-to-day, hour-by-hour criticism of whatever action is taken. I refer, however, to those who, for political purposes, downgrade the credit and prestige of Canada abroad, spreading the vicious propaganda of gloom and doom. That kind of talk does not help to create new jobs for Canadians."

USES MAP

Rather than sitting immobile, the prime minister paced to a large outline map of Canada to point out areas where development measures were put in effect by the federal government.

Mr. Diefenbaker said one does not glance and gloom and doom in the U.S. However, there were more workers unemployed in Detroit than in Canada. There were twice as many unemployed in Buffalo as in Toronto and in Pittsburgh in proportion of 2 to less was more than twice that in the Toronto-Hamilton-St. Catharines area.

"That does not mean that we do not realize that there is a serious economic problem," he said. "It is a fact, however, some heartening signs on the immediate horizon. As we begin to turn the corner, we intend to be in a better position than at any previous time to capture for the benefits of the economic recovery."

EXPANDS TRADE

The prime minister said this is so because Canada has consistently expanded its export trade, has maintained a high level of new capital investment unprecedented number of Canadians entering the labor force, modernization and other technological changes and a veritable industrial and agricultural revolution displacing workers.

"On average, however, the number of Canadians at work continues to increase," he said.

"In the current fiscal year, for example, about 500,000 more Canadians had jobs than four years ago."

Young Farmer Pleads Guilty To Arson

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP)—A 26 - year - old farmer, said by the Crown to have become worried by financial obligations after being taken in by high-pressure salesmen, Wednesday admitted burning down his farm home.

Joseph S. Vollmer, of RR1, Britton, was remanded in custody to April 28 for sentence after pleading guilty to arson.

In a statement read by Inspector A. D. Hope of the Ontario fire marshal's office, Toronto, Vollmer said he thought he had been "beat" by a company selling aluminum house siding and he was ashamed.

Last March 24 while fixing a fire in a wood stove some coals dropped into a wood box. He went to do some chores in the barn, knowing the house might be burned down if the coals were left in the box.

When he left the house on fire he drove a tractor to a neighbor's home to call help. The farm dog would not allow him near the house, so he drove away, he admitted.

Early in March he had increased his insurance on the house to $10,000 from $4,000 and on the contents to $6,000 from $2,500, He said his financial situation at the time, however, he said.

Badly Beaten Big Gambler Talk to Chief

TORONTO (CP) — Police Chief James Mackey met Wednesday with Toronto gambler Max Bluestein, brutally beaten by thugs three weeks ago.

"I just wanted to learn from him at first hand what happened to him," Chief Mackey said.

The beating in the Town Tavern March 21 touched off reports of a struggle for control between mobsters from the United States and local racketeers. About 1,000 persons were in the Tavern when Bluestein was attacked by brass knuckles and iron bars have refused to give evidence.

Bluestein vanished from his home Saturday. He walked into police headquarters Wednesday after police began looking for him. Chief Mackey said Bluestein told him he left his home because he was being bothered, but would be available if police needed him again.

Chief Mackey said Tuesday night a two-year drive against gambling here has put pressure on the heads of rival gambling groups. He said the tavern attack appeared to be an attempt by a rival gang to get in on profits.

The chief said he had talked with police at Buffalo and could find no reason to believe hoodlums from there were coming to Toronto.

However, the Toronto Telegram said American mobsters are reported swelling both sides of the gangland battlefront and fear is spreading among local racketeers. It says underworld sources at Buffalo claim four men with Mafia connection left for Toronto Tuesday and that the men arrived here with two counterparts from Hamilton. Four other men, apparently from Hamilton, arrived earlier in the day.

Little Criticism Over Sales Tax Says Minister

TORONTO (CP)—No one likes to pay taxes but everyone seems to be taking Ontario's new retail sales tax of three per cent in their stride, Provincial Treasurer Allan said in a day night.

Speaking to the Purchasing Agents' Association of Toronto, Mr. Allan said 90 per cent of the persons who have approached him about tax have indicated they understood Ontario's need for more revenues, particularly in the fields of education, health and highways.

The three-per-cent sales tax, effective Sept. 1, will raise some $60,000,000 in the remainder of the 1st fiscal year and $150,000,000 a year thereafter.

Mr. Allan cited the cost of Ontario's hospital insurance plan as an example of increasing government spending.

In 1960, the treasury contributed $18,000,000 toward the cost of operating the plan, the remainder coming from premiums of participants and from the federal government. This year, the plan will cost the provincial treasury $50,000,000.

If the government had decided to finance the additional costs out of premiums, it would have been necessary to increase the premiums from $2.10 to $3.15 a month for a single person and from $4.20 to $6.30 a month for a family, Mr. Allan said.

As for collection of the sales tax, Mr. Allan said all vendors of taxable goods will be identified and licensed by July 15. Each will be given what would have the initial problem of establishing methods of recording their tax collections, but they would be compensated for their work with a percentage of collections.

People of Non-Communist World Shaken by Russians' Launching of Man in Space

LONDON (AP)—"It won't bury me no more frijoles," said the chief driver in Mexico City.

But from London to Hong Kong, from Moscow to Peking and women of the non-Communist world were shaken by Russia's latest achievement in the victory's first man in space—launching a spaceship with a live passenger or doubt, hope or despair.

Many viewed the Soviet achievement as a tremendous victory over the United States.

To Giovanni Battista Cardinal Montini, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Milan, Italy, the conquest of space meant "the whole world of man is growing in the contemplation of the universe is growing . . . the hopes of the whole world are growing."

Walter Reher, a Viennese painter, sounded a theme heard over and again in the Western world — "It" thrilling news to me, but a big disappointment that the Communists are there first and so far ahead of the West."

Americans humor it. James Thurber, in London to put on a play, said his fingers through his gray hair and said he felt very low.

"Man is very strange," said the 88-year-old blind author and playwright. "We are forever busying ourselves out to get man into space when we don't know anything about ourselves."

". . . Yes sir, by tomorrow night we're going to have another quarter million Americans running to psychiatrists all because of this Russian 'space man.'"

Italian actress Sophia Loren said in Rome she was thrilled . . . "it hit me more than the beauty of all my jewels in London last year."

"Wonderful news," said a newspaper vendor in HLo ng Kog. "It will help me sell papers."

"Cairo, and now a cosmonaut," shrugged the bartender in a Mexico City hotel. "Yankee take a boatlng, no!"

British Papers' Scepticism 'Pitiful' Is Russian View; U.S. Confirms Soviet Tale

OF from AP-Reuters

LONDON — Russia today termed as "pitiful" reports in three London newspapers questioning the Soviet Union's account of the flying of its manned space flight.

Elsewhere, the space flight continued to win international acclaim and dominate front pages of newspapers.

Russia's minute - by - minute chart of the flight was questioned by The Daily Express, The Daily Telegraph and The Sketch.

An American space official said Wednesday night in Washington there was "no reason to doubt" Soviet claims about the flight and that information from United States tracking stations tallied exactly with the Russian announcement on the flight's route and timing.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency said today that "one can notice in London some pitiful, opinions of ill-intentioned people who try on the pages of British bourgeois newspapers to use any means to blacken the achievement of Soviet people."

HOLDS TIME JUGGLED

A science writer in The Express said: "British intelligence experts suspect that man's first space flight was not yesterday but some time as much as five days."

The Russians "would never announce the flight until the cosmonaut had returned safely, in case they might have to fix low it by news of his death," The Express said.

But the newspaper also reported that British scientists disagree with the theory that two Russians went into orbit—a man who is ill or dead after a flight, followed by a healthy cosmonaut recorded Wednesday.

"They do not think that even the Russians could mount two such tremendous efforts in such a short period," The Express said.

Tass said the Express report quoted "informers from the British intelligence service" but had not named them to publish their fairy tales on its front page.

IMPOSSIBLE DART

The Daily Telegraph said Maj. Yuri Gagarin's space ship could not have followed the orbit reported by Russia.

If the space ship was fired in a westerly direction, it would have sputniks have come from" and at 65 degrees to the Equator, Gagarin could not have been over South America ply 15 minutes after the Russian news writer said.

The timetable published by Tass "confused everything," the Telegraph report said, noting that on Russia's past record an astronaut stood only a 50-50 chance of successfully returning to earth.

Tass commented the Telegraph report's demonstrated out argument was "pitiful."

The Communist Daily Worker of London splashed the report of Gagarin's flight but offered no explanation of its front page story in Wednesday's edition explaining why it sent a man into space and recovered him alive, probably last Friday.

Prime Minister Macmillan sent Russia congratulations on the manned flight, officials here said today.

Tass said the tabloid Daily Sketch carried a "slanderously

Briton to Get Colored Coal For Fireplaces

LONDON (AP)—The British steelmaker soon will be able to buy colored coal to match her living room curtains.

Final Reading Of Constitution Bill Passed

CAPE TOWN (AP) — The South African Parliament Wednesday passed the final reading of the constitution bill converting this monarchy under the British Crown into a republic next May 31.

Speaking immediately before the third reading vote, Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd declared:

"I hope that the new state will have the loyalty of all our people. I move the third reading of this bill with the prayer that the new South African Republic will bring prosperity and peace for every section of the people of this country."

The vote was 90 votes for, and 51 against the bill which will now be sent to the Senate for expected automatic approval before ratification by the Governor-General.

During the session, Sir de Villiers Graaff, leader of the Opposition United Party, told South African whites not to leave the country but to "stay here—stand firm and fight it out."

Graaff made his appeal as the press played up reports that Russia lners being brought to South Africa ports to carry out South African strike threats, whites fleeing in fright from what Rhodesian Premier Prime Minister Roy Welensky called "the Goliath of black African Nationalism that is fast breaking us."

BLAMES POLICIES

Graaff said the real cause for South Africa's rapidly growing misery is the race policies of the government.

But no matter how rigid or foolhardy Verwoerd might be in his native country, he has not let him lead them to final disaster, he said.

He envisaged a future in which those who could not adapt themselves would be swept away.

Verwoerd called unwise people who are leaving the country because they fear for their own and their children's future.

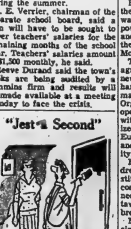
Verwoerd said Graaff regrets their departure because they are Colonial-minded followers of whe, Verwoerd, regrets it because he realizes their departure is a general loss to the country.

Village's Debt Now $32,000 With No Money

MATACHEWAN (CP) — This community of 850, about 100 miles southwest of Kirkland Lake, is struggling through the winter without a single industry and has a debt which now totals $32,000 with no money.

Matachewan's boom days in the early 1930s when gold, silver and copper mills swell property assessment up to six miles outside the town limits have long gone. The last of four mines, International Metallurgical, closed about a year and a half ago.

The public school board has been operating provincial grants based on the bobm-times assessment but prospectors' finds now are worth a fraction of former assessments and the owners refuse to pay taxes on the land, then.



H. A. Campbell, secretary of the public school board, said the town owes the board about $64,000. The board will have to borrow again this year to be sought to cover teachers' salaries for the remaining months of the school year. Teachers' salaries amount to $1,300 monthly, he said.

Reeve Edward Durand said no relief can be expected for the town's depressed economy until tourist dollars start coming in during the summer.

Fred Verrier, chairman of the separate school board, said a loan will have to be sought to cover teachers' salaries for the remaining months of the school year. Teachers' salaries amount to $1,300 monthly, he said.

Reeve Durand said the town's books are being audited by Timmins firm and results will be made available at a meeting Monday to face the crisis.

WEAPONS CAUSE CONCERN — Police in the Montreal area are becoming increasingly concerned about the number of unregistered revolvers in the possession of ordinary citizens and known hoodlums. There are 29,000 revolvers registered but more arms of different kinds are known to exist. Detective Yvan Boucher of the Quebec provincial police holdup squad holds a Thompson sub-machine-gun. Police Concerned Over Unregistered Revolvers

MONTREAL (CP) — Police are becoming increasingly concerned about the number of unregistered revolvers in Montreal, a city that had more than 300 armed robberies last year.

There are 29,000 registered revolvers in the city along with thousands of smuggled, stolen and war-souvenir weapons that have never been registered.

Authorities sometimes get the uneasy feeling that they are trying to maintain order in a vast armed camp.

"With a bit of training and choice of weapons, Montreal could take on the army and all the police forces in Canada," said one police official.

In 1960 there were nearly 25,000 shells arms registered in the half of Quebec under jurisdiction of the Montreal division of the provincial police, an increase of 2,085 over 1959.

There were 4,600 individual permits issued to carry a weapon, besides 1,962 covering one or several persons issued to banks, security and protective services.

But it is the unregistered arms that are the big worry. Police know that just about anyone can make a deal for a pistol or rifle along Ste. Marie (St. Lawrence Boulevard). They call it a "disgrace."

WANT PRISON SENTENCE

Police want mandatory prison sentences for any ex - convict caught with a revolver. At present, Assistant Police Director Romeo Longpre, any such person can hope to beat a concealed-weapon charge with a $50 fine.

Last year Montreal had 387 armed robberies and 108 attempted robberies. Real weapons were used in 240 cases and the loot was more than $675,000.

Police are also alarmed by the fast-spreading notion among decent citizens and teen-agers that it has become fashionable to have a gun or something that looks like one.

Joseph Brunet, provincial police director, says he is shocked by his opposition to have the number of permits issued reduced by nearly half.

"One man wants to carry a revolver because he wears a diamond ring and frequently has $200 on him," says the former RCMP superintendent. "One young fellow was most indignant because he couldn't have a gun along on his holidays with his wife and children—and three weeks' salary."

"You can't think of an argument we haven't heard," says Louis Huet, registrar of firearms for the provincial police district. "Hoodlums and serious men have asserted they are entitled to have a revolver because they are British subjects."

New International Body May Result From Talks

By JAMES NELSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A dominant new international body is emerging from the wreckage of North Atlantic economic strength of all North Atlantic countries may be the long - range result of talks held here this week by Prime Minister Macmillan and Diefenbaker, Ottawa officials say.

How to strengthen the unity of the Western nation as a bulwark against Russia's potential power to wage war militarily and economically, was a theme of the conferences held Monday and Tuesday.

To achieve this aim, it was agreed in general terms that the new machinery is needed to harmonize the efforts of such major bodies as NATO and the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development with such agencies of specialized interest as Euratom, the European atomic energy body, and the coal and steel community.

Mr. Macmillan, in his address to the Belleschaustuetta in style of Technology after his conferences with President Kennedy and Secretary of State Rusk, spoke of the need for broader partnerships.

Mr. Diefenbaker sounded a similar note in his remarks greeting Mr. Macmillan:

". . . Unity must be attained to a greater degree than ever before, and in that we should include not only defence unity but also economic unity and ultimately such changes politically as will assure the development of the European trade groupings.

Wooden Freighters Falling Prey to Progress as Nfld. Continues to Open Roads

By JAMES M. HUBLEY
Canadian Press Correspondent

ST.JOHN, Nfld. (CP) — The to sturdy wooden freighters that for years have plied the waters around Newfoundland's coast are fast disappearing, falling prey to progress as the country continues to be opened up by road construction.

In past years the freighters have moved between the outports all winter, especially on the south coast around the Burin Peninsula, and to Nova Scotia, carrying coal and other merchandise.

During the last winter only one boat out of a fleet of five sailed from here. With the exception of the fishing dragger fleet and the CNR coastal boats, shipping to this port has been at a minimum.

The only other traffic has been a few oil tankers discharging oil and gas and five or six refrigerated ships calling for frozen fish cargoes.

Capt. George Bennett of the nearby community of Port-au-Bras, one of Newfoundland's foremost master mariners, recently retired from the sea. He sold his 105-ton vessel, The Loretta Lovette, which he had sailed between Burin and St. John's for several years. She was the last schooner to sail out of Burin.

ONE-WAY HAULS

However, Capt. Bert Hodder of Marystown, about 10 miles east of here, who sells his 30-ton schooner on the St. John's-Burin run, says he has had no trouble picking up cargo during the spring and summer months when trade is at its height.

Four other vessels sailing in the same area often have to go to bring back coal, and general merchandise in order to keep going. This is usually a one-way haul and an expensive operation.

Of five Burin freighters, only one, the Thomas V. Hollett, is big enough to make transatlantic crossings. She has on occasion transported fish to the West Indies, bringing back salt or molasses.

Capt. Malcolm Rogers of Trinity on the north coast says the 1960 season was the worst for coastal freighters in as many years. Some blame has been laid to the fact that there now are fewer fishermen in the province. Fishermen need supplies and their fish freighted to market only when they fish.

USE LESS COAL

Oil companies have built storage tanks along the coast. Quantities of oil formerly carried by the little freighters now are taken by large seagoing tankers and distributed by tank trucks.

Skippers say continued road building throughout the province is destroying the coastal freighting trade.

Imported coal once kept many vessels plying between Sydney and Bonin. Now many householders have switched to oil for heating and cooking. Coal requirements are less than half what they were a decade ago.

Even the CNR passenger ships are feeling the pinch. Last summer the CNR replaced the passenger - freight Bonavista with a small wooden vessel, the Codroy, on a regular run between St. John's, Lewisporte and Notre Dame Bay on the northeast coast because there was often only two or three passengers aboard a ship that could take 100. The Codroy can accommodate 26.

In the face of growing competition from road transportation, it seems unlikely Newfoundland's wooden coastal fleet will ever again be of any substantial size.

Sport Snapshots

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The obituary notice was skimpy. It said that Frederick Hugh Lehman had played pro-for Vancouver of the West Coast League, that he was player and coach of Chicago Black Hawks and was admitted to the Hockey Hall of Fame in 1964.

The obit left a great deal unsaid about this shy, retiring 75-year-old man who shunned publicity and newspaper men.

Hugh Lehman, a small, thin, dark-complexioned figure, was a product of an uproarious era of pro hockey and the Stanley Cup.

It was just after the turn of the century when league champions from Halifax to the Yukon and Vancouver faced their fiercest, snarled challenges at the reigning Cup champion and invariably returned home well-beaten physically and on the scoreboard.

In those days any club reserved the right to challenge, much in the style of the hard-balled farm nay at the country fair who believes he can last three rounds with the heavyweight prize-fighter.

CHANGED TEAMS OFTEN

It was an era—when they played seven men a side; when goals were just two poles mounted on a movable base; when Montreal Wanderers, Montreal AAA and the rough, tough, ice-slicing - cost Ottawa Silver Seven ruled the game.

Lehman appeared on the scene along with such stalwarts as Jack Adams, Art Ross, Cyclone Taylor, Newsy Lalonde, Lester and Frank Patrick, Cyclone Frank Magee, Hat Westwick, Percy LeSueur, Paddy Moran, Bullet Joe Malone and Harry Mummery. In those days players blithely skipped from team to team. They went to the highest bidder.

He was still around when Georges Vezina, Babe Dye, Frank Fredrickson, Dick Irvin, Punch Broadbent, Frank Highbor, Mickey MacKay, Clint Benedict, Eddie Gerard, Bert Corbeau, Billy Coutu and the three Boucher brothers—George, Billy and Frank — were in their prime.

PIONEER PROS

To the younger generation the cavalcade of names doesn't mean much, except possibly a blurry memory of men they have heard or read about. But these were the men who laid the cornerstone of pro hockey and the Cup.

Lehman played hard and worked hard and life had been good to him. In the off-season he was a road construction superintendent around Pembroke, Ont., and rose to be president of a bowling firm. He retired to a life of ease five years ago.

The fish-cold statistics of record books tell the story of Hugh Lehman's hockey life. Five players pos matsh his nomadic exploits and, quite possibly, more. He played as a defenceman, rover and goalkeeper who can match his record.

Born in Pembroke Oct. 27, 1885, he played from 1906 to 1927, finishing as regular goalkeeper for a Chicago Black Hawk team that lost out in a Stanley Cup semi-final. The following year he shared Hawk coaching duties with Barney Stanley.

JOB WAS DANGEROUS

It's a wonder he lasted that long because in his heyday, as now, goalkeeper led a hazardous life. Playing without the armor of the present-day netminders and on the firing line of some of the game's hardest shots, they also were prime targets of fans who hurled empty spirit bottles, pieces of boards and even chairs in their direction.

On outdoor rinks, were to-bacco - chewing spectators perched on adjoining snow-banks, goalies had to contend with another hazard: A squirt in the eye at the most crucial moments.

Lehman and LeSueur are the only men to play in two Cup series with different clubs within two months.

LeSueur did it in 1906 when he left Smiths Falls, Ont., defence to join the Ottawa Silver Seven for the second game of their losing total-point series against Montreal Wanderers. Four years later Lehman was with Galt, Ont., which lost a total-point series to Ottawa, then switched his allegiance to Berlin, Ont., for Kitchener, for a sudden-death Cup game against the Wanderers. Berlin lost 7-3.

ONE CUP WINNER

He went to the West Coast and appeared in the Cup playoffs in 1915, 1921, 1922, 13

The Trots

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP)—Favored Mr. Mac Lad will start from the No. 1 post position as 10 trotters from four countries compete in the 1¼ miles of the $68,000 Golden Trot at Yonkers Raceway tonight.

Mr. Mac Lad, winner of the 1960 Goldsmith and a double victor this year, has 4-to-5 favorite with The Rebel, the lone Canadian entry from Montreal, the second choice at 9 to 2. Stanley Dancer will be in the sulky behind Mr. Mac Lad and Howard Beissinger will drive The Rebel.

Italy has two colorbearers in Gino Malvicini entry of Jario-lalee and Lavanelliere III, rated at 8 to 1. Islander F. From West Germany is listed at 15 to 1.

Silver Song, winner of $102,-000 last season and a good second to Su Mac Lad in the $35,-000 Inaugural Trot at Yonkers two weeks ago, is rated at 18 to 1, as is Senator Frost, another United States entry. Air Record, second to Su Mac Lad last Thursday in the $66,000 U.S.A. test, is 8 to 1.

From the Gotham will emerge the North American representatives for the $60,000 United Nations Trot April 29 and the National Championship trot April 27.

1933, 1934 with Vancouver Millionaires and won on a winner only once—in 1925 when the West champs defeated Ottawa Senators 6-4, 9-8, 1-0 in a best-of-five series.

He could have spun yarns about those early, carefree days but in his later years he lived quietly in an apartment in a fashionable section of Toronto. Two years ago an appointment was made for an interview but Lehman didn't keep it.

"I'd just as soon forget it. You don't want to talk to an old gaffer from the past," was his explanation.

On Tuesday, the "old gaffer" was afflicted with his memories. END ADVANCE FOR APRIL

This Needle Too Much For Mantle

NEW YORK (AP) — This was one spring when everything was right with Mickey Mantle—no strains, no pains, no ailments at all when he and New York Yankees opened the American League season.

So he took an injection in the arm for hey fever and the trouble started.

"He has a knot the size of a baseball on his left arm," manager Ralph Houk said. "But I think he'll be able to play today."

Mantle, who struck out twice when Pedro Ramos pitched three - hitter that gave Minnesota Twins a 6-0 opening-day victory Tuesday, had a tough time in the batting cage during Wednesday's workout.

"There's no pain," said Mick, "but I felt dizzy and nauseated. I've been taking these shots once a month for a year and a half and this is the first time I've ever had a reaction."

The Tracks

FORT ERIE (CP) — The finest fields in the history of spring racing at the Fort Erie Jockey Club have been nominated for the three stakes events scheduled for the current 26-day meeting.

Officials announced today 105 nominations have been received for the three stakes events, each with a purse of $7,500 added.

The Bold Venture Handicap, a sprint of six furlongs, scheduled for April 22, has attracted 31 nominees of which 15 have won stakes events.

The Queenston Stakes, scheduled for April 29, has drawn nominations of 40 three-year-olds and the purse is likely to gross more than $9,000.

The 1 1-16-mile Vigil Handicap is scheduled for May 6, the closing day of the meeting.

FORT ERIE (CP) — The black - yellow silks of Canada's oldest racing establishment, the famous Seagram stable of Waterloo, were carried to victory in the featured Egerton Purse at Fort Erie Wednesday when Castleberry defeated Beauvalon by 3½ lengths. Vimalist finished a distant third in the five - furlong sprint.

The winner's time was 1.05 4-5 over the heaviest track of the meeting.

Castleberry was the first horse started this season by the Seagram stable and victory augurs well for the future success of owner Prowse Seagram and trainer Nick Julius. A few months ago Julius succeeded Jack Thorpe, the octogenarian who retired after being associated with three generations of Seagrams during more than 60 years.

Finalist set the early pace but jockey Jim Fitzsimmons of Calgary kept Castleberry in second place and then took the lead easily at the head of the homestretch.

The winner paid $13.60 $4.60 and $3.30 and combined with Beauvalon for a quinella of $58.80.

Although the weather was dull and blustry and the track was Cosgy's mud, the meeting's largest weed - day crowd—5,097 — witnessed the eight races.

Post-Game Brawl

Kings Whip Winnipeg

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Rangers now have wounds to nurse besides controlling the frustration built up by failure to outscore Edmonton Oil Kings here during the first two games of the Western Memorial Cup playoffs.

Rangers came out second best in a clearbrook that developed immediately after the game-over signal of Edmonton's 4-1 victory Wednesday night in the second game of the best - of-seven series.

Winnipeg lost Monday's opener 4-2. Oil King netminder Paul Sexsmith was the only obstacle to Rangers' inability to score, handling 40 shots in the opening game and 32 Wednesday night. The third and fourth games are set for Edmonton Saturday and Monday. The winner meets the eastern champion for the Memorial Cup and Canadian junior hockey crown.

The stick-swinging was set off when Bryan Hextall was satisfied by Edmonton defenseman Wayne Muloin while skating to the Ranger bench as the final horn sounded. Seconds before Hextall's final attempt for goal was partially interfered with by Larry Hale's high stick.

CASUALTIES MOUNT

Both benches emptied and when the row was over penalties and casualties mounted. Hale was given a delayed high-sticking penalty. Five majors for fighting and a match penalty also were awarded to bring to 92 for 34 infractions for the game.

Winnipeg received most of the casualties. Bob Lindsay needed six stitches to close a cut on the back of his head. Dennis Toyne's cheekbone was creased by Phil Dutton's high stick.

Bobby Cox scored one Oil and assisted on others by Roger Bourbonnais and Bob Marik. Don Chic ended the Edmonton scoring. Dave Richard scored the only Winnipeg goal early in the third period.

Detroit Rookie Steals Cup Thunder

MacGregor Paces 2-1 Win

DETROIT (CP) — A 19-year-old rookie just two months out of the minors fired the shot Wednesday night that put Detroit Red Wings solidly back into the Stanley Cup picture.

Red-headed Bruce MacGregor's 25-foot drive, too hot for Chicago goaltender Glenn Hall to handle, gave the Wings a 2-1 victory over the Black Hawks, squared the best-of-seven final at two games apiece and touched off a scene of wild jubilation in the Detroit dressing room.

There was wildness in the Chicago den too, directed mostly at referee Frank Udvari.

The beef, generated largely by coach Rudy Pilous, boiled over into an ugly post-game encounter between Udvari and Chicago forward Reg Fleming and is almost certain to hamper on into the fifth game at Chicago Friday night.

But the bitterness did nothing to dispel the congratulations heaped on the overjoyed MacGregor, who hadn't scored a goal since joining the Wings from Edmonton Flyers of the Western League late in the National Hockey League season.

COMES NEAR END

It came with seven minutes left in the game on top of second-period goals by Bill Hay of Chicago and Alex Delvecchio of Detroit.

Hall appeared to have the puck cleared in big style, but it spurted loose and bounced behind him. The crowd of 13,975, which had sprinkled the ice with an assortment of livestock, fish, vegetables and eggs, went into a screaming ovation.

"I've been here since Feb. 24 and I got to thinking I'd never score a goal," said MacGregor afterward.

"I had chances previously but the puck never seemed to go in. And I thought Glenn Hall had that one. He got it in his pads but it kept rolling in trickle through. You bet I was happy.

"It was a perfect pass from Val (Fonteyne) and I let it go from about 25 feet."

General manager Jack Adams and coach Sid Abel joined Howie Glover, Delvecchio and Gordie Howe in contributing to MacGregor, who starred with Edmonton Oil Kings juniors last year, decided against a college career to turn pro, was signed by the Wings and sent back to Edmonton.

Abel acknowledged his players' chant that the Wings had to win one game in Chicago.

"If we get enough chances, then maybe we will. They think they're a better club than we are-but we don't think so, and I'd say that's what counts. I wouldn't say the home advantage is any bigger in the playoffs but we just don't like their soft ice over in Chicago.

Pilous, fuming against Udvari, called it "the worst-officiated game in the whole damn series." He thought best was that Glover was in the crease when MacGregor scored.

BLAMES HOWE

"And that penalty on Murray Balfour — Howe had his stick and held him down and Balfour got the penalty because he couldn't get up.

"Howe just gets away with too much. He's a halluva hockey player but of all the infractions in the book, he invented half of them. If he (Udvari) wants to watch a game he should buy a ticket and stay in the stands."

Tommy Ivan, Hawk general manager, said of Udvari "He's spiffier, or Adams (Jack Adams, Detroit general manager) has him scared to death."

The aftermath came in a chance encounter between Fleming and Udvari after they had changed to street clothes and were leaving Olympia Stadium.

Onlookers, including an official connected with the game, said Fleming lambasted the referee furiously although there was no physical violence.

HAVE NO REPORT

NHL president Clarence Campbell and referee-in - chief Carl Voss said they had received no report of the incident and could not comment. Voss understood Udvari had gone ahead with his plans to leave for his home in Kitchener immediately after the game before returning to Chicago to handle Friday night's game.

The sixth game is here Sunday night.

While the game had its high spots, play was spotty in general with some inept passing and clearing. Hall and Detroit's Terry Sawchuk, who returned after missing the games with an injured shoulder and back, sparkled in the nets.

Defenceman Marcel Pronovost also returned to the Detroit lineup after missing two games because of an ankle injury.

Hay started the scoring at 17:54 of the second period, catching Murray Balfour's pass in front of the net and slapping it in before Sawchuk could go down.

Chicago's Bobby Hull was in the penalty box for hipsticking when Delvecchio evened it up a minute and 14 seconds later on a double - barrelled effort. He and MacGregor's pass just inside the blueline, bounced the puck into the slot Fleming batted it down with his head and drove a 40 - foot screened shot past Hall.

Hall was taken from the nets with a minute left but the Hawks got nowhere.

Chicago was outshot 20-26 and outhit 39-31 and drew five minor penalties.

ROOKIE WINS FOR RED WINGS — Bruce MacGregor, right, 19-year-old rookie with the Detroit Red Wings, hugged by veteran Alex Delvecchio after MacGregor scored the winning goal in Stanley Cup playoff game Wednesday at Detroit. MacGregor, less than two months out of the minor leagues, broke up a tense duel by scoring against the Chicago Black Hawks in third period to give Detroit a 2-1 win. The best of seven series now is tied at 2-2. (A.P. Wirephoto).

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Thought for a moment last night that Old Square-Face, the living room private eye had turned into a color set.

For a moment a pinkish glow suffused the screen. Then was after someone had thrown "a mysterious object" on the ice between the second and third periods.

The "glow" was probably a reflection of Foster Hewitt's countenance when the "object" that looked like an octopus turned out to be a common ole ordinary puck, the kind they use to play hockey games.

After all, you could scarcely blame the guy. The fourth game of the Regency Cup series was selected rookie blaze forth in his baptism of playoff fire to win the till for the Wings had the gallery gods heaving everything but small elephants.

The octopods did not materialize. Probably carry-anything Chicago fans cornered the squid market and grabbed the eight-legged ammunition for Friday night's "must" battle in the Windy City.

Tomatoes, a gallon of green ink, eggs fresh from the hen, and of voting age, a long-departed fish, rubber etc descended from time to time from the gallery gods of Olympia.

But the heaving, throwing or dropping of an innocent and live little guinea pig was the height of foolishness, ignorance and cruelty. The little fellow appeared to be scared but unhurt as gallant Gordie Howe tenderly picked it up and carried it to a rinkside spot.

The applaud who tossed the little animal probably was a lass. He wife of a guy with mental quirks like that would accompany him, of all places, to a hockey match when the Wings are playing. After all what good woman wants to wind up like a dead octopus squidded all over an ice surface after missing the referee target.

On the other side of the picture there was a distinct departure from the usual routine of stomach-testing tween-periods interviews.

It is bad enough to have to listen to the worn-clichés of game commentators who pellisely inform you some ten seconds after you have seen them, "the players are on the ice and ready to start the se-and-so period."

Last night it was different. You didn't have to listen to the blurbs of long-departed Red Wings or Black Hawks who tell you "its good to get back and see the old arena again — and I remember in the 1934-45 series . . ."

Last night a crazy-faced man named Norris, owner of the Black Hawks gave an interview that was refreshing as most of the time-worn efforts are boring. Mr. Norris didn't follow the regular pattern and tell what he thought of the game, Gordie Howe and "how do you think the series will go." What he did say was he'd rather win the Stanley Cup than the Kentucky Derby.

Then there was a policeman, a timekeeper, goal judges and other hidden and unsung personalities you never see on a television screen. Now if they could interview that little guinea pig, or tape pre-game statements from octopods, pipe tomatoes and eggs of assorted sizes, they would hit a real "new" in between-periods entertainment.

The Grim Reaper finally counted up with one of the most colorful sports personalities this city has ever known- Merbie "The Old Checker" Hearn passed away at four o'clock this morning, losing a "game" he fought courageously, gallantly and hard for the past few years. Softball has lost one of its finest exponents and supporters, sport in general has lost a faithful adherent and Belleville a fine citizen. This department joins sportdom in general and softball in particular in extending heartfelt sympathy to Mrs. Hearn and family.

U.S. TAKES LEAD

HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP)— The United States team took a 5-1 lead over Bermuda Wednesday in their best - of - seven yachting series for the America Cup.

The U.S. team won the morning race, 45¾ to 40. The afternoon race was cancelled because of the lack of wind. The third race in the dragon class invitation championship, which Dr. S. A. Macdonald of Montreal is the leader, also was cancelled.

Glen Foster of the U.S. won both the morning and afternoon races in the International 14-foot dinghy series for the Princess Elizabeth Cup and after three races has 63½ points to 51½ for Toronto's Paul Henderson.

Crawfords Drop Second To Wilsons

Trenton Wilsons climbed into the lead in their Bay of Quinte basketball league finals last night when they dumped Belleville Crawford Meteks 76-54 on the Crawfords' home court.

The Wilsons now lead the best-of -five series two games to one and the fourth game is slated for Trenton next Wednesday at eight o'clock. Crawfords must win to stay in contention.

Trenton played top ball last night, taking a 40-31 lead at half time and never looking back. The winners were especially strong under the boards and their powerful rebounding played a major part in the victory. This was the first time this season that the Crawfords have been beaten on their home court, the Moira Secondary School gym.

Leading the Trenton scorers was Arlen Burleigh one half of the Wilsons' brother combination. Arlen hit for 20 points while brother Bob sunk 16 and also checking the Crawfords' ace, Bert Faulkner holding him to a mere seven points.

Wilf Borden also starred for Trenton with 13 points and Warren Whitley had 12.

Teddy Bardell — and Bill Green were best for the Bellevile crew, each hooping 18 points, while no other player reached double figures.

Referees for the game were Earl Naismith and Jack Perry.

Warsaw Wins Protest, Picton Out

Warsaw's protest against the Picton Merchants for the use of ineligible players in their OHA Junior "C" playdown series, was upheld by an OHA special protest committee in Toronto last night.

Picton ousted Warsaw, taking two series to do it, and were beaten in the first game of the semi-finals by Gananoque.

The OHA last night ordered Picton to replay either the entire series with Warsaw or else play a sudden-death game for the right to advance into the semi-finals.

Picton manager Chris Lockyer decided that because of injuries and examinations, the team would withdraw from competition rather than play against Warsaw again.

Thus Warsaw will meet Gananoque in the OHA Junior "C" semi-finals.

Dodgers Hit For Second In Row

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

If there was one phase of baseball which manager Gene Mauch stressed with his young Philadelphia Phillies in spring training, it was base running.

"Mistakes cost you games," he said. "And most of the mistakes are made when you're on the bases."

That point was driven home at Los Angeles Wednesday night as the Phillies ran themselves into a weird doubleplay that squelched a ninth - inning rally and gave the Angeles-Dodgers a 3-2 victory.

It was one of two games played in the majors. San Francisco Giants survived a ninth-inning threat and beat Pittsburgh Pirates 5-4 in the only other game scheduled in the National League.

Two games scheduled in the American League — Chicago at Washington and Los Angeles at Baltimore—were rained out.

HAD SCORED THIRD

The Phils' folly came after the Dodgers had broken through against pitcher Jack Sullivan with three runs in the seventh inning on Wally Moon's homer and a scratch single by winning hurler Johnny Podres.

Trailing 3-2, the Phils got rid of Podres when Johnny Callison and Tony Taylor opened the ninth with singles. Callison took third when rookie Willie Davis bobbled Taylor's bit to centre and scored on a high bouncer to the left of the mound by pinch-hitter Tony Curry. Taylor scooted to third on the play when relieved Stan Williams' throw to the plate was wild.

Pinch - hitter Tony Gonsalves forced Curry for the first out, but the Phils were still in business, with runners on third and first as pinch-hitter Bob Sadowski came to the plate. That's when the Phils' errors popped up.

Taylor broke for the plate with the tying run on Sadowski's grounder to short, but was caught between third and home when Maury Wills threw to catcher Johnn Roseboro.

Roseboro made the tag on Taylor, after pairing with third baseman Junior Gilliam for the rundown, and then flipped back to Gilliam, who nailed Gonsalves as he attempted to go from second to third, for the game-ending doubleplay.

At San Francisco, rookie pitcher Tom Haller made his first Major League hit a seventh-inning homer that broke up a four-hit standout against the Giants by Vern Law. It came after Bob Clemente dropped Haller's foul fly to right.

The Pirates' 30-game winner of last year's pennant club, then forced the clincher when he hit Orlando Cepeda with a pitch with the bases loaded in the eighth. The Pirates scored in the ninth off winner Billy Loes.

Canada May Have 1968 Winter Games

OTTAWA (CP)—Health Minister Monteith said Wednesday he expects to receive a report any day from the Canadian Olympic Association recommending a bid to Canada for the 1968 Winter Olympic Games.

Mr. Monteith said possible Canadian sites are being studied by engineering consultants hired by the association. The health department provided a $10,000 grant to finance the work.

He added that the government is taking into consideration to what financial assistance it is prepared to give to the development of a site should Canada be selected as host country.

TORONTO (CP) — A delegation from the Netherlands Olympic Development Association arrived Wednesday to work up activities for Winter Olympics as Canada's choice for site of the 1968 Winter Olympics.

The site, in British Columbia's Garibaldi Park some 75 miles north of Vancouver, will be considered by the Canadian Olympic Association's meeting here April 22. Garibaldi's biggest competition will be from the Sand-Lesser-Lake Louise area of Alberta.

Ingy, Liston Bout Almost "In the Bag"

GOTEBORG, Sweden (AP) — Ingemar Johansson, former world heavyweight boxing champion, said Wednesday he probably will fight top - ranked Sonny Liston in the United States in September "if I get my way with the U.S. tax people."

Unless U.S. authorities recognize his claim that he is a Swiss resident, permitting him considerable tax savings, Johansson said the fight would have to be held in Gotebord.

"I had encouraging news from Bill Fugazy (official of the promoting Feature Sports Incorporated) today that a U.S. fight against Liston is almost in the bag," Ingemar said.

A tax claim of about $1,000,000 has been filed by the U.S. against Johansson for his earnings from title fights against champion Floyd Patterson.

Game Away From Title

Indians Clobber Bears

HERSHEY (AP)—Springfield Indians are only one victory away from winning their second straight American Hockey League Calder Cup under coach Pat Egan.

They defeated Hershey Bears 7-4 Wednesday night to take a 3-0 lead in the best-of-seven final series. The Indians can wrap up the cup by winning the fourth game here Saturday night.

"I predict we'll win the Calder Cup," said Egan, "But I'm not saying we'll take them four in a row."

Egan, who came to the Indians in 1959 from Victoria Cougars of the Western League, said his team "checked terrifically" Wednesday night. "The defence was sensational."

He said substitute goaltender Gerry Wood, who has been outstanding in the playoffs since taking over for injured Marcel Paille, "made some terrific saves."

With the Indians throwing a blanket defence in front of Wood, the rookie netminder was called on for only 17 stops.

Jim Anderson paced the Indians with two goals. Singles went to Ian Cushenan, Bill McCreary, Brian Kilrea, Bill Sweeney and Dennis Olson.

Hershey took the lead early when McIntyre deflected a shot past Wood after four minutes of the first period.

Then Springfield showed its firepower with four straight goals by Anderson, Cushenan, McCreary and Olson.

Hershey pulled to within one goal of the Indians at 4-3 when Lalande and Smith scored early in the third period. But Springfield went on another scoring spree to wrap things up.

Car Rally Said Ready

TORONTO (CP)—The seventh Trans-Canada Rally Wednesday received its inspection slip and is ready for its inaugural run April 30.

Alan Sands, competition chairman of the Canadian Automobile Sports Club, governing body of motor sport in Canada, unveiled the 4,100-mile route from Montreal to Vancouver and reported it was "delightful" with the course.

An international entry of 107 cars representing domestic and foreign makes will leave Montreal April 30 and travel via Toronto, Fort William, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary and Edmonton. All should have arrived in Vancouver by May 6.

The rally is a test of driving skill and endurance for the cars and two-man crews. It is not a race.

"SUZIE" SPARKLES ON SCREEN IN DRAMATIC COLOR TRIUMPH (Review)

"The World of Suzie Wong" will surely open up a new world to movie fans who see this wonderfully moving, visually exciting Technicolor romance which opened yesterday at the Belle Theatre. Suzie Wong's world of love-for-sale is set within the colorful, kaleidoscopic world of Hong Kong (where the picture was filmed), a world of teeming congestion, of wealth and poverty, beauty and ugliness, side-splitting, ear-splitting — altogether fascinating.

The Ray Stark production, released by Paramount, stars William Holden as an American artist who has given himself a year on a limited budget to try his hand at painting. He rents a room at the second-rate Nam Kok Hotel frequented by "yum yum" girls who use it as a rendezvous for plying their trade. Such a girl is Suzie, portrayed by the sensational Nancy Kwan, a beautiful Eurasian who becomes a star with this, her first film role. The story concerns the relationship between the artist and Suzie, who becomes his model. They fall in love, but there is the matter of the artist's Occidental conscience, his wanting her but rejecting her, his pitying but condemning her, and finally, his defiance of convention and acceptance of her.

Also co-starred are the beautiful English actress, Sylvia Syms, as the banker's daughter who also loves the American artist and who tries to win him away from Suzie, and Michael Wilding as one of Suzie's married "customers." The various girls who meet their "dates" at the hotel are unusual types, all good performers who add to the color and interest of this exceptionally entertaining and memorable film.

Applause for Jokes and Bits Not Liked by Jack Carter

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — "I hate applause," said comedian Jack Carter. "Now, of the end, of course, but applause for jokes and bits. I want laughs, just laughs — and I'll do anything to keep the audience with me."

Carter is considered one of the brightest, most energetic men in the business—more than a triple threat, because he not only stands up and fires jokes in rapid fashion but because he also sings, dances, acts and is a wicked mimic.

It will look scary—almost extemporaneous — when Carter strolls out once again on the Red Sullivan stage Sunday night and opens a barrage of funnies. Actually, he has been planning that one brief television turn for weeks. He's mulled over his current and old material, consulted earnestly with writers of special material, everything is planned down to the split-second pause.

"Every TV show is different," he says. "Every show has a different audience. When I'm doing a Como show, it's not a bit like a Sullivan show. With Como you know you're going to be running all through the program. You're not under pressure and you can take your time. But with Sullivan, you've got an audience geared to a vaudeville type of thing, and it isn't time to waste a single word—You've got at the outside only eight minutes and everything has to count."

Jack Paar's return Tuesday night started with a dull thud: "I feel like a mosquito in a nudist camp," began Paar. "I don't know where to begin." And he began an extended travelogue.

Focus on Health

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Topics this week: Chubby children, family schedules and a view about heart attacks.

ROLLY-POLIES

Parents often express pride their children are chubby, and thus well-fed. Actually excess fat is not good at any age, warns the Nutrition Foundation.

It reports much evidence that overweight youngsters are more handicapped in their performances socially, mentally and physically than most parents realize.

MURMURING HEARTS

Heart murmurs are not uncommon among children. But in more than half of children aged three to seven the murmurs are completely innocent or meaningless, says the American Heart Association.

Their murmurs are not due to any physical defect, injured, they arise from the bubbling of blood circulating through heart valves and chambers, and the condition usually disappears during adolescence. Any murmur — its first detection, should be thoroughly checked to determine if it signifies a heart defect or is actually no cause for alarm.

OFF THE WAGON

A longing for companionship rather than longing for alcohol sends many alcoholics back to bars and renewed drinking, French researchers theorize.

In their view, many people are simply afraid of being alone, particularly in big cities. So alcoholism may be largely a social rather than medical problem, they hold.

"HORMONE" OF HEALING

Tissues around a surgical wound produce a substance—possibly a local hormone—which promotes healing, reports Dr. J. Engelbert Dunphy, University of Oregon medical school.

It is produced soon after a wound is made, and reaches a peak within five days, then the amount gradually declines for 40 days.

FATS, DIET AND HEART

Too much fat in the diet is believed by some experts responsible for setting the stage for heart attacks and strokes.

But the amounts of fats consumed may not be as important as the efficiency with which the body can dispose of fats circulating in the bloodstream, seven different medical studies suggest. This efficiency can vary with individuals, of course. Some of the reports, made to the Anglology Research Foundation, find that an anti - coagulant drug, heparin, helps clean fats from the blood.

Diverse Troupe of Animals Will Take Part in Movie

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The actors are wild at Paramount. They're kept in cages and eat such things as unshelled eggs and rabbits, fur and all. These actors are foreign imports, brought direct from their native stages in Tanganyika.

You'll find the actors in a woodshop - turned - zoo on the movie lot where they have quarters are kept at a constant 78 degrees to please the temperamental group. They number 37.

Four baby elephants, three cheetahs, two leopards; two secretary birds, two crested cranes, two baboons, three horbabs, one hyena, one baboon, one bush baby monkey, two lions, one of them pregnant.

This diverse troupe was flown to Hollywood for the interior scenes of Hatari, which had been shooting on the safimals' native ground. They all managed to get into one airliner, which flew a temperate route via South America and Mexico rather than through chilly Europe.

The Noah who brought this strange ark through safely is Jan Oelofse, a handsome, strapping Afrikaner with apple beard and sideburns that would make Elvis envious.

Jan is a white hunter, but with a difference. He works with Warwick Willis Dober, out of Arusha, Tanganyika, in capturing wild animals for zoos. I talked to him about his work after he disentangled himself from the loving embrace of a baby elephant.

"They're very lovable, very sensitive. They can sense a man's mood immediately. If I took them out in the studio street and started romping with them, they would get out of hand. But if I talked to them quietly and explained what I wanted them to do, they'd be calm and responsive."

Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RIGHTER

Friday, April 14, 1961.

General Tendencies: An attitude of charm and magnetism will now bring you right results whereas if you try to force anything or have a demanding attitude, you can lose the backing and benefits that are already a part of your life. Let the unusual conditions now arising be the pulse beat that you follow by playing by caution.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) Avoid irate members of family early and get out into the world of action and profit. Be magnetic and charming so that you bring your finest talents to the fore. Evening is then fine for sociability and having a grand time.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) Keep busily occupied with confidential work that has to be done in order to put those new ventures over successfully. However, take care while out driving and avoid any arguments that seem imminent with fellow workers or associates.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) Take care not to invest more than you can comfortably afford. Then wise individuals will be in the mood to back you to the hilt if they see you are practical and economical. Don't be spellbound about coping favors. Expand

Moon Children (June 22 to July 23) But aside that temptation to run away from your duties today and dig in early instead so that you please higher-ups and will be in line for a promotion, or further backing. Increase efficiency by serious application and be happy, too.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) If you forget that private worry and quickly get into whatever work is at hand or expand along the new channels that now are opening up to you, you can make this a most productive and happy day and the future will be very promising.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 23) You find that several of your pals are upset today and would waste your time with their problems. Be kind, but firm, and carry through with own duties religiously. P.M. Steer clear of trying social affairs. Find happiness with loved one.

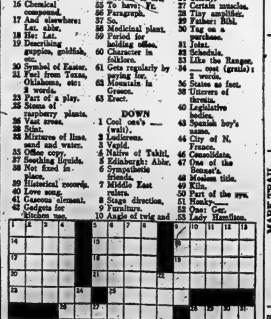
Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23) The right day to come to meeting of minds. Associates and also have better conditions existing with competition. Avoid that executive who is upset, however, or you may be victim of undeserved ire.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Any early-brilliant ideas for expansion, newcomers should be studiously avoided today. Be busily occupied in finishing any work commenced and give an ear to the advice of co-workers. P.M. Take health treatments. Fix wardrobe.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) An ideal day for enjoying yourself at favorite sports, so be sure you get your vital work done quickly so that you have ample time for same. This will help you avoid any possible unexpected mix-ups or unwise plans for others.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Be sure you handle important matters at home and steer clear of that somewhat weak partner who is upset and wants someone to play him, or her. If you must go out, be sure you pick up little gifts for loved ones. P.M. Be happy.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) A good opportunity is yours now to gather the information you need by taking a little trip. Or it may be to establish better relations with others. However, avoid hard work which will only disturb you and you make little progress.



Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) Be alert to new opportunities that will help you to have a greater abundance in the early future. However, get advice from authorities first for best results. Forget pleasure for the time being — look to increasing income.

If your child is born today . . there will be a tremendous urge for pioneering in the chart and the greatest success can come from following such natural inclinations. However, quite paradoxically, the homebody is also in this chart, but strong it is only during the early years, be sure that the fullest courses of study are planned at this time so that the maximum of success can be achieved later in life.

Capt. Harvey Ambeau brought the C.S.L. Cement Carrier "Glenelg" to Picton over the weekend to open the navigation season in the port of Quinte but it did not receive an official welcome until the arrival of Mayor Hall. In the meantime, he had made a trip to Rochester, N.Y. with a load of bulk cement.

clue to its location was that it was to be launched over the weekend to open the navigation season in the port of Quinte but it did not receive an official welcome until the arrival of Mayor Hall. In the meantime, he had made a trip to Rochester, N.Y. with a load of bulk cement.

masters over the presence and area of landing the velocity of the cosmic ship appears to have been low enough in order to catapult, or to separate, the passenger from the cosmic ship and to lower it with the aid of a parachute."

The speed-busting used to describe the number of kilometres was "mekiloho," which is somewhat similar to the English word "several" but generally means anything under 10.

Before the Russians have said of Gagarin's flight that he was in the air for one hour and 48 minutes and spent one hour and 30.1 minutes in outer space, the latter in the air or outer space ship to circle the globe. It travelled at a speed of about 17,000 miles an hour, six times as fast as man ever flew before.

FELT WELL

Gagarin was quoted as saying "I felt very well, very unconstrainedly in flight. The ship was to be a home where I felt calm and worked."

"And what is the sky like up there, in space" he was asked.

"Dark, comrades, very dark," he replied.

"And the earth"

The Russian pilot, described as stocky and less than average height, said everything went perfectly during the 108-minute spin around the globe.

At one point he radioed "I see land ahead with bays."

When he landed he told Pravda that the flight was only the beginning of many cosmic flights.

FLY TO MOON

"The time is not far off, I think, when we shall be able to fly to the moon, to Mars and to other regions of the boundless cosmic space," he said. "And this will happen sooner, perhaps, than we believe."

The Russians said that Gagarin had made a number of records: (1) For the altitude of flight in outer space; (2) For the duration of flight in outer space; (3) And for payload for a manned spacecraft.

Soviet officials Wednesday forwarded the three record claims to the International Aeronautics Federation for Verification. The previous speed record is 2,000 miles an hour, set by one of the U.S. X-15 rocket plane.

The picture of the cosmonaut put out by the Soviet press agencies is that of a pleasant-faced person with a small smile.

SON OF PEASANT

His broad forehead, bushy eyebrows and snub nose stamp him as a true child in the heart of central Russia where he was born on a collective farm, the son of peasant farmers.

His countrymen see him as the perfect example of "the new Soviet man" and the model for young Russians to emulate in work and study. Within a few hours after his flight, they referred to him affectionately as Gaga, in Russian, his name means Wild Duck.

Newly-born babies were being named after him. At least one town, Molotovsk, changed the name of its main street to Gagarin.

Khrushchev didn't pass up a chance to gloat a bit when he told the Soviet Air Force jet pilot:

"You and I, all the people, will solemnly celebrate this great feat in the conquering of space. Let the whole world see what our country is capable of, what our great people and our Soviet science can do."

To which Gagarin replied:

"Now let the other countries try to catch us."

Gagarin started on the flight from an undisclosed launching site at 9:07 a.m. Moscow time Wednesday (1:07 a.m. EST).

Fifteen minutes after he was shot into space he reported back to Soviet tracking stations by radio that he was over South America and was feeling well.

Fifty-three minutes later his report, Gagarin said he was over Africa, and that he could see the earth clearly through the portside to his capsule.

Two recordings of his voice broadcast by Moscow Radio later gave few details of the historic voyage.

"I am observing the earth," the recording said. "Visibility is good. I feel you perfectly."

"The flight is continuing well. I can observe the earth. Visibility is good—one can see everything. Some areas are covered with piles of clouds."

After a pause, he resumed:

"Flight continues. Everything is normal. Everything is working perfectly. I am going farther. I feel fine. I am in a cheerful mood. I am continuing my flight. Everything is going fine. The machine is working normally."

Earlier reports of his broadcasts back to earth, which were not carried by Moscow Radio, quoted Gagarin as saying while he was over Africa:

"The flight is progressing normally. I am watching the beauty of the globe of weightlessness."

Moments after he reported sighting Africa, he pressed for bringing him back to earth previously began.

At a command from the ground, the rocket's retro-engine—also used for slowing down flight—were switched on.

The space man then began a half-hour descent from orbit to a predetermined landing area, possibly the desert region north of the Caspian Sea.

What Gagarin's fate will be after he is greeted by Khrushchev and other Soviet leaders in their modest two-roomed apartment—the Russians have not disclosed—for Gagarin's return.

DESERONTO

Tax Rate Up 13.70 Mills Over Last Year

DESERONTO — At the meeting of council on Tuesday night the budget for 1961 was struck. Mayor Sweetman and Reeve Metcalfe were absent but all other members of council were present with acting Mayor Lott in the chair.

The mill rate set for farm and residential is 118.8 and for Industrial and Commercial properties is 126.17. This constitutes an increase of 13.70 mills over last year.

In presenting the budget Councillor Alford pointed out that the increase in the school rate is 10.47 mills and the increase in the county rate is 10.63 mills while the general rate is down 7.35 mills on residential property and 7.43 mills on commercial property. The only increase in the levy controlled by council is 03 mills for the library. Speaking in dollar terms the total increase for the town amount to $119,391. Of this the cost of education takes $55,487, the county takes almost $30,000 and the council can spend as they what some $34,000. From this $34,000 comes the cost of administration, maintaining roads, police and fire protection, welfare and the maintenance of the library and public buildings. It would almost seem that the task of the council is a difficult and thankless one.

Among other business settled at the meeting council accepted the tender of Hec. H. J. McFarland Co. to resurface some two miles of town streets at a cost of $2,675. This is the beginning of a program to resurface all the streets of the town on a scheduled program. Each year as much as can be afforded will be resurfaced and it is hoped that all streets will be completed within five years.

TERMINATES LEASE

J. L. Therrien notified council that he was terminating the lease of the town apartment as he has purchased a home in the town.

The secretary of the Guides and Brownies Association forwarded the council for their co-operation in the past and for the loan of a number of chairs for the Guide rooms on St. George St.

A letter of the Public Utilities Commission regarding a water main on College St. was referred to the Streets Committee with power to act.

In the report of the Publicity and Industrial Committee Councillor Marks asked permission to form a voluntary committee to handle Industrial promotion. After some discussion his motion was lost.

The committee also suggested an award be given for the best kept house and grounds in the town. This award is to be given on a yearly basis and should be an incentive to homeowners to take more pride, in the appearance of their properties. A motion passed to give the Publicity committee authority to set up such an award.

In the report of the streets committee several suggestions for improvement were discussed and finally council moved that the recommendations be referred to the council as committee as a whole.

In dealing with some unfinished business council decided not to grant H. G. Moody permission to construct his garage as that the door would swing out over the street. Council felt that they would be liable in case of an accident. Regarding the request of A. E. Burley to convert his property on Main St. to apartments the clerk is to notify Mr. Burley that as a rezoning is necessary is no by-law controlling building in that area.

Daylight saving was adopted to conform with the times set by neighboring municipalities.

Before council recessed for the evening Acting Mayor Lott advised the members that this would be his last evening as acting mayor. He thanked the council for their co-operation with him during the time he occupied the chair and advised them that it was a pleasure to work with such a congenial group.

Says Eichmann To Sue Germany If Unprotected

Servatius Will Demand Bonn Regime Intervene

JERUSALEM (AP) — Adolf Eichmann's chief defence lawyer said today he would demand that the West German government "protect" the former Gestapo colonel from the judgment of Israel's courts.

Again challenging Israel's right to judge Eichmann on charges of having a major part in the mass murder of Jews under Hitler, defence counsel Robert Servatius said:

"Eichmann has a claim against the German state to protection. If the state remains impassive, he can sue the state and he will do that."

Servatius, under the special Israeli court trying Eichmann for crimes against humanity, made the statement as he resolutely contended that Eichmann should be tried by a German court and denied that Eichmann came freely to Israel to stand trial.

But immediately after the court session, the West German government's observer at the trial, Dr. Hans Sternberg, said West Germany will stick to its refusal to ask for Eichmann's extradition and will fight in the courts any suit in which he claims legal protection from the Bonn government.

DEFENCE ARGUMENTS

Servatius' pronouncement came after he and Israeli Attorney-General Gideon Hausner made their concluding arguments on the right of the Israeli court to try Eichmann with the prosecutor refuting the defence challenge.

The fifth session of the trial lasted only an hour and 45 minutes until adjournment over Monday.

Supreme Justice Moshe Landau, presiding over the special court of three Israeli judges, announced that he would decide whether it is competent to try Eichmann—would be delivered Monday.

Eichmann, wartime chief of the Gestapo section dealing with Nazi Gestapo, is charged with responsibility for the death of 6,000,000 Jews and with war crimes.

After long hours of discussion on disputed points in international law, Servatius' arguments evidently exploded into high drama when Servatious rose to reply to Hausner.

"The accused has a claim for protection and the intervention from his country," Servatius said.

JUDGE INTERJECTS

Justice Landau broke in to ask, "is he a German citizen?"

"Yes," Servatius answered.

"Not an Austrian?" the presiding magistrate asked.

"No," ervatius answered. "His (other gave up his Austrian citizenship."

Servatius demanded that the two employees of the Argentine consulate, who be brought to court to testify about the circumstances that led to Eichmann's removal from Argentina to Israel.

Premier David Ben-Gurion, chairman, chief of operations, and Zvi Tohar, who allegedly piloted the plane in which Eichmann was flown to Israel.

Minor Sports Association Had Successful Seasons

The Belleville Minor Sports Association elected its slate of officers for the 1961-62 season last night when some 14 persons turned out for the organization's annual meeting.

Following the nominating committee's recommendations to a mah, the Association re-elected Bob Blair to the presidency, Jack Hall to the vice-president's job and Lee Digby to the treasurer's office.

The only change among the executive during the election of Fred Jones as secretary, replacing Lloyd "Ked" Doran. Doran remains on the executive according to constitutional procedure, however, since he is the Belleville recreational director.

The past president is Harold Mott.

Representatives of the older different participating minor sports bodies named to the executive were: hockey, Bill Brennan; soccer, Don Wilson; baseball, Ron Hodge; softball, Allan Sills; track and field, left to the incoming executive to appoint a member.

All the above were choices of the nominating committee and also met with the approval of the sports organizations they represented. There were returning to their offices with the exception of Wilson, who replaced Norm Carter as the soccer representative. Jack Hall succeeds Jack Hall as the baseball representative last season.

Sill Council members were also named to the executive body. They were Dalton Kaye, Norm Carter, Ken Hutchinson, O. "Bollie" Lloyd, Charlie Powell and Jack Greenlaw.

The new executive thanked all for the co-operation received and set forth their expressed desire for an even bigger and better year than ever.

Reports were distributed to those in attendance from each of the sports organizations and these were checked, opened to discussion and adopted.

Bob Blair's report on equipment showed that the supply was adequate for the year but Blair said that in the overall picture, "equipment is in very good shape".

Secretary Doreen's report showed that the Belleville Minor Sports Association has 1,200 registered to the different sports with 90 odd volunteer coaches and executives members, not to mention them. In all groups, numbers have increased from the preceding year.

His report also included the following statement:

"It was our feeling that our biggest problem is the attitude of the parents towards the coaches, referees, umpires, and the association executive members. On too many occasions we have seen or heard of men and women abusing the participants. Also the language by some of the participants at hockey and baseball games was atrocious. This could also be said of some of the coaches. It is our opinion, as of now, these should be taken to curb this with severe punishment (suspension) for all violators".

Other highlights of the past season included the announcement that: A uniform crest was instituted by the Belleville Minor Sports Association for each different sport; a new and better equipment room for minor hockey was used at the arena; the first annual dance was held; two new ball diamonds were installed at the fair grounds and one at Zwicks Island; a new soccer field was established at the fairgrounds; kept have been taken by softballs Allen Sills to introduce girls leagues in this sport; team winners were presented with medals and trophies at their final game (hockey) for the first time this year and it proved most successful.

The softball and baseball reports were delegated written question which some recommendations were made in other sports.

Norm Carter, soccer representative in charge of the first annual dance which was held earlier this month, reported that the profit from the dance was $30. It was stated that better organization, with more publicity would mean any proceeds would go directly into the MSA and would result in a more successful dance next season.

Following Bill Brennan's hockey report, it was pointed out by Mr. Doran that for the first time, the Belleville Recreation Commission budgeted for arena rental for minor hockey since January 1. The time was always donated before but since it is now paying its own way, minor hockey will attempt to receive more ice time during the coming season.

Mayor A. McLean Haig, has graciously agreed to open the proceedings which start sharp at 9.15 a.m. and will end at 7.30 p.m.

Trenton Legion Notes

Easter, a time for parades, Sunday walks to display new hats and clothes, a time for cheerfulness and charity.

Forty-four years ago, April 9, was Easter Sunday and a memorable parade was held on that day. Five divisions of Canadian troops were on their way to Vimy Ridge to do their country and themselves proud. At 5 a.m. and when the hour struck, the Battle of Vimy Ridge was on, with one big question weighing on the Commanding General's mind, "Could the Canadian troops embed on their own for the first time in history, be relied upon to accomplish this tremendous task?"

Five hours later "Objective Obtained" was flashed from all command posts on the battle line and the Battle of Vimy Ridge was a part of history. On that glorious day, these brave Canadian soldiers made the name "Canada" something to be proud of.

Forty-four years is a long time to keep alive the commemoration of a historic event, but such was the impact of Vimy Ridge on Canadian history that the old vets have gathered annually to commemorate and reminisce about the day. Age will not, and indeed never die — they do die for as this account is written a story of the Legionnaire shows that 104 vets from World War 1 died this month.

This means that in the next 15 years well over 1000 of these men will have died and very few of the veterans from Vimy Ridge will be left.

long realized that this is inevitable and have established a combination V.R. (Vimy Ridge) and V.E. (Victory in Europe) annual dinner so that old and young can gather together to keep alive these two historical dates and honor their fallen comrades. The old is look back 40 years with pride to the fact that they were virtually the vanguard of Canadian military history. The younger vets also remember with pride that they too wrote a glorious page in Canada's history with their sacrifices during World War II and Korea in the fine tradition established by their fathers and uncles at Vimy Ridge.

A combination Vimy-V.E. Day dinner will be held in the Legion Hall at Trenton April 19.

SPRING!

Woodsmen or no woodsmen the spring term has officially begun at B.C.I. Many senior students have already started the studying needed for those all important June finals after a one-week break of Easter vacation.

But spring also brings to the collegiate a few delights, one of these being the "Spring Fling" on May 5. Decorations this year are being centred around with France as the theme. The climax of this last formal is the crowning of the Queen of Queen for 1961-62. Invitations to the ball are now available from all class presidents.

ASSEMBLY

Departing from the usual variety entertainment, assembly was devoted to the study of "life-saving" through two short movies: the first, on fire prevention; the second, on artificial respiration by the mouth to mouth breathing. Very interesting and highly informative, both impressed the many viewers the part they may play in averting tragedies which, as shown in the films, occur at any moment.

UNESCEF

From all reports the new UNESCEF Fund instituted by the Students' Council has been very successful. The pennies contributed by the students each Friday are rapidly forming a substantial contribution towards food, medical aid for the underprivileged of the world.

FASHION SHOW

During the first few days of Easter holidays one club, the Girls' Hi-Y, was a flurry of activity, as the girls diligently prepared for their second annual fashion show—the "Cobra

A Consistent Report

Nobody but an expert is qualified to comment in detail on the first volume of the three-volume report of the MacPherson royal commission on transportation — and this only after exhaustive study of the full text of the report rather than a hasty perusal of a reporter's synopsis of its findings and recommendations.

Nevertheless, he who runs may read in the report a clear outline of certain basic principles, which the commission proposes should govern Canada's future public transportation policy.

Firstly, and realistically, the commission wants this policy to reflect a recognition of the changed circumstances since those days when the thin bands of steel rails were the only links between the far-flung sections of the country. In other words, it contends that the railways no longer hold a monopoly on the means of moving goods and, therefore, that rates should be released from many of the governmental controls necessary in an earlier day and set free to make their own rates and conditions, much after the manner of any other business.

Secondly, and consistently, the commission proposes that where the railways are not granted this freedom, the country as a whole should share the cost of the special conditions imposed on this form of transportation, through the payment of subsidies out of the public purse. Moreover, it wants it recognized that these subsidies are not really assistance out of taxes to the railways, but rather are aid to "particular shippers and particular regions."

The subsidy bill looks huge—$97,300,000 this year if the report is implemented. This figure amounts to only two months' cost of operations but if this cost were to continue it might very well be considered excessive. The commission, though, has divided its subsidy proposals into three sections and two of these subsidies would expire as the reasons for which they would be granted was gradually eliminated. The railways would be given the right to eliminate unprofitable passenger services, and the grant for the maintenance of such services would dwindle from $62,000,000 in 1961, to $12,000,000 in 1965, disappearing thereafter. Uneconomical branch lines would be maintained for a longer period, up to 15 years, as communities and industries served by them prepared for their eventual abandonment. Meanwhile the railways would receive up to $13,000,000 annually for this service. The third subsidy would amount to $22,500,000 a year and would not diminish or disappear. It would be to compensate the railways for moving Western Canada's export grain crop at rates unchanged since 1899—the famous Crowsnest Pass rates.

The commission is critical of what it considers "railway resistance to the adoption of a more cost-oriented basis for rate-making" and urges that in future the railways relate their rate increases more directly to the costs of handling shipments. It urges that the Board of Transport Commissioners, which authorizes all general rate increases, should set any increase "in such a way that no shipper is obliged to bear more than his fair share of railway costs." There can be no quarrel with this as an objective. But it is evident this condition must have a corollary—that every shipper be obliged to bear his full share of increased railway costs, except in the three areas where subsidies are proposed—for unprofitable passenger services, uneconomical branch lines and the movement of export grain.

The third of these is a fourth "subsidy" which may be forthcoming. The commission declined to give an opinion as to whether members of parliament, senators and government officials should continue to receive, by law, free transportation—but it did say that if this law is not enforced the Government should pay for the cost.

If the next two volumes are of similar calibre, the Cabinet and Parliament will have before it a blueprint for a national transportation policy which will have at least one jewel in its crown—consistency.

The two future volumes of the report will deal with regional and industrial problems and with special economic research studies.

The first of these two volumes, one would suppose, will give particular attention to the problem of economic expansion in the Maritime provinces.

Perhaps the second may essay a peep into the future and forecast whether passenger trains are, indeed, to become anachronisms, or whether it is not possible that, a few decades hence, our cities will have become so swollen and their streets so plugged with automobiles that commuter trains will be the only feasible method of [illegible] perhaps the best way to move human dwellers out to a surrounding ring of factories.

Strictly Personal

Tis Learned To Immaturity

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

My recent piece on the effect of television had its critics, in which I quoted at length from Bruno Bettelheim's new book, The Informed Heart. I thought an unusually fierce response from readers, to whom I sent copies, were parents of small children who wanted to know where they could learn more about the possible ill effects of TV on young-sters.

There has just been published, by Stanford University, a study called "Television in the Lives of Our Children," which I recommend to anyone seriously interested in the problem.

The average North American child, from one year of three to 18, spends one-sixth of his waking hours watching television — as much time as he spends at school, and more time than he devotes to any other activity except sleep and play. Most of this watching is largely unprovided, and parents are confused and uncertain about what should be done about it. The study finds:

The study (which, unfortunately, is a large, expensive book selling for $6) is neither hysterical nor soothing. It does not "blame" TV for juvenile delinquency or other social behavior on the part of children, but it does admit it as a contributing factor in damaging or stunting the development of every young person who are addicted to it.

Despite the mass-selling figures, the authors quite sensibly point out that if TV were better for adults, it would be better for children too. The real flaw in television is not its low rating for immaturity all the way up the line.

It is hard for us today to imagine television any different," the authors write, "but the patterns which we have developed in this present pattern. Most of the national broadcasting systems of the world have developed in quite different patterns.

"It is possible even now to imagine an American television service which, in the place of conveying an important section of the country's life to itself in a day, would carry the whole session; which would cover national events in depth and at length rather than devote a few minutes a day to a handsome announcer reading news bulletins; which would carry great sporting events not as a matter of regular practice, but merely as 'spectacular' events which, instead of filling every waking hour on three networks and a number of independent stations with whatever can be found to fill the screen, has a running dry the pool of talent — would fill only a few hours a day, and would not claim to do that with fresh programs and offerings of high quality."

What is wrong with TV for children is what is wrong with it for adults.

Welfare Jobs Going Begging

Regina Leader-Post

Thousands of professional and other skilled jobs in social welfare are going begging.

This state exists in Canada where there is something like half a million unemployed.

The situation seems to point up the fact that some imbalance in worker supply exists. And one cause for this is a fault or not of the school, colleges and universities, is a matter for debate.

These difficulties do not exist in the public health field, salaries are favorable and opportunities for promotion are many.

The difficulty there seem to lie in the fact that Canadian universities do not provide course in health education and those who wish to specialize in this branch must qualify at a university in the United States.

But not least is the difficulty of getting this special kind of worker is the need for a feeling of vocation.

SLOW, SINCERE AND SURE

Once in a while we read of someone whose life has been exemplary up to a certain point and then hang suddenly it, for most part moral improvement is slow and arduous, and sometimes it is a painful pilgrimage.

The Creator took millions of years to make the world what it is today. Similarly, man in his way, adapting himself to his environment over millions of years. If we will just stop to remember that the course of nature is always slow — according to our calendar — we shall have more peace of mind.

Watch the little compromising incident which may start you on a downward moral spiral. Endless repetition of the slow plodding required for the development of a better individual.

Signs of Life In Meteorite

Milwaukee Journal

It is an exciting claim which two Purdue university teachers and a professor emeritus have projected — that life has existed elsewhere in the universe, probably exists now and may be older than the earth itself.

Life's claim is made, to be sure, that human beings exist elsewhere. There is no suggestion of men from Mars or other planets. All the researchers contend is that meteorite which fell in France in 1864 they discovered organic chemicals of a type which, we as scientists have been able to prove, are made only by living things.

The findings have gained some support and aroused some doubts. As is fitting, they will be subjected to the challenges and tests of the scientific world.

Perhaps final answers will have to wait until man can send highly instrumented "labs" to the moon, Mars, Venus and the planets and the nearer stars, and bring back samples by space craft. Solving some of the basic riddles of life on other type worlds is a problem of space science.

Many westerners believe that the green splotches on Mars which change color with the seasons are proof of simple plant life — perhaps lichen, or moss. Such simple species could exist on Mars, because the atmosphere there contains about one per cent oxygen found in earth's atmosphere. Temperatures also range from 40 degrees below zero at night to 70 above in summer zone at noon.

However, if even a simple form of earthlike plant life were proved to exist on Mars it would not necessarily be a presumption that higher forms of life exist there or elsewhere in the vast universe.

They Think My Wife Crazy

By Paul Curry, in the Edmonton Journal

The neighbors think my wife is crazy—or at least very peculiar. This was brought to my attention on the other day at the local drug store.

A housewife from our neighborhood stopped me.

"How long has your wife been in Canada?" she asked.

"All her life, years," I replied somewhat taken aback at the question. "She was born in the next province west."

Now, except for subtracting a couple of years from her age as any well-trained husband should, I gave the facts but the question had stirred my interest.

"Why do you ask?"

The neighbor gave me a rather embarrassed look.

"Well," she said, "she walks." She carried on rather awkwardly. I mean, every day I see her outside with your children and she's never just walking! Don't the Europeans go in for that sort of thing?"

I had misread her explanation rather lamely but suddenly she added: "Perhaps she doesn't have a driver's license!"

Obviously, the woman was seeking some reasonable excuse for my wife's behavior.

I could give her no comfort. I had to admit that my wife has her license. The neighbor gave me one last long, anarchy look and departed to her husband waiting in their car.

This report on my wife's activities led me to do a little quiet observing. True enough, she did walk. Regardless of the weather, she walked regularly. Her one sort of exception was required:

"Well," my wife said, "I like it!" Then she up. Good for the children, too. Besides, what's the odd shower?"

Now there she had me. What is so odd about walking? Why, I did it myself! Every day . . . from my parking spot all the way to the office—a matter of half of a block.

Well, anyway, I used to walk. Twenty years ago when I was a youngster I was on my feet enough. On rubbing it for near-exercise I had built my father declaiming against the born-tired laziness of my generation, which couldn't go across the street without mounting a bicycle.

The subject bothered me. A few afternoons later I found myself stalwarking students from one of the composite schools. What was I looking for? Must have been, for we had hardly rolled through the first block when I was asked my opinion.

This set me to musing. Perhaps at this rate, our schools would soon have to give courses in walking. Walking 101 to refresh a dying art.

Lawn Lover Replies To Dog Lover's Plea

Editor,

Ontario Intelligencer.

I think it is high time that those so called dog lovers formed a club with the sole aim of giving them the sole right to put it wildly, get a little annoyed at walking through this filth when we work on our lawn. I am afraid I don't quite fall in the dog lovers category because I get damn well furious, after cleaning the filth from my lawn, to find it covered again the next day.

I wonder if your contributor of April 11th, could possibly come up with one of his fine pamphlets that will clear decently the manure or render the dogs responsible of admiration at other than their own property.

Like this alleged dog lover I am well aware there are not veritable hordes of animals running at large, but it is hard to believe that any one dog in a neighborhood can fertilize so many lawns as well.

As for what to do with stray dogs and if I can't only the stray ones that mess up property, I couldn't care less. Just keep them off my lawn or follow your dog with a broom and shovel.

Lawn Lover,
65 Elizabeth Crescent.

Phone Call From Russia

Chicago Daily News

The telephone in Admiral Edward J. Moore's Chicago home rang and Copeland answered.

"Allo Kees?" the voice said. "How are you? This is Vasily." Vasily Vasily wasn't overly remarkable; He—asked Copeland to send him some books and records. What was unusual was that Vasily, a friend Copeland met last summer in Yalta, was calling from his home in Vladivostok, Siberia.

That's about all there is to the story. Except that it occurs to me that the world over Nikita and he had an impulse to call John. Even diplomatic preparations would take several months and even then be subject to cancellation.

Well if enough Vasilys can perforate the iron curtain and get to know enough Americans, and enough Americans can get to know enough Vasilys, the day of nuclear warfare may arrive earlier than we now dare hope. For the fact is that the people are closer to the Russians and they have much to give us, and both peoples would be the better for the exchange.

Two great peoples, mutually attracted by a common feeling for peace and understanding may finally generate pressures too great for even dictators to withstand.

Neither of Two Types Heart Block Causes Legs to 'Burn'

By Joseph C. Molner, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: How does a heart block act and how can it be alleviated? Does a burning sensation from the knees down result from it? — G. H."

At this time more than 2,000 thousands of times a day, it beats because your body trembles it to the beat. This is true of anything the body does — whether you cough, hiccup, yawn, get hungry, etc. Don't worry about this wonderful signal system. It's as automatic as pulling your hand back when you touch a hot stove. It's so fast that you can't possibly influence it voluntarily.

The findings have gained some support and aroused some doubts. As is fitting, they will be subjected to the challenges and tests of the scientific world.

Perhaps final answers will have to wait until man can send highly instrumented "labs" to the moon, Mars, Venus and the planets and the nearer stars, and bring back samples by space craft. Solving some of the basic riddles of life on other type worlds is a problem of space science.

Many westerners believe that the green splotches on Mars which change color with the seasons are proof of simple plant life — perhaps lichen, or moss. "Dear Dr. Molner: My three-year-old son has a small cyst on his throat and colds all winter and spring. Is this the time to have his tonsils out? — A. C."

Not as a rule. In fact, the only time they are likely to be recommended for this type of operation is when provided, of course, that it is necessary.

"Dear Dr. Molner: This is the third time I have asked this question. Please answer as I am awful worried. My hair falls out on the lower back part of my head. Can you tell what causes this? And what can I do? — R. Hu"

I've said much more than three times in this column that there isn't any particular one cause for baldness, in fact, a number of heredity and there's nothing to be done. If the loss of hair occurs in an unusual pattern, sometimes it is an incidental matter for you to properly correct itself. And sometimes it's the result of a skin disease. In that case, there is no substitute for going to your doctor, or having him refer you to a skin specialist.

"Dear Dr. Molner: What causes a double chin and what should be done about it? — A. B."

You're kidding me, I suppose. But if your question is serious, weight is the cause. Losing weight may, or may not, help you. Sometimes because the skin and muscles, stretched by the fat, may not spring back into their old position. If it's severe enough to warrant it, and you have the money, plastic surgery can help.

Note to Mrs. C. M.: There is no reason why you should not have your baby marry after having had a hysterectomy. You can't have children — and that is the only difference.

THE PACKSACK

BY GREGORY CLARK

There was a convention of the doctors who is engaged on research in the area of public health, "is here we are heading every effort, scientific, political and economic, to increase the health of the human species for the purpose of making them bigger and stronger, so that they will live longer. Already we have made spectacular advances. What a pity science ought to be doing, with all its might right now, is working on plans for making men smaller, and so die sooner. We've got our whole problem back to front."

What was really worrying us, he went on, was the prospect of finding a whole horde of big strangers taking up room in our streets and breathing the air we breathe.

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

SAVE THAT "PEP"

None of us ever knows when we are to be called upon for our choicest reserves.

If you would know much about things that you think may happen, you will have to study what is already there really great crisis that does happen.

Save that "pep" of yours. Store it — build upon its curve edges — holding the choicest of your vital powers for vital emergencies.

I have in mind a man who has never gotten anywhere. Yet he was well educated, had a fine personality, and some of the necessary mind to make a fine success. But he lacked that "pep" that he burned it up every minute of the day. He's fairly boiled and bubbled with it. The result, after many years, is that he is not much farther along than when-he started. He is past middle life — still expecting some day to be a man.

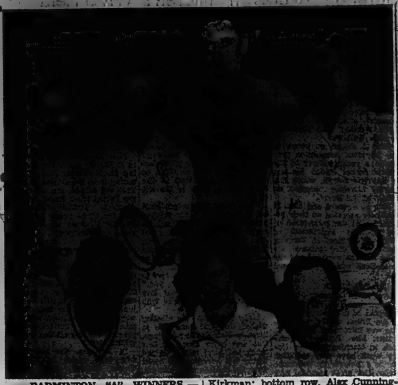
But he never will be. He has scattered too much.

The man who makes the most fun and helps many isn't always the man who gets the most money.

Those who accomplish most are usually those who help others and take time to guide them, and who go ahead with their own work, and get the thing at hand — done.

Save that "pep."

It is the greater heritage for success and happiness than to have this fine, sparkling thing that does so much to give confidence and put fight and determination in you. But it mustn't be wasted thrown away into mid-air, or allowed to leak away to no purpose whatever.



Try to eliminate the unnecessary steps, movements, and efforts that do not immediately contribute to the work at hand.

Save that "pep!"

Garrison Badminton Club Enjoyed Successful Season

The Belleville Garrison Badminton Club rang down the curtain on a highly successful season this week at the armouries.

Declaration of club champions and the election of the 1961-62 executive highlighted the final activities of the club.

Bill Bonnell was named to the presidential chair, succeeding retiring president Ron Walmsley.

Other officers are: Alex Cunningham, vice-president; Lorrie Potts, secretary; Alwyn Geen, treasurer, and directors Noreen Callaghan, Herb Grew and Meryyn Potts.

Club champions emerged from the final tournament held on Wednesday night. The 15-member club is looking forward to another successful season next year with plans for increased membership.

Herb Grew and Bill Bonnell are the 1960-61 men's doubles champions with Betty Walmsley and Jackie Hull taking the women's honors.

Eve Lucy and Phyllis McGaughey won the "B" division women's title with Meryyn Potts and Ron Walmsley declared men's champions.

In the "B" consolation series Joan Cooke and Bev Deverell took the award while Bill Lindsay and Leo Fortin finished tops in the men's "B" consolation.

Bill Bonnell and Noreen Callaghan won the mixed "A" honors with Alex Cunningham and Marylin Kirkman taking the consolation.

Mixed "B" winners were Barb Simpson and Dave Strihley with the consolation going to Iris Grew and Alwyn Geen.

According to club officials the season just ended was one of the better in the organization's history. Play was of a high calibre and members gave highly creditable performances in local and out-of-town tournaments.

The club will again be sponsored by the Officers' Mess of the armouries, and facilities will be available next season for an additional fifty or sixty new members.

20 Belleville Students Will Visit Quebec

Twenty Belleville secondary school students will participate this year in the annual student exchange program sponsored by the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews and the Visite Interprovinciales. Mr. Dennis S. Fleck, executive director of the Ontario Region of the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews is visiting secondary schools here to make initial preparations for the exchange. Students must have studied French for a minimum of two years and must be between the ages of 15 and 18. Cost is small, just transportation it about one-half the regular fare plus pocket money. Free room and board is provided by the families of the participating students.

This will be the fifth year for this joint student exchange program, the purpose of which is to encourage interest in bilingualism, to promote better relations between Ontario and Quebec and to enable students of the French and English cultures to meet each other and to become acquainted with one another's way of life.

Why thirsty people say OK for O'Keefe Ale draught!

The main reason people say OK for O'Keefe draught is; it tastes good. That's because hotel and tavern keepers serve it at the best temperature—42 degrees. Mind you, O'Keefe Ale draught tastes terrific anywhere between 40 and 45 degrees, but in warm weather, about 42 is best. After work, or on your next evening out, pull up a chair in your favourite hotel or tavern and say OK for O'Keefe Ale draught.

Librarian Lectures on Children's Books at Bayview H-S Assoc.

Mrs. G. Hutchinson led the devotions with a reading from the Bible and prayer.

The attendance plaque for parents' attendance at the April meeting was presented to Mrs. Whitaker.

Mrs. C. Cooke, on behalf of the Bayview Association presented a silver plaque to the Public School Board for use at Bayview Public School, to Mr. Morley Lovelace accepted on behalf of the Board.

Mrs. J. Rouse and Mrs. S. Whitaker reported on their attendance at the convention of the Ontario Federation of Home and School in Toronto, where the Bayview Assn. was the main sessions attended and the resolutions which were voted on.

MAIN SPEAKER

The main speaker of the evening was Mrs. Rouse, the librarian of the library branch at the Prince of Wales School. She was introduced by Mrs. C. Cooke. Mrs. Rouse's experience in teaching and her library work have ably qualified her as a lecturer on children's books. Her great personal love for books and her experience with boys and girls especially the children gave her lecture a charm and a ring of authority. Everyone thoroughly enjoyed listened to.

Throughout her talk, Mrs. Rouse quoted from books. She had a large collection of books which were on display at the front of the room.

Children like to be read to. This applies not only to children of pre school age, but continues up to entrance into high school. It was mentioned to Mrs. Rouse it was suspected that in her case, she and her husband, Jim Rouse, would continue reading to their children long after they entered high school.

The younger children appreciate the picture books. Of course need to be read to before they learn the ability to do so for themselves. There are, however, many other reasons for reading to children.

"As certain ages, books which the child should be reading are difficult to get started. Children at this stage read a couple of chapters by way of introduction. Then allow the child to finish the story on his own. Keep track of his reading. The child may easily find the book difficult. Again to keep interest, you should read a few chapters.

In this way interest in reading is kept alive and reading becomes a real joy.

There are many books with jackets which do not look inviting. Books for ten year-olds which have attractive jackets on the front, children of ten will not take these books out. And yet they are fine books. One way is for the mother or father to take the book out of the library and read it to the child.

READ-ALOUD BOOKS

"Ten too, there are many books which are meant to be read aloud. "Winnie the Pooh" and "Alice in Wonderland" are meant to be read aloud. So frequently silent reading robs the reader of much of the humor in these books.

"Poetry is another form of literature which was meant to be read aloud. And young children love poetry.

Patio is Popular Spot For Entertaining

The stone paved patio is becoming very popular means of extending the living room out of doors.

Generally speaking, landscape architects favor locating the patio area in the portion of the grounds most secluded from the street and the view of the neighbors.

A technique favored by the architects of ancient Greece and Rome is finding new favor with suburban home owners as they use flagging in their patios to match an interior floor. Particularly where there is an expanse of glass between the patio and the living room, this technique creates an illusion of bringing the out doors in and vice versa — thereby giving a feeling of more abundant living space.

Creating patio flooring in geometric or random patterns no longer requires architectural planning genius. Kits of pre-cut stone flagging are available which number the pieces in addition to providing simple instructions, reports the Building Stone Institute.

Favorite stones for flooring include slate, flag stone, quartzite, blue stone, granite, sandstone, limestone, and marble.

It is a favorite precept with landscape architects that flagging and walks should be of matching or harmonizing tone. For decorative interest, they prefer that the type of stone used for walls should contrast in texture with the patio flooring and walks.

Paneling a Room Is Now Easier for a Home Owner

Panelling a room in wood is a lot easier than it used to be, and there is no room in the house where wood panelling doesn't fit in with most furnishings.

About 35 native tree species produce lumber suitable for panelling. Each contains several variations in color and grain pattern, so you have literally hundreds of different decorative effects to choose from.

Before installing your panelling, make certain it is conditioned adequately for interior use. The wood has been thoroughly dried at the mill, but interim changes in weather may have altered its moisture content. Store the wood in the room you're going to panel for 7-10 days before using it.

If you are panelling a masonry wall, attach 1x2-inch furring strips to the existing surface first. Place them two feet apart and use masonry nails for the fastenings. The strips should run at right angles to the longest dimension of your panelling — that is, horizontally in the case of boards laid vertically, vertically for boards laid horizontally.

If you are covering a plaster wall, first step is to locate the studs underneath. Note where the nailheads are in the base moulding; they are undoubtedly anchored in the studs. If this procedure doesn't work, tap the wall and then drill small holes at those points where you get a "solid" sound. A magnetic "stud finder" is helpful.

With horizontal panelling, each board may be attached directly through the plaster to the studs. Vertical panelling may be attached to horizontal furring strips, which have been nailed previously to the studs at 2-foot intervals. The same procedure applies if you've built a new room partition as part of your project and want to panel it. Here, of course, since the studs are exposed, they don't have to be prelocated.

Wood panelling can be anchored to studs or furring strips with either metal clips or nails. If you buy boards with grooved edges, adjoining pieces will overlap and hide the nails. Use finishing nails when it's necessary to go through from the face of the board. Drive the nails in below the surface with a nail set and then cover the spot with putty or tinted filler.

It is not always possible to install panseling that will fill in the space between floor and ceiling lines exactly. Therefore, you might consider base, moulding that cover the gaps produced and enhance the beauty of the panseling.

Three kinds of natural finishes are possible. One is transparent surface film (varnish) and usually changes the color of the wood only slightly. A second type consists of a stain to color the wood and accentuate or mask grain patterns followed by a clear surface coating. A third type of finish, is semi-transparent and contains a masking pigment. It is usually of the penetrating type.

More Cooling Power in Air Conditioners

A great deal of the news in room air conditioners this year appears to be on the increase, with manufacturers concentrating their efforts on increasing capacity and lowering noise levels. Thus, while the dimensions of most models remain the same as 1960 models they deliver from 500 to 2,000 BTU's per hour more cooling than their predecessors.

In addition, almost every unit contains controls which allow the user a choice of fan speeds and resulting air velocities (the major reason for air conditioning noise). The most significant advance in this area is an infinite fan speed control, similar in concept to the infinite heat - setting on electric ranges, which permits an almost unlimited selection of fan speeds.

Push-button, automatic temperature controls and timing devices; adjustable air directors and easily - cleanable or easily-replaceable filters are some of the conveniences features which distinguish 1961 room air conditioners.

These assure the homeowner of the proper balance of dehumidification, air condition, air filtration and ventilation which combines with the air conditioner's basic cooling function to produce a true feeling of comfort during hot weather.

Some special units are made specifically for casement windows and through-the-wall installation, but the majority of room air conditioners can be installed in almost any type of window by means of the manufacturer's installation kit (supplied with the unit.)

Through-the-wall installations, which leave windows free and position the unit almost flush with walls, can be accomplished in less than a day by qualified air conditioning contractors.

For do-it-yourselfers, easy-mount models which can be installed by the homeowner are particularly appealing. These units incorporate a frame with sliding side panels designed to fit in the window's sash tracks.

Completing the 1961 room air conditioning picture are Heat-Pump units, which both

Canadian Garden Service

For the gardener's convenience most flowers and vegetables arrange themselves into three main planting groups. In the first are the hardy things such as sweet peas, carrots, alyssum, poppy and a host of others. These won't mind a bit of frost, especially while in the early stages of germination and growth and they actually prefer to get started in the cool weather.

Fast as soon as the soil is fit to work it is safe to sow any of the hardy kinds. Indeed in some of the warmer parts of the country some of these could be planted in the fall and the seeds allowed to lie dormant over the winter, though there is not much to be gained by this practice.

Another early bird is grass seed. One cannot sow this too soon, but here again of course the soil must be ready, not muddy and not too dry. A good test is to take a handful of soil, compress it in the fist and then let go. If the soil crumbles, that means it is safe to start digging and planting; but if it compacts into a ball it is still too wet and one will do more harm than good by starting to work it.

Nursery stock, too should be planted early, so that it can get started before the sun gets too hot.

Among the vegetables there are many that are quite hardy, such as peas, carrots, beets in first row or so of potatoes. With vegetables, however, it is most important that we spread out the plantings so that we may have a succession of harvests.

Good vegetables like a lot of other things are at their top flavor and tenderness only for a relatively short time, so instead of sowing the whole packet at once we usually plant some early, some about the average time, and a third lot late. In this way we make sure that from July on, there will be some vegetables coming on to the peak of perfection all the time. A still longer succession can be secured by planting early, medium and late varieties. In the seed catalogue all this information about hardiness, earliness and the cool and heat. While in more temperate areas of the country heat pumps are widely used for complete home heating and cooling, window - size heat pumps should also be considered for enclosed porches and other hard-to-heat areas.

DON'T THROW IT AWAY

Where the garden is of fair size it is an excellent plan to provide some secluded and screened off by vines, shrubbery, lattice work, or a rustic fence or wall, where we can have a compost heap. This with a little care and planning does not have to be messy, in fact it can be kept almost as neat and tidy as any other corner.

For the compost heap itself, all that we need will be a few rough boards stained or better still concrete building blocks or bricks sufficient to make a box-like affair four feet by four and two feet deep or larger. If we are going to compost garbage refuse it is always advisable to provide the box with a screened and hinged top to keep out flies, dogs, cats and so on. Into the compost heap anything that will rot; grass clippings, leaves, weeds, clean garbage like coffee grounds, orange rinds, banana skins, egg shells, etc. Over two or three inch layers of refuse, it is advisable to spread a layer of earth to which we can add a little lime and chemical fertilizers to hasten composting. Every few weeks it is also advisable to soak thoroughly. The top of the heap should be kept roughly level.

GROW YOUR OWN VITAMINS

Most people grow vegetables because they like to eat them and eat them while they are really fresh and crisp. But there are valuable vitamins in them, too. Lettuce, for instance, and especially leaf lettuce which is more exposed to the sun than the other kinds, is high in Vitamin A. Carrots will supply the same vitamin and for a longer period as this vegetable of course will keep as well in storage. For vitamins B and B3 as well as A, kale is highly recommended. It contains about twice as much vitamin A as ordinary cabbage and is easier to grow. For the highly prized vitamin C nothing is better than a fresh tomato.

Home Handymen Can Install Ceilings of Beauty and Quiet

If you are at all handy, you can now put a new ceiling that will substantially reduce noise and, at the same time, give the room a smart, distinctive look.

All it takes is a little time — an average room can be done in a weekend — some acoustical tile and a few accessories.

Acoustical tiles are absorbent materials that soak up noise much as a kitchen sponge soaks up water. They can absorb as much as 85 per cent of the sound striking them.

The range in appearance from smooth surfaces to designs with a "high fashion" look. If color is your desire, it can be fulfilled with one or more plastic tiles of various hues.

Once you have made your choice of tile you can choose your installation method. The Acoustical Materials Association says that the first step should be to ascertain the condition of the present ceiling. Check to see if the ceiling is sound, cement bond. Painted ceilings should be roughened with coarse sandpaper and any wallpaper on the ceilings should be removed.

When you are ready to begin the actual installation, apply acoustic cement to each corner of the tile. Use a putty knife to smell trowel.

Start the installation at the corner of the room and work across. Slide each tile back and forth under light pressure to assure firm bond.

Acoustical tiles can be cemented directly to the ceiling. Each tile should be slid back and forth under light pressure to assure firm bond.

Cement is applied to acoustical tile in preparation for installing ceiling. Cement tiles should be wasted-size and kept back about one inch from edges of tile.

sure the ceiling is clean and dry. This is to insure a good firm cement bond. Painted ceilings should be roughened with coarse sandpaper and any wallpaper on the ceilings should be removed.

Cementing is the easiest and most practical method to use when other ceiling conditions allow. However, if the ceiling is badly cracked, or if the plaster is falling or sagging, you should take the precaution of first nailing up a framework of wood furring strips and then forth under light pressure to attaching the tiles to them.

Many Wiring Systems Now Out-of-Date

Very often homeowners complain about the same "wiring system that they've been using for the past few years, in spite of having added many new electrical appliances to their home.

There's no doubt that electricity through appliances and electrical installation has added much more comfort and convenience to our lives. But a home's wiring system must grow along with electrical use.

For one thing the more appliances and uses for electricity, the more outlets will be needed, in the kitchen as well as in the living room, the bedroom, or for that matter on the patio or in the garden.

The versatility of appliances has created the need for convenience outlets and plenty of them. Such modern devices as "appliance centres" for kitchens where two or five different appliances can be plugged in at the same time are among the more glamorous "convenience" outlets available.

To have plenty of outlets is fine. But remember, there must be enough circuits to supply all these outlets with sufficient current to operate several appliances at one time.

It all starts with the power supplied to your distribution centre through the "Electrical Service Entrance."

Adequate wiring or full horsepower begins with the availability of at least 100 amperes of electrical current at either 120 or 240 volts.

This will mean that up to 24,000 watts of energy may be utilized at one time.

If you add up the watts of the washing machine, dryer, heater, iron, vacuum cleaner, refrigerator, lamps, radio, television and all the other electrical uses you will begin to understand why adequate home wiring is so important.

And when you count up those wattages, remember that the 24,000 overall wattage for your home must be distributed through all the circuits in the house. And each circuit must carry its own load. That depends, quite simply, on the size of the wire. For example, a "number 12" wire can carry 30 amperes of current whereas a "number 14" wire can carry only 15 amperes (the larger the wire the smaller the number designation). Today, "number 12" wires are recommended throughout the house, enabling 30 amperes fuses to protect the circuits.

If you are concerned about the wiring in your home, call in an electrical contractor to check your entire system.

There's more to heating than meets the eye..
Anyone building a new home or converting
From gravity to forced air heating should ask
Themselves the following questions:

1. Is the furnace large enough?
2. Is the duct work designed aerodynamically or is air flow constricted by sharp turns and too narrow passages?
3. Is the furnace equipped with a fuel saving pre-heater on the cold air side?
4. Does your installation include at least one ceiling constant flow intake to keep hot ceiling air constantly recirculating throughout the home?
5. Are your large rooms equipped with the new modern Skip-Jet twin-air registers (Pat. Pend.) that draw off cold floor air to blend with incoming hot air?
6. Is your humidifier the positive Mist-Air (Pat. Pend.) type or the inefficient water evaporator?
7. Is your air filter the new Clean-O-Matic (Pat. Pend.) that cleans itself or the old fashioned throw-away kind?

FIRST AT NICHOLSON COLLEGE — Above may be seen the first Head Boy and Head Girl of Nicholson College, which is soon to terminate its first year of operation. Maureen Kennedy and Kenneth Campbell, both 18-year-old grade 13 students, may be seen as they compliment the two Identification Pins which were presented to them in honor of the occasion.

Head Boy and Head Girl Chosen By Nicholson Catholic College

The staff and students of Nicholson Catholic College recently chose two grade 13 students as their head boy and head girl.

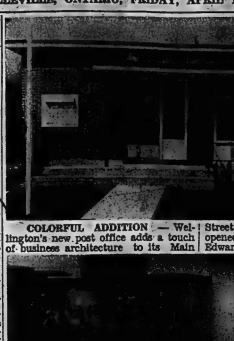
Head boy of the new school, Maureen Kennedy, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Kennedy of 105 Hastings Drive, and Kenneth Campbell, 18, son of Pte. Sgt. and Mrs. Kenneth Campbell of RCAF Station Trenton, were the students so honored.

Maureen has been active in inter-form basketball and the Sodality Club whilst Kenneth has played both junior and senior football, was a member of the student council for two years and a member of the radio club for one year.

Both Maureen and head girl were chosen on the basis of their scholastic record, personality, school spirit and general attitude. They were presented with engraved identification bracelets at a recent Communion Breakfast.

Royal York Workers Vote To Walk Out

TORONTO (CP) — Employees of the Royal York Hotel have voted overwhelmingly in favor of strike action in a wage and contract dispute, their union announced Thursday.



A special meeting of the executive of Local 280, Hotel and Club Employees Union (CLC), has been called to set a strike deadline, expected to be within a week to 10 days.

Cecelia Kaye, secretary and business agent of the local, said 93 per cent of 1,000 hotel employees who cast ballots favored a walkout. The union bargains for 1,200 of the hotel's employees—all but the supervisory and accounting staff.

The Royal York, owned by the Canadian Pacific Railway, is the largest hotel in the British Commonwealth.

The hotel's last offer was for a wage increase of 7½ cents an hour. The union, which originally called for a 15-cent hourly increase, rejected the offer as unacceptable. A conciliation board recommended—only a resumption of negotiation.

The existing agreement expired Aug. 15, 1960.

None of Big Four Playoff Or Regular Games Will Be Shown by CBC This Year

OTTAWA (CP)—Some of the haze surrounding the question of Big Four football television rights was cleared away Thursday in a public hearing of the Board of Broadcast Governors. The present picture:

None of the Big Four playoff or regular league games — including inter-locking games played in the East against Western Conference teams — will be shown this year on CBC stations or private stations affiliated with its network.

The Toronto station applied to the BBG Tuesday for permission to set up a temporary network to broadcast the games over a microwave chain including its own station, CFTO-TV Ottawa, CFCF-TV Montreal and French-language station CFTM-Montreal. All are called the "second" stations, independent of CBC network.

In the event that the BBG approves another application by Toronto broadcaster Spencer Caldwell to form a permanent network, he would use his facilities to distribute the Big Four telecasts—although CFTO - TV would continue to distribute the Big Four telecasts — although CFTO - TV would continue to own the television rights.

But in other discussions, the broadcasters hinted that the only private network in operation by mid-September hit a snag when he refused to give CBC-TV assurances a firm commitment on programming hours.

Mr. Caldwell's network would include the three eastern cities plus Halifax, Winnipeg, Calgary Edmonton and Vancouver. However, it is likely that only Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal would get simultaneous broadcasts of the games because Mr. Caldwell's initial microwave facilities would be completed only to those points.

CFTO-TV bid $325,000 a year for a two-year contract for the Big Four games. The CBC, which paid $250,000 last season, has turned down this offer and its $350,000 bid.

With the Big Four rights CFTO-TV also received the right of first refusal for television—on the Eastern Canada TV rights to the Grey Cup game. However, it was said that because of the national interest in the classic, the CBC should carry it nationally.

J. Alphonse Ouimet, CBC president, said in Montreal that CBC has bid for the rights to the East-West game. Dean Mahon, chairman of CFTO - TV, said "we have no intention of trying to interfere in any way at all with CBC television of the Grey Cup game."

Mr. Bassett and Dr. Andrew Stewart, BBG chairman, that CFTO-TV has reserved two hours for the Big Four games on the proposed three-city private network but that CFTO-TV has not recovered its costs in the deal.

Mr. Ouimet said CFTO - TV and the Big Four rights will run out having spent $1 million that microwave facilities would be available for the three-city network without assurance that the BBG would approve the set-up, and knowing the CBC's stated against allowing CBC affiliates to carry the games outside the private network area.

Mr. Ouimet said CFTO - TV had been "trying to force the CBC to make its facilities available to it so it can compete with the corporation. He also charged that the Toronto station was trying to create a climate of public opinion in which the BBG would have to approve the temporary network.

He added that he didn't know who would be the eventual winner. "But the public, of course, is the loser."

Mr. Bassett noted that he had offered the CBC the "free" use of the Big Four telecasts on CBC or CBC-affiliated stations outside the proposed three-city network. He regretted that people in those areas wouldn't be able to see the games because the CBC wouldn't let the stations there carry them.

Mr. Ouimet countered that the offer wasn't free. It took no account of CBC line charges in distributing the telecasts, or the costs of programming on the CBC stations—two such in Montreal and Ottawa, one in Toronto—that would not have the game.

As CBC-- president he added that the corporation is convinced that if its networks are "broken up" in this way, they would start to disintegrate and eventually be destroyed.

Mr. Ouimet noted that the CBC offered to buy the rights after they had been purchased by CFTO-TV. When it got no reply, the CBC proceeded to arrange for "special pickups" on television during football games in the new and old broadcasting arrangements, with no possibility of showing the Big Four games live.

Mr. Bassett said the offer "was something left" from the $370,000 CFTO-TV paid for the rights. Even if it had been a "generous gesture" by the CBC, he told the governors, CFTO - TV would not have sold the rights.

In discussion of Mr. Caldwell's proposed network, Dr. Stewart hinted that a formulation may be withheld unless a minimum commitment of 10 hours a week of network programs is provided at the outset of operation.

Two Toronto Breweries Shut Down by Strike

TORONTO (CP) — Plants of Carling Breweries Limited and Ontario Brewing Company Limited were shut down Thursday by a strike of employees of the breweries' staffing of Carling's new plant in suburban Etobicoke.

The walkout by 400 members of Local 304, Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Soft Drink and Distillery Workers International Union (CLC), brought to a head discontent over consolidation of the operations of subsidiaries of Canadian Breweries Limited.

Streamlining of operations led to the consolidation at Etobicoke O'Keefe plants, shutdown of the Carling's plant in Hamilton and the Kingston and Niagara Falls plant, and closing of the company's Ontario operations in Windsor, Dow-Kingsbeer Brewery Limited shut its Kitchener plant.

A statement by Carling's said Thursday the walkout was in support of a protest by the local against the company's decision to give preference to Etobicoke plant to Windsor employees when O'Keefe employees displaced in the Toronto consolidation.

But Peter O'Dowd, representative of the local, said the dispute was not over layoffs. The Toronto local had no objection to staffing the Carling plant with the Windsor employees, he said.

He said the issue is over the insistence by Carling's to select without regard to seniority 45 Windsor employees from a pool of 75 persons displaced by the O'Keefe consolidation.

Milestone In Colorful History

New Post Office Opened At Wellington

WELLINGTON (Special) — A few years after the Duke of Wellington wrote history at Waterloo, the ambassador of Napoleon was honored by a small Canadian lake-bordered community.

At that time, this village a scarcely-settled log habitation was called "Smokeville" after its founder "Smoke" Reynolds and his Indians had fashioned the settlement out of the living timber.

That was in the late 1,700's. In the early 1,800's the white pioneers came here and settled. "Smokeville" grew and prospered.

Men who carried the honored name of McPaul, Garrett, Rorabeck, Clarke and Cory among many others aided Reynolds in the settlement of the area.

Benjamin J. Cory a doctor came here in 1826 to practise medicine. He boarded at the home of William Garratt. He became friends with Archie McPaul, who lived on the township line. Mr. McPaul had arrived in the district in 1815.

In 1827 Mr. McPaul purchased the small homestead of a man named Hawkes and "moved to the front". McPaul prospered. "Smokeville" expanded and became the second largest community in the district.

It had earned, its pioneers believed, the right to its own post office. The matter was discussed and claims made through Mr. J. S. Herman, postmaster at Picton.

CONFERENCE HELD

In the summer of 1833, Mr. Herman accompanied by Mr. E. Stainer, the Postmaster-General, drove to Smokeville where they met Dr. Cory, his father-in-law James Young of the Carrying House and Mr. McPaul in the latter's store.

It did not take long to convince Mr. Stainer of the necessity of a post office for Smokeville. Then came the question of a different name.

Here the records differ. Dr. Cory stated in a letter written long afterward that Mr. Young suggested the name "Wellington". He wrote "Mr. Stainer considered the matter for a while then consented to the name being changed to Wellington since there was no other like it in the country."

Another record says Mr. McPaul an ardent admirer of the Duke of Wellington, suggested the village be named after the famous soldier, with consent being given

In any event the great British military figure had the honor of having a Canadian community named after him—but probably died without being aware of it.

Records differ too in the dates of the establishment of the post office. One set claims the first office went into effect in 1815, another, that of Dr. Cory, states it happened in the year 1826.

But post offices and postmasters have come and gone over a period of almost a century and a half. Many changes have occurred since that historic meeting in the McPaul store.

Yesterday almost opposite the "Manor House" the original home of "Smoke" Reynolds built by his Indians in 1792, a proud new Post Office was opened.

NEW BUILDING

The handsome building is of red brick and modern in all its postal facilities. There are rows of aluminum boxes, and a loading and unloading platform for mail-carrying trucks. The building constructed since the turn of the year, is large, with plenty of room for postal operations.

The site of the new office is west of the "Town Hall" on Main Street, and is the first permanent location since Archie McPaul the first postmaster, conveyed a corner of his store to postal use.

The passing years saw locations change and many old and familiar figures come and go.

Mr. McFaul acted as postmaster until 1857 when he was succeeded by David E. Young who held the office until 1861. John D. Sillick took office and was succeeded in 1863 by Donald Campbell who served for the next 30 years.

In 1893, S. S. Flagler served briefly. For four months and was followed by David Clinton who held office until 1901. He was succeeded by F. C. Spencer who acted until 1912 when the late George Pettingill was appointed.

Mr. Pettingill built the post office, which remained in use until the present new structure was completed, on the corner of Main and Wharf Streets.

MANY SERVED

Many well-known Wellington personalities served in this office, one of them the late Miss Margaret Hotchinson who was postal assistant for 18 years. There was the familiar mail-courier David (Dubby) Chatterson and his supply D. I. Lyons.

A popular resident and well-known war veteran Ira L. Bang was appointed post master in 1928 and served until 1956. He was assisted by Mrs. Burg and Ralph Preston.

On Mr. Burg's retirement in 1956, Arold Thrasher Post, another well-known resident and war veteran was appointed to the office and served until his sudden death in 1959.

Mr. Preston acted as postmaster until he was officially appointed at the close of 1959. He is assisted by Mrs. Rea Thompson, Mrs. Jessie Henard and Mrs. Hazel Harvey.

Canada Will Take Stand On Admission of Red China To UN at Next Assembly

-- Diefenbaker

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker indicated Thursday that Canada will be ready at the next session of the United Nations General Assembly to take a stand on the issue of admitting Communist China to the UN. He gave no indication as to what stand might be.

Reporting to the Commons on his talks earlier this week with British Prime Minister Macmillan, Mr. Diefenbaker said they agreed "it was important to continue to work on this problem in preparation for the next regular session of the General Assembly later this year."

In recent years, Canada has voted at the UN in favor of United States resolutions shelving the issue from session to session.

Opposition Leader Pearson said it would be interesting to know the stand the government will follow in trying to work out a solution to the problem.

CCF Leader Argue said Mr. Diefenbaker was not very informative on the issue. He said he hoped the prime minister's statement meant that Canada could help promote the admission of China because disarmament talks were "less useful without China.

Mr. Diefenbaker said he and Mr. Macmillan emphasized the "imperative need" for greater efforts to make NATO a strong and flexible partnership. What required development was the will and readiness to consult well in advance.

Mr. Pearson said it is a question whether a nuclear partnership would make NATO stronger or have the opposite effect of making it more difficult for the alliance to strengthen its conventional forces, Mr. Argue said it would be a mistake to provide a nuclear weapons to NATO.

Mr. Diefenbaker said he restated to Mr. Macmillan Canada's concern over new trading arrangements Britain might make with Europe. Mr. Macmillan had "left me with a clear impression that (Britain) intends to make every effort to work out a satisfactory means of participating in the economic organization of Europe without detriment to Canadian or Commonwealth interests."

OPEN CONSULATE

TORONTO (CP) — Israel's first consulate in Toronto was opened Thursday night at a reception attended by officials of the provincial and federal governments, the military and the clergy.

Ehud O'Keefe becomes director of the consulate, which will act as Canadian director of the Israel government's investment authority. Modern Israel is open to businessmen on investment possibilities in Israel.

Crash Program in American Space Effort Is Demanded

BY HAROLD MORRISON

Russia's spectacular human journey into space and its implications of scientific superiority over the West have stirred the United States into a state of critical self-examination.

But whether it will be extended into anything more than a brief lament that it was a Russian and not an American who conquered space and will depend on how much support President Kennedy feels he has in the country and Congress for a speed-up in space exploration.

One veteran American observer suggests his countrymen are too interested in self-indulgence to be aroused by threats of soviet technology. Yet at least one plain cry for action is being heard in Congress.

Demanding a crash program in American space effort, Congressman Victor Anfuso, New York Democrat, maintains that in a sense the United States is at war with Russia and the country should be mobilized on a war footing.

The troubles Kennedy already faces in Congress is striving for a number of programs that would increase government spending probably indicates the political temperature should be suddenly demand another huge outlay.

"It is one of the ironies of our time," Kennedy said in January, "that the techniques of a harsh and repressive system should be able to instill discipline and ardor in its servants —while the blessing of liberty have too often stood for privacy."

He also warned at that time, as he took office, that free societies face a crucial test against totalitarianism and he asked whether a nation organized and governed such as ours can endure."

In the wake of the Russian space achievement, American editorial writers generally agree that in the battle for men's minds, Russia has won a great prestige. The New York Times reminds its readers, The Washington Post says that if the U.S. is to regain prestige, "it plainly will have to redouble its efforts to achieve the difficult breakthrough to free position."

Just a year ago, former president Eisenhower brushed off space exploration as having no military significance. How military chiefs now maintain the U.S. no longer can think in terms of air power only must adjust to aero - space power" and that the "total power represented by the growing Soviet aero-space strength" constitutes perhaps the greatest threat for the country's history.

In recalling this, the Baltimore Sun suggests: "A sober, unpanicked understanding of the nature of the threat would help us to gauge its scope and to judge how to counter it."

FIGURET

Wes handed his wife some tiger lilies. Fred was under that hedge in Fred's field," he told her. "And they gave me a dandy teaser.

Jess laughed. "You and your figures. They're not a bit romantic."

"The one with a hedge along its south side. It's exactly ninety-six yards square and there's a gate fifty-four-and-a-half yards up the west side from the hedge." explained Wes. "Seeing the lilies, I picked them on the way in. CFTO-TV has promised to be the east side gate which is sixty yards from the hedge." "What's the teaser all about?" Joan asked.

"Snicker," said Wes. "Figure out the shortest distance gate to gate, with a visit to that hedge on the way."

What would you say?

International League

By MARVEN MOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL (CP) — Smiling an interview, "No club boasts Tommy Richardson starts his rookie year as president of baseball's Class AAA International League with an oversized grin and a full measure of optimism.

His big task is to recoup last season's attendance drop of almost 30 per cent, which lowered the eight - club gate to 1,288,811.

The 51 - year - daddy of all minor leagues' circuits, swings into its 79th season with a single opener Monday, Toronto's pennant-defending Maple Leafs at San Juan, Puerto Rico, one of two new franchise sites. A capacity crowd of 15,000 is expected.

Richardson, former vaudeville performer and car salesman, came up from the Eastern League to take over from Frank (Si) Shaughnessy, at 77 after 24 years as president, found he couldn't get around the way he once did and retired on a $60,000-a - year pension.

Last year's lag in fan interest — a condition that came about when the Maple Leafs ran off with the pennant by 17 games — Richardson feels will be straightened out by a tight race.

"All the weaker clubs have added to their strength, the Montreal Royals have strengthened themselves," he said in an interview last year.

"No club boasts out much more than another."

Richardson wants the league to expand to 10 teams in 1962. He says a number of cities look potentially good for franchises.

But what he wants most, is Montreal back in the fold. Aside from the shuttle that moved the Miami operation to San Juan, the league lost Montreal when it folded up Syracuse. Ward attendance was behind both clubs.

Richardson plans to move the league headquarters back to New York after May. That's when the lease expires at the IL's downtown Montreal office. It's a tiny cubbyhole relocated here in the early 1950s.

The league's new look features five clubs with new managers. Cal Ermer has switched to Richmond from Columbus. Johnny Lipon makes his debut at Toledo. Larry Shepard of Columbus, Gene Verble at Syracuse and Joe Schultz at San Juan.

During the off - season, Toronto severed its affiliation with Cleveland and became an independent setup. Syracuse signed with Minnesota Twins and San Juan hooked-up with St. Louis Cardinals. Richmond operates for Rochester.

The Red Wings found a new affiliate in Baltimore, the Milwaukee Braves shuttled their Montreal operation to Louisville in the American Association.

American League Washed Out

Phillies Stop Dodgers

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

The National League moves into "second season" today with Cincinnati's unbeaten Reds in first place after Philadelphia Phillies managed to take advantage of Los Angeles misfortunes and hand the Dodgers their first loss.

The Phils, scoring four runs in the last two innings, stopped their gallop, salvaged the final game of the three-game set with Los Angeles Thursday night, winning 5-3. Third left the Reds, who beat Chicago Cubs 4-2, alone on top of the league race.

San Francisco Giants picked up their second consecutive win against Pittsburgh Pirates, 6-5 in 12 innings. It was the Giants' first decision in three years over relief ace Elroy Face. Milwaukee Braves went 11 innings before beating St. Louis Cardinals 5-4.

The Cardinals open their home schedule tonight against Cincinnati with Curt Simmons facing Jay Hook of the Reds. Showers are possible and a crowd of 25,000 is expected.

The Reds were last seen their Wrigley Field season in an afternoon game against Milwaukee with 37,000 customers on warm weather expected.

The American League's schedule, restricted to five games, got its big season because of bad weather, counted another complete loss Thursday with rain, snow and cold batting play.

After blasting from behind on two - run homers by Pancho Herrera and Tony Gonzales, the Phillies dropped back again in the seventh when the Dodgers scored three runs for a 5-4 lead. The Phils moved ahead again in their half of the eighth helped by two errors.

The Dodgers tied it 7-7 in the eighth on an unearned run, but the Phils put it away when reliever Clay Dalrymple singled and scored on a two-out error by losing reliever Jim Palmquist in the ninth.

Dutch Snider drove in the first three runs off Phillies starter John Buzhardt with a home run and a double. The bases-empty homer was Duke's 26th, giving him a tie with Ralph Kiner for seventh place on the all - time list. Only Stan Musial of the Cards has hit more (429) among active players.

PITCHER STARTS RALLY

The Giants, who had lost six straight to Pete since May 4, 1958, won it when winning reliever Jim Duffalo doubled in the 12th and Felipe Alou and Harvey Kuenn followed with singles.

Duffalo, a right-handed rookie, was one of the Pirates, had forced in a run in the 11th with a bases-loaded walk, but Bobby Landrith pulled the Giants' squeeze trick with a home run in their half of the inning. Ed Bressoud - switched to a first-baseman off Pirates starter Harvey Haddix and Rocky Nelson homered off Jack Sanford, Giants' starter.

Lindy McDaniel, the Cards' relief ace, forced in the winning run at Milwaukee by walking pinch-hitter Mel Roach with the bases loaded in the 11th. Seth Morehead, late of the Cubs, - pitching all five men he faced after relieving Ron Piche with two men on base and one out in the 10th. Ken Boyer and Joe Cunningham, who drove in three runs, homered for the Cards.

Jerry Lynch's pinch homer came off reliever Jim Brewer in the eighth inning after loser Joe Schaffern o-th had walked two. Gordy Coleman scored the other two Cincinnati runs with a homer that tied the game in the fourth. Bob Purkey won, going all the way with an eight-hitter and striking out seven men.

The Tracks

FORT ERIE (CP)—Mensatic, the Oaks winner of 1960, returned to the races at Fort Erie Thursday and ran courageously in her season's debut as she defeated four rivals in the featured Jordan Purse.

The four-yearold filly, owned by Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Taylor, paid $830, $3.70 and $3.20 and combined with Janet Yates for a quinella of $29.40. She ran the five furlongs in 1.02 4-5, over a muddy track.

Wildshore, owned by the Seagram stable of Waterloo, won the second race. She combined with Bells Ringing, winner of the first, for a daily-double of $32.

Wildshore, a four-year - old filly, scampered into an early lead and won by 4½ lengths. Wildshore paid $4 straight as she ran five furlongs through the deep mud in 1.05 4-5.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

A veteran waterfront "skipper" told me the other day there are more than three times the number of boats, sail, power, or paddle, forming the summer-time population of the Bay of Quinte today than in 1931.

Visit the harbor any day in the summer and you'll see craft ranging from graceful white wings to the proud power cruiser down to the humble two-paddle canoe.

Sailing juniors, generally speaking differ. Comfortable older people like the peace and comparable tranquility of a well-appointed cabin cruiser. "Educated" sailors like the thrill of a large yacht, sails bulging before a stiff breeze.

As for me give a small "one-seater" a spanking breeze and the challenge of foam-tipped waves.

Yachting today is undergoing a marked upsurge. Week-end highways crowded on weekends many are turning to the waterways for their fun and relaxation.

But there is more to it than that. It is not a question of stepping into a sailing boat or yacht, seating self, grabbing the tiller and you're away. There is much education needed to operate yachts, boats or craft of any size or design safely so necessary to the proper driving of an automobile.

In fact the small boats of today provide, primarily, a test of skippers and crews, all boats in any one class being in theory at least of equal potential speed. The has contributed to the large growth of the sport. Practically all boats are entirely amateur-minded.

The younger people of the city, with the opportunity directly "beneath their noses" so to speak, have been missing one of the most exhilarating sports in the athletic calendar. Perhaps a few years ago they could lay the blame to the fact there were no competent instructors available, or veteran sailors were mainly interested in their own enjoyment, and not inclined to give instruction.

Five or six years ago the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club came up with an answer. It organized a junior sailing group and gave it all the facilities necessary to the instruction of sailing-minded youngsters. It added social activities and competitions with port-of-town clubs.

This summer marks the sixth successful season of the junior sailing activities, and yacht club officials are anticipating a large turnout of youngsters, both boys and girls who are, or would like to be "yacht-minded".

Nothing has been left undone to ensure the best facilities necessary in the proper instruction of these embryo yachtsmen. During the months of July and August students receive training in the fundamentals of sailing under the supervision of experienced instructors.

Classes for the fine healthy invigorating sport are held five days per week from 10 a.m. to five p.m. Nothing is left to chance. Safety is one of the outstanding features of the sailing courses. Your boy or girl will receive valuable training in water safety and boat handling.

Five boats especially designed for safety and ease of handling form the instructional fleet of the club. There is competitive challenge, too. The students having reached certain stages of competence are permitted to engage in class racing.

The beginner learns how to properly tie knots, the parts of a boat and he also acts as a crew member. A second class student learns how to tie up a boat, rig the sail, rules of the road, artificial respiration, handling a boat and may become a skipper while sailing a course within sight of the Yacht Club. A first class student becomes a skipper [and] proficient at handling sail, learns to read and follow a chart, learns racing rules and many other advanced information.

The students enjoy competitions with other junior sailing clubs as far away as Toronto. Last year Belleville crews entered the junior Olympics in Montreal.

A potential student must be able to swim at least 100 yards and wear a life jacket at all times when aboard. Parents do not need to own a boat or be a member of the yacht club.

The full summer course, as was noted, is of two months duration, but shorter courses will be available on a weekly or monthly basis.

Ivan, Pilous Draw Fines

By W. R. WHEATLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

CHICAGO (CP)—Detroit Red Wings and Chicago Black Hawks meet tonight as the Stanley Cup final nears an end and any club officials making a public outcry against the officiating can start digging deep in their pockets.

Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, Thursday slapped a $300 fine on Chicago General Manager Tommy Ivan and a $200 fine on coach Rudy Pilous.

Technically the offence was "making statements having a prejudicial effect on the league and the game of hockey." More precisely it was for using such terms as "gutless" in describing referee Frank Udvari.

The Chicago officials spoke their bitter criticism in the dressing room after Wednesday's game in Detroit, which the Wings won 3-1 to tie the best-of-seven final 3-3. After tonight's game the teams move back to Detroit for the sixth game Sunday.

In announcing the fines, Campbell said recurrence of such conduct by any parties involved in the series will bring "substantially heavier fines."

DIDN'T DENY STATEMENTS

The criticism of Udvari was made by Ivan and Pilous to newspaper men. Campbell said neither denied the statements "under all the circumstances which clearly authorized their publication."

This is the second time during the playoffs Campbell has stepped in with fines. Coach Toe Blake of Montreal Canadiens was fined the maximum $1,000 for striking referee Dalton McArthur after a Montreal-Chicago semi-final game.

The fine against Ivan is the third against general managers within recent months. Jack Adams, Detroit general manager, was fined $200 for saying, in effect, that Udvari was trying to run Red Wings' Howie Young out of the league.

General Manager - coach Punch Imlach of Toronto Maple Leafs was fined $200 after telling newspaper men the three stars for a Toronto - Montreal game should have been Udvari and the two referees.

Campbell said no action is necessary regarding remarks made by Hawks' Reg Fleming to Udvari when the two met outside the stadium after Wednesday's game.

CONSULTS WITH UDVARI

Campbell talked Thursday with Udvari and standby referee Eddie Powers, who was present when the incident occurred.

"Fleming started to say something to Udvari and was told he had better keep quiet," said Campbell.

"When Fleming asked 'Do you want to make something of it' and started making threatening gestures, Udvari told him: 'Listen, fellow, if you want to stay in this league you'd better go on back with your teammates.' That ended the affair."

Meanwhile, coach Sid Abel brought his Red Wings to Chicago early Thursday night.

The final so far has been a home-ice series, no team winning away from home, and Abel said: "We've got to win one here in Chicago and we might as well take this one, now that we've down to best-of - three series."

WILL USE LUNDE

Abel said he will go with the same lineup that won Wednesday except that Lou Marcon will sit out the game and forward Len Lunde will be in the lineup.

Marcon, farmhand defenseman, was called up from Edmonton in case further injuries overtook Marcel Pronovost or Warren Godfrey.

"We're going to have a rooting section for this game," said Abel. "About 150 fans are coming down from Detroit. There were only a few at the earlier games here."

"And when we play back in Detroit Sunday there will be an extra planeload more at the stadium and dimwits throwing things out on the ice will be hustled off fast.

"At that I understand it will be put out Wednesday."

The game was held up several times while objects were cleared from the ice.

The Hawks will go with their same team tonight. There was no workout Thursday and the players were all reported in good condition.

Babe Will Be Placed In "Museum"

VICTORIA (CP) — A wax figure of Babe Ruth will be dressed in one of the old baseball uniforms when a permanent exhibition opens here April 26.

Museum - official says a few weeks ago, asked the New York Yankees club for particulars so an authentic-looking uniform could be made for the figure.

The ball club didn't answer. And museum officials said a cricket uniform was available and might be used.

So Phil Luderen, who played for Raleigh, N.C., a Yankees farm club in the Piedmont League, in 1936, made a donation of a Ruth uniform he'd used as a hand-me-down.

Luderen, who now lives in Mayodan, N.C., saw the story of the threat to put Ruth in cricket clothes in the Greensboro Record.

Golfers! Old Nine Is Ready

Memo to Bay of Quinte Country Club golfers: spring fashwise is but a few hours away.

The "old nine" of the club course will be available for play tomorrow morning, providing a barrieine or typhoon does not arise this way.

The "new nine" is presentable but will not be ready for play before another week or ten days.

So announced George Balan, the club professional who has been dutifully patrolling the "eighteen" for some time now.

Greens of the old nine are virtually free of snow except in some somewhat wet underfoot, but they are playable.

Some fine weather will work wonders with both nines, says Mr. Balogh.

Golfers may work out the winter kinks on the old nine tomorrow and by the time the most of them are in good golfing shape the second nine will be ready.

The club's opening men's field day is slated for Sunday, May 7, a mixed two-ball affair followed by a dinner.

The ladies' division holds an opening meeting on Wednesday, April 26. There will be a pot-luck dinner and bridge.

Socially the club marks the season opening with a dance on Saturday, May 20.

Hull Defeats Soo 6-3

HULL (CP) — Hull - Ottawa Canadiens whipped Sault Ste. Marie Thunderbirds 6-3 Thursday night to draw first blood in the finals for the Eastern Professional Hockey League championships.

Second game of the best - of - seven series will be played here Sunday followed by two games in Sault Ste. Marie.

Playing only as well as they had to, Canadiens opened up a 2-0 lead in the first period and were ahead 3-1 after 40 minutes.

Thunderbirds drew within a goal of the Habs early in the third period but a penalty killed off their chances, Canadiens scored on a power play and from there coasted to the victory.

In a desperate bid to even things up, Thunderbirds poach Billy Reay pulled his goalie with 64 seconds remaining but the move backfired when Glen Skov fired the puck into the empty net.

THE OTHER SCORERS

Other Hull - Ottawa scorers were Cliff Pennington, Terry Gray, Keith McCreary, Bob Rousseau and Brian Smith.

Sault Ste. Marie marksmen were: Cliff Schmautz and two-goal Mary Kuryluk.

A crowd of 3,575 filtered the ice with rubbers at the final whistle. Aside from a few giant firecrackers that greeted the Hull - Ottawa scoring, the fans were on their best behavior.

Canadiens were helped by two goals they scored while Thunderbirds were shorthanded.

Rousseau's goal, the second for the Habs, came late in the first period with Reino Robazzo in the penalty box. Pennington's goal in the third period, with Sault Ste. Marie pressing for the equalizer, came with Norm Gulmond serving a hooking penalty.

HAD POWER PLAY

Sault Ste. Marie cashed in on one power play late in the third period but by then they trailed by three goals and were out of the running.

Referee John Ashley called nine penalties among them majors to Al MacNeil of Habs, and Robazzo of Soo.

They traded punches behind the Hull-Ottawa net in the first period after a goal - mouth scramble.

Thunderbirds showed the effects of a 10 - day layoff and seemed to be just warming up at the end of the game. They took their semi - final series against Kingston Frontenacs in five games and have been waiting for Habs whose seven-game encounter with Kitchener - Waterloo ended only last Sunday.

Plan to Put TV Satellite In Orbit in Short Time

By CYNTHIA LOWAY

NEW YORK (AP) — Television will not always remain the bobbled giant of international communications it has shown itself to be during the last week of big news stories.

Newspapers and radio, both with fast, electronic means of spanning oceans and mountains, have been able to beat television to the reporting punch on both the Russian's man-in-space shot and the opening of Adolf Eichmann's trial. Television still must rely on planes to carry its film and videotape from the scene of action to a point of broadcast.

It is expected, however, that within two or three years, the same scientific skills that put a man into space will strike the chains from television. The plan calls for putting a television satellite into orbit a special sphere capable of receiving sound and pictures, boosting their strength and bouncing them back to receivers at any point on earth.

Television networks laid careful expansion plans to send by jet plane video tape of the Eichmann trial's opening in New York in time for showing the same day. But the Israeli place on a ban for the material missed connections in London with the New York - bound plane.

Producer Trying His Best To Make Show Success

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Producer Arthur Freed is trying his best to make the 1960 Oscar presentations a success.

Freed has one of show business' most thankless jobs. He must pull together a thousand diverse elements so they come out as a unified show.

For all this he is paid nothing. But, he adds cheerfully, it's ka-Dee.

The awards will be presented Monday with the show on ABC radio and television at 7:30 p.m. PST (10:30 p.m. EST).

Freed, producer of hit musicals (An American in Paris, Gigi, both Oscar winners), outlined his ideas for the telecast: "It's an award show, with just enough entertainment so it won't be stuffy."

Ever since in the past, he added, has been in trying to make the event a TV spectacular, showing scenes and production numbers.

SANKS ON SURPRISE

"It shouldn't be an entertainment-show," Freed said. "The main element should be the surprise of the winners and who exploit that to the fullest. We will place all the nominees together, so we can study their faces as the announcement is made. This year we even have an extra camera so we can follow the big winners to the stage.

"To give the program unity, we'll have only one emcee—Bob Hope."

Freed said: "We will try to make the minor awards more interesting by having them presented by important people. And we'll interperse them with entertainment."

There's another matter: The five nominated songs will be delivered by the Brothers Four, Connie Francis, the Hi - Lo's, Jane Morgan and Sarah Vaughn, none of them particularly associated with films.

"There are no singers in movies today," Freed explained.

SENDS MESSAGE

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker sent a telegram of congratulations Thursday to Premier Khrushchev on Russia's success in putting a man into space.

Honest Joe's Win Major 'A' Bowls Title

"Honest Joe" is no alley-cat but his team rolled their way to the Major "A" League Bowling championship at the Bowl-O-Drome.

Joe's team finished with 149 points, with Tobe's Pizza-Burgers second with 133. Followed Eddie Shillington, Wilkinson Motors, 95; Stewart's Shell, 89; Station Street Marketeria, 86; Moore's Chiefiers 75 and McEvoy's Caterers, 61.

Honest Joe's took other honors too. They won the team high triple with a 3881 and the team high single with a 1379.

Leo LaBelle of Honest Joe's won the high average with a mark of .246 and the high single award with 379. W. Andrews of Stewart's Shell had a single of 378.

The high triple went to J. Begley with a 990.

But Honest Joe's fell by the wayside so to speak, in the league money playoffs.

Williamson Motors took top honors with a five-game aggregate of 5874. Tobe's came second with 5837 and Station Street Marketeria third with 5782.

Bob Bunton was the high five-game with 1497; 304, 302, 325) with Charley Baker second with 1311 (358). LEAFS TREDE WAGNER

BALTIMORE (AP)—General manager Fred Glover of Los Angeles Angels made his fifth trade within 12 days Thursday, sending outfielder Lou Johnson to Toronto in exchange for Leon Wagner. Wagner, also an outfielder, batted .265, hit 16 homers and batted in 46 runs for Rockies of the International League last season. Johnson came to the Angels April 1 from Chicago Cubs in a trade for Jim McAnany.

Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RICHTER
Saturday, April 15, 1961

General Tendencies: An adverse day for putting into motion any new plans. Use this Saturday to advantage by winding up work you may be wrong or delaying. Also, seeing that you have your surroundings in perfect working order. Be sure to keep your purse zipped tonight and if you must spend, do so with the least amount possible. Remember.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) A fine day to look into the matter of refinancing investments and to so organize your affairs so that you have a surplus and can increase share accounts. Study into new outlets, even if it be the health treatments that you need.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) Any money matters improved you now, what it is you truly want in the future. However, don't jump into any radical changes right now. Strive for simple system by eliminating what which is obsolete to streamline your activities.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) You can forget any problems if you delve right into the mountain of little duties that await you after a busy work week. Stay at home in the evening and enjoy television. Avoid that which is dull or overly-stimulating.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 22) Be sure you show your loyalty to a deserving friend today regardless of the fact that you may be bogged down with work and anxieties. P.M. Steer clear of any arguments that might be brewing at any social function you may attend.

Leo (July 23 to Aug. 21) Every opportunity is open to you now to handle affairs of-doors efficiently and without getting vexed because of any nuisance that may be brought to bear upon you. Expect a letter worth while. Someone tries in sort at argument.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 23) You are tempted to leave things duing behind you and avoid responsibilities, but this would be most unfortunate at this time. Concentrate on what you must do instead and use your modern, efficient systems. Make big headway.

Libra (Sept. 24 to Oct. 23) Take care you do not follow that fatally intuitive today or you could lose out on something very valuable, or even lose a great friend, loved one. P.M. Be kind to the closest to your heart.

Scorpio (Oct. 24 to Nov. 22) Important you keep any commitments made to associates religiously or you can get into serious trouble, cause grief. Be sure you go out to dinner and entertaining place, preferably where there is also entertainment.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23 to Dec. 21) Be sure you plan your duties intelligently this Saturday so that you do not overtax your energies again. Labor methodically and take your periods for best results. Take it easy in P.M. Enjoy fine television programs.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) It is impossible to enjoy yourself greatly now if you contact that loyal chump who will not make you spend too much money and whose company you enjoy. Remember that the simple pleasures are best in the long run.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) If you are most kind and affectionate with family ties now, you will get excellent results and the future will be happier, more harmonious. Any chores that need to be done should be handled efficiently and quickly.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) Change your attitude today and treat others with courtesy and respect instead of taking pot-luck out on innocent bystanders. This has been your undoing in the past. Take it easy on the road so that you do not have an accident.

If your child is born today he, or she will be the practical kind of little individual and be a positive genius in matters of business and property in particular. Therefore, anything connected with finances or investigative work is also fine as a profession to follow. But the forte is in real estate, buying, selling, negotiating, etc. Give as good a start in life as you can afford. Send to see the better business school.

RED SQUARE

plump, beaming mother; Anna in a white dress over her body, and Jenna his father Albert, who looked as if he'd stepped from a Chekov play, in a dark blue corduroy suit, a bushy beard and walking with a stick. The father's name also bears.

Speaking to the cheering, excited gathering from Red Square, Gagarin gave his first thanks to the Communist party for giving him the opportunity to carry out the first flight into space.

"As I was about to be launched into space," he added, "I was thinking about the party, the people and my country. It's from these feelings and that inspiration that I drew strength to carry out the task."

Speaking in terms with the pace of an accomplished orator, he paid high tribute to those who had made his flight into space possible.

"Never for a single moment did I have doubt about the mission..."

APPEARS WELL

Gagarin looked wonderful in superb health and showing no ill effects whatsoever from his history-making flight.

"Today, July 12 — the Soviet fliers — will carry out further flights to greater distances," he told his throng. Then he concluded:...

"Long live the Communist party, long live the Soviet people, long live Comrade Khrushchev."

The premier in his response compared Gagarin to Columbus and said the space pioneer's "name will live forever in the history of mankind."

"With this flight we once again have shown to the world what the genius of our country can achieve," he said.

Gagarin broke into a wide smile when Khrushchev said that some people didn't believe the Russians when they announced they'd put a sputnik into space.

"Now," he said, "you can touch the man who's been into it. Here all mankind Gagarin again as a squad of children rushed up the stairs, their arms loaded with flowers.

GIVEN TOP HONOR

Gagarin looked slightly overwhelmed when Khrushchev announced the space man had been made a Hero of the Soviet Union — the nation's highest award — and given the first award of a new decoration, space flyer.

Gagarin smiled, blinked and swallowed hard. He looked near tears as Khrushchev praised "that wonderful Soviet woman — his wife who never tried to persuade him against his flight, but supported him."

"She is a woman of great soul," said the Soviet leader.

Valentina, the wife, blinked behind her glasses and modestly looked on. Beside her stood Gagarin's mother and father.

Returning to his favorite theme, Khrushchev told his people:

"The space flight must not distract the attention of the Soviet people from other targets, and these include catching up to the United States in the standard of living.

"We shall leave other states behind in the economic field."

'NAME IMMORTAL'

"If Columbus' name lives forever because he discovered America, what can we say of this young astronaut? His name will be immortal." There was a thunder of applause from the crowd as he gaily decorated spacia.

DEDICATE SONG

MOSCOW (CP) — Within minutes after Moscow Radio announced that Maj. Yuri Gagarin had landed safely from space following a 108 - minute space flight around the earth, a song dedicated to him was being played on television. Also within minutes, the Young Communist League found time to meet and vote to make his name in the Golden Book.

SAYS EICHMANN

the proceedings. He scribbled furiously, quick, short notes on a pad of paper on the shelf in the prisoner's dock. He looked and listened in his chair. In the courtroom and outside hall — he complied.

VACQUIE REMARKS

Referring to Hausner's argument that Eichmann could not be punished here against Nazis in 1961 a legal question Hausner described as "absurd" had, in fact, not been filed.

The United Nations convention on genocide, he said, had not been drawn up on the basis of international law, but of territorial law.

"At the UN the draft on the regulations for the punishment of war criminals simply remained an idealistic dream."

Servatius asserted Eichmann has a claim for protection and intervention from his country."

The state Supreme Court of Cologne in West Germany after years has rejected a plea by Servatius that the German government has legal protection for Eichmann.

The peace of Hitler came up for the first time when the case of Eichmann resumed today after a two-week recess during which the Israeli nation paid tribute to the six million Jews who died in the Nazi persecution, briefings as to procedure during the Easter recess.

Hausner argued that if the defence case could open before the criminals of the Nazi regime it becomes "a farce" merely carrying their orders, "only one man could be accused — Hitler."

when opposed by several rural members.

Lanchester Speaker

John Diefenbaker, president of the National Liberal Federation, said the annual meeting marked the end of a year of "great progress" in the history of modern politics in Canada.

The annual meeting resumes its session this morning when delegates had added their voices to the party they had an important role to play in the battle where the moral ills of the nation were fought.

The OAA's meeting opened Thursday with an address by Premier Leslie Frost who urged delegates to "put rural problems first. The first order of business was the consideration of 23 policy resolutions, covering a broad field of agriculture to municipal affairs.

Resolutions called for a province-wide Ontario Liberal Land Bank and its president, Thomas Joseph Grey of Toronto. Leaders urged for more public hearings before August 30th of February, 1962.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

The Righteous Suffer Too

By ROY L. SMITH

It is one of the characteristics of the literature of the Old Testament that all the Hebrew teachers and prophets took God for granted. That means that they started from the assumption that God is, and that God does.

In the day of the Hebrew psalmist, for example, the atheist and the agnostic was almost entirely unknown. There may have been occasional individuals here and there who raised questions concerning the popular interpretations of God, but they were so much in the minority that no one gave them more than a passing thought.

Jesus nowhere in the New Testament is ever represented as having addressed Himself to unbelievers. His worst enemies were not those who believed there was no God, but those who believed God was of an entirely different character than that which Jesus represented the Father as being.

God and Suffering

Again and again the ancient teachers of religion found it necessary to explain two facts which seemed to be absolutely contradictory — (1) that God was actuated by motives of love and mercy, and (2) that there were millions of people in the world who were innocent of deliberate wrong doing and who were, at the same time, great sufferers.

If God were a God of love, how could He allow the innocent to suffer? And the problem is still with us.

The Book of Job, in the Old Testament, represents the efforts of a brave and courageous thinker to harmonize the two great ideas. Quite evidently mere goodness does not insulate a man from trouble nor does it save a nation from perdition. What, then, is the solution of the dilemma?

Faith in Maybe

A very great deal of the problem depends upon the point at which we begin our investigation — the assumptions we make as we approach the dilemma.

A popular skeptic, writing about the vainness of the universe, exclaimed, "Astronomically speaking, man is nothing more than an infinitesimal speck. In the midst of glaxies and constellations," whereupon another scientist replied, "Astronomically speaking, man is the astronomer!" One man began with the doughnut and the other with hole.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for April 26: WHEN THE RIGHTEOUS SUFFER." Job 1 and 2; 19:13-26; James 1:12-13.

The majesty of Jesus' thinking appears exactly here. He approached everything from the angle of one who believed in the mercy and the love of an all-wise heavenly Father. If a rational explanation of a situation did not immediately appear He rested back on the assumption that He could trust God to do the most loving thing possible under any circumstances. It is quite probable, of course, that circumstances will take a turn we cannot understand, and that problems will arise for which we have no solution. But if we will hold determinedly to the proposition that God is a God of love, and that He is also infinitely wise, we will ultimately come out with a solution that will stand up against all the hammerings of doubt and fear.

Devil's Theory Upset

There is something a little frightening about the devil's challenge, and God's reply: "Have you considered . . . Job?"

Suppose Job had let God down!

In every community there are those whose lives and fidelity are the moral support for all the public. They are the ones who seem to demonstrate the proposition that "it pays to be good." When one such lets us down, a part of the world collapses. The trusted banker who is discovered to have been playing the ponies, the brilliant preacher who is found to have been having an affair, the football coach who gets drunks on an out of town trip — these are the great destroyers!

But they are the occasionals. It is the dependability of the dependables that lends stability to life. And in every community there is at least one, Job, or perhaps a Job's wife, who could not be moved.

Successful Living

Ashamed of Son's Marriage

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—My son had to get married. The girl stuck to him like glue and made a fool of herself with him. He gave up his career and got a job which he lost right after they got married.

Now they have moved in with me. The boy is a darling but the girl hardly speaks to me. I'm so ashamed about it all that I can hardly speak to my friends. How can I get out of this mess?—UNWILLING MOTHER - IN - LAW.

DEAR UNWILLING:— Do you expect your daughter-in-law to fall all over you when she knows how you feel? And she does, you know.

Sure it was a shock for you to find your plans for your boy all gone haywire.—It was. And it was a shock for him too. But with a family on his hands, you might have been more ashamed if he had not made an effort to support them.

The sooner you stop rejecting the idea and take this little family to your heart, the handier you'll be. Give your boy the confidence that will help him find a job. They'll move out when they can, for what couple think — it's a never-ending story. Put a good face on it and they will begin admiring you.

DEAR DORIS:—I have an apartment with another business girl. We planned to share costs and the work. Now I find myself stuck with the washing because the housework is near my office. I hear her complaining about the cleaning and find myself doing all of that, too.

She has to know everything I do and then tells me how to act. If I am tired and go to bed early she thinks I'm mad. I say not to say anything, but it's getting me down.—GERTIE.

DEAR GERTIE—Why not say something? It's either that or parting bad friends later.

People who live together have to each carry their share. For success, they have to respect each other's privacy. They have to learn control and compromise. And when the boat begins to rock they have to talk things out in a genuine effort to get along. Otherwise the boat sinks.

DEAR DORIS:—Because my boy took an crusade from the refrigerator, my husband broke his hockey stick. Because I didn't tell on him, I was locked in my room without any dinner. I can't stand up to him.

If he ever knew I wrote to you he would punish me some way. Please help me.—MRS. B.

DEAR MRS. B.:—Call in the Children's Aid Society. If you can't stand up to him, Ontario law can. For the sake of the boy, as well as yourself, you must take action right away.

(Doris Clark will be glad to help you with your problems. Write to her care of this paper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Israeli Judges To Rule Whether Trial Is Legal

Recess Eichmann Trial Until Decision Monday

JERUSALEM (AP)—The trial of Adolf Eichmann is nearing its first critical point—the decision of the three judges on the legality of trying him in Israel under a law enacted by the Israeli parliament in 1950.

Supreme Court Justice Moshe Landau, president of the special three-man tribunal hearing the case, announced that the judgment would be handed down Monday morning. The trial is in recess until then.

Eichmann, a lieutenant-colonel in the Nazi Gestapo and chief of its Jewish affairs section, is on trial in Jerusalem on charges of "crimes against the Jewish people and crimes against humanity."

Israel accuses him of responsibility in the annihilation of millions of Jews during the Second World War, as well as torture, forced labor and starvation of prisoners.

ATTACKS LEGALITY

Dr. Robert Servatius, West German lawyer who is defending Eichmann, disputes the entitlement of the Nazi criminal. He based his challenge on these grounds:

1. That Eichmann was kidnapped in Argentina in 1960 and brought to Israel.

2. That he signed a statement, under duress, saying he came to Israel of his own free will.

3. That the crimes with which he is charged were not committed on Israeli soil.

4. That the law under which he is being tried is ex-post facto —enacted and made retroactive after the events.

Attorney-General Gideon Hausner, chief of the prosecution, took up most of this week's sessions to answer these allegations. Summing up, Hausner said:

"I ask the court to reject the contention by the defence—to decide that the court has jurisdiction to try the accused and to demand that he reply to the indictment.

'UNIVERSAL RIGHT'

"The privilege and the right to bring to justice the Nazi criminals . . . is the universal right of all civilized nations. The state of Israel has the privilege to try and sit in judgment upon the accused who came to operate the Jewish people, and certainly more than any other state.

Servatius, replying to Hausner's charges, declared to the court that Eichmann has "a claim for protection" from West Germany.

"I add that the accused has a claim against the state for protection. He can demand this intervention by suit if his government is inactive and he will do so."

MAKE NO EXCEPTIONS

This means whites can compete only against whites and non - whites against non-whites. Mixed racial teams will continue to be segregated.

U.S. Is Pressing Russia for Reply On Laos Truce

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is pressing Russia for a yes-or-no answer to a British proposal for a cease-fire in Laos.

The state department disclosed Friday that it had instructed U.S. Ambassador Llewellyn Thompson in Moscow to make it clear to the Russians that they should move quickly.

U.S. authorities are growing increasingly concerned over the prolonged delay in the Soviet reply, officials said here.

Earlier in the day, U.S. officials said there was some evidence that Moscow may give its answer to the U.S.-sponsored British proposal for a Laotian cease - fire within three days. But even then, U.S. officials were not concealing their concern at the prolonged Soviet silence.

Officials disclosed that Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and Soviet Ambassador Mikhail Menshikov had told President Kennedy nearly three weeks ago the Russians would reply in three days. The three days passed without any word.

Kennedy said last Wednesday that he expected an answer from the Russians that day.

Britain has asked Russia to help halt the fighting in Laos. The Soviet response to the British note was vague on the key point, of cease-fire. The United States has said it will not agree to attend any international conference on the future of the Southeast Asian kingdom until the fighting has been stopped.

Officials here believe there are two possible explanations for the Soviet delay:

1. That a deliberate stalling operation is under way to allow the Communist-led Pathet Lao forces to consolidate still more, expand their position in Laos.

2. That the Russians have run into difficulty with Communist China on agreeing to a ceasefire before international conference is convened.

Another Storm Hits Maritimes

HALIFAX (CP)—The latest in a long series of major winter storms slammed into the Maritimes Friday, dropping as much as inches of snow and blocking highways in some areas of Nova Scotia and most of New Brunswick, escaped with rain, freezing rain and high winds.

Hardest hit was a narrow belt running northeast across New Brunswick and western Prince Edward Island.

Up to 10 inches of snow fell, piling up on 36 inches which had fallen during the last two weeks. Gale-force winds prevailed over all the Maritimes, reaching as high as 60 miles an hour at nearby Shearwater.

LIBERALS MUST WIN ON MERIT SAYS LEADER

Pearson Speaker At Convention

TORONTO (CP)—Opposition leader Lester B. Pearson told a cheering crowd of more than 700 Friday night that the Diefenbaker government deserved to lose the next general election but Liberals had to deserve it with it—and do so in by "a Tory default."

Speaking at the two-day annual meeting of the Ontario Liberal Association, Mr. Pearson said Liberals should not try to outbid any other party merely to gain votes.

"We must not insult the voter by trying to bribe him with his own money," he said. "We must not offer him either by suggestions there is any way to prosperity or reform, except through work and sacrifice and service."

He told the meeting that Liberals should not believe the national unity talk Prime Minister Diefenbaker had produced final and detailed answers to all Canadian need of.

"It has, however, produced a sound basis on which we can move forward in a quarter for Canada's future. . . ."

REELECTIONS WILL TEST

He said the next federal byelections in Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Ontario and British Columbia May 29 would be an opportunity to test the government's record.

Mr. Pearson etched a picture of Prime Minister Diefenbaker as a man who refused to face decisions and live up to election promises.

He quoted Mr. Diefenbaker as saying no one would suffer from unemployment.

"Yet unemployment, at a staggering 11.3 per cent, is higher than at anytime in this country during the last 20 years. . . .

"We quoted the government as saying it would reduce taxes but increased them."

"But taxes were increased in 1959 and the minister of finance has given no assurance that his fifth consecutive budget will.

Pearson Wants Canada to Attempt To Join European Common Market

TORONTO (CP)—Lester B. Pearson, national Liberal leader, said Friday Canada should be making a bid along with Britain to join the prosperous European Common Market.

Mr. Pearson, at a press conference that the government had a "magnificent opportunity" to do this but was not concerned with taking the initiative.

He said Britain's Prime Minister Macmillan made it plain during his Ottawa visit this week that his country will make a determined effort to enter the European Common Market.

"We should be jumping into this with both feet," said Mr. Pearson.

He said he believes chances a button and wipe you out."

PCs Hope Diefenbaker Talks With Leaders Will Aid Party

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative party strategists are counting on Prime Minister Diefenbaker's current series of conferences with world leaders to add to the party's vote-getting appeal in the next federal general election.

The Conservatives believe they scored their 1957 and 1958 electoral victories partly on the appeal they made to many ethnic groups.

Each of the foreign visitors to Ottawa adds to the trend.

An example was Prime Minister Karamanlis' visit this week. He met members of the Greek community in Ottawa, including young Canadians of Greek origin dressed in their national costumes.

Even Prime Minister Macmillan's stay earlier in the week had some vote-getting qualities for the Diefenbaker government.

Although not in any domestic political context, Mr. Macmillan said that people from the Old Country retain a love for it long after they leave.

His speech was broadcast nationally, and Mr. Diefenbaker was closely identified with the event. Conservatives believe this was another case in which love for the old homeland rubs off on the host to the visiting VIP.

A Conservative party source said Mr. Macmillan didn't know what he was letting himself in for when he attacked the post office when he was commissioner of public works. They said twice, a day small elevatives in urban areas are still without mail service although Mr. Hamilton had hamstrung hard at the virtues of this step.

"What is the difference between the minister of today and the ordinary member of almost yesterday?" asked Mr. Herridge. "... his callow, cease-less carping on the details of departmental administration, about which he apparently knew very little, now goes to mind.

J. P. Deschatelets (L—Montreal Maisonneuve - Rosemont) said Mr. Hamilton had changed since taking over the department he once criticized. He said he saw post office employees as human beings and recognized that there is no perfection in the world.

POSTAL DEPT. UNDER BITTER HOUSE ATTACK

Opposition Charges Political Patronage

OTTAWA (CP)—Charges that political patronage exists in the post office department were made in the Commons Friday by Liberal and CCF MPs.

The charges were made in a day-long debate on the 1961-62 spending estimates of the post office during which Postmaster-General William Hamilton was criticized for his handling of the opposition—instituting reforms he proposed as an opposition member.

R. W. Herridge (CCF—Kootenay West) said the wife of the campaign manager of a defeated Conservative candidate in the last election was appointed to a post office position at Trail, B.C.

Mr. Herridge said the woman's husband is the principal of a high school and receives a good salary. He felt the job could have gone to another more in need of employment.

IRRITATES SOME

The appointment was irritating to unemployed veterans and others in Trail, Mr. Herridge said, when the people are under the impression it was a political appointment."

Arnold Peters (CCF—Timiskaming) said stories had appeared in several newspapers stating that Allister Grosart, Conservative party organizer, had told people in Haileybury, Ont., that if they wanted a new post office they had better ask the defeated Conservative candidate in Timiskaming to make representations at the recent Conservative convention in Ottawa.

"He said that this was the way to do it, and the best time to do it would be at the Conservative convention," Mr. Peters said.

Mr. Peters said no effort had been made by officials of the town to get in touch with him. That was fine as long as any decision about a post office was made on the merits of established need. But in the light of what had happened, could that impartial study be taken for granted?

DENIES PATRONAGE

Theogene Ricard (PC — St. Hyacinthe - Bagot) declared that there is any patronage in the post office. However, he said there was plenty wrong with the way Liberal government was in power.

Liberal and CCF speakers said Mr. Hamilton didn't know what he was letting himself in for when he attacked the post office when he was commissioner of public works. They said twice, a day small elevatives in urban areas are still without mail service although Mr. Hamilton had hamstrung hard at the virtues of this step.

"What is the difference between the minister of today and the ordinary member of almost yesterday?" asked Mr. Herridge. "... his callow, cease-less carping on the details of departmental administration, about which he apparently knew very little, now goes to mind.

J. P. Deschatelets (L—Montreal Maisonneuve - Rosemont) said Mr. Hamilton had changed since taking over the department he once criticized. He said he saw post office employees as human beings and recognized that there is no perfection in the world.

Heavy Losses Seen At Latakia Military Airport

Castro Orders Troops To Man Posts at Once

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—A 26-plane bombing and strafing attack by ground fire, landed here today after attacking airports in Havana and Santiago.

A Cuban Air Force pilot was at the controls. He was alone in the two-engined Second World War craft.

U.S. immigration officials took him into custody. He asked officials to withhold his name because of his family in Cuba.

The Cuban armed forces minister in Havana claimed one plane which took part in the Cuban raids was fatally damaged by defending fire and "flew toward Miami with its wheels down."

NEW YORK (AP)—The head of a Cuban group seeking overthrow of the Castro regime said today's bombings today were the work of Cuban Air Force men who then took their planes "toward freedom."

In a statement issued here through a spokesman, Dr. Jose Miro Cardona, president of the Cuban Revolutionary Council, said:

"An heroic blow for Cuban freedom was struck this morning by certain members of the Cuban Air Force.

"Before flying their planes toward freedom these true revolutionaries attacked by surprise as many Castro military planes as possible."

Yuri Proves Artful Dodger Of Queries at Press Parley

MOSCOW (AP) — The first world's space man, Yuri Gagarin, held a press conference today to tell reporters about his historic flight, but he dodged questions almost as artfully as he orbited the earth.

With a confident smile, he managed to turn aside all requests for specific information about the landing and the space ship itself.

He did say, however, that "the entire space ship and its parts can be used again."

Gagarin opened the conference by reading a prepared statement.

Later in answering written questions from correspondents, he said that many landing systems had been worked out. He did not say which one he used.

Asked when photographs of the flight would be published, he said:

"There was no photographic apparatus aboard so none can be published."

Izvestia published five pictures Friday and Pravda Gagarin suited up and ready to go, aboard a bus going to his spaceship, riding the lift, raising his hands in farewell and the spaceship in orbit, surrounded by the yellows of the blastoff.

Gagarin also said that during the flight the food he ate was special nourishment prepared by the academy of sciences and that when he ate it "the sensations were the same as on the ground."

Asked if he could have stayed in orbit longer than he did—he was up in outer space one hour and 48 minutes—he said "my own experiences prompt me to believe that a space pilot could remain in orbit for a much longer time."

Gagarin said he weighed 69.5

Prices Remain Unchanged on Local Market

Prices remained unchanged on the farmer's market in Victoria Square, Belleville today.

There was a good assortment of vegetables and fruit available, and a generous supply of maple syrup although most farmers no longer are tapping in the sugar bushes. The supply of maple syrup was "expected to remain good for a few weeks yet because, as one farmer put it, "There's plenty of syrup still to be sold and no doubt it will be sold because most people like maple syrup well into the summer".

Still no sign of anything growing in the fields, and another farmer, except plenty of water. "It's still early for planting."

IT TAKES KNOWLEDGE TO TREAT THE SICK

Despite great advances in medical knowledge, there are still some people who depend on old-fashioned self-treatments. Some let persons with no drug or medical training advise them what medicines to take.

When door-to-door peddlers or mailorder opportunists presume to tell you what to take when you are sick—be wise. In order to treat sickness a diagnosis of the cause is needed. No one but a physician has this knowledge.

YOUR DOCTOR CAN PHONE US when you need a medicine. Pick up your prescription at shopping nearby, or we will deliver promptly without extra charge. A great many people entrust us with their prescriptions. May we dispense yours?

The Dominance of the Female Rears Its Head in Retirement

By THOMAS COLLINS

The dominance of the female over the male is rearing its head in retirement.

Sometimes it's rough, as in the cases where wives push the husband over the housekeeping chores to their retired husbands, or treat them as impotents in the days of the time life of the home. But more often it is subtle.

And the husband sometimes never realizes he is being dominated.

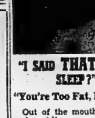
For instance:

"Although the man is supposed to have the problem of where and how to live after he retires," says a husband who for obvious reasons doesn't want his name used, "you will find that most couples make this decision on the basis of the wife's desires.

"These desires involve proximity to some child, or some good friend, and always hinge on social opportunities for the wife. It is these things, almost to the exclusion of everything else, that determine where a retired man lives, and it is no wonder that he has trouble adjusting himself. . ."

DOMINATE ACTIVITIES

This husband also thinks many wives dominate the personal activities of their retired husbands. "Although doctors stress the necessity of keeping in shape by exercise," he says, "few retired men make any plans or seek any means to provide the energy for light home jobs, which aren't enough.



"Even the doctor who made me promise that I wouldn't stop getting enough exercise has cut his own activity to mowing the lawn and washing the car. You can't blame the men because in most cases their wives won't let them get up a sweat or tackle anything that will make them bodily tired.

"My wife is like that. But I get exercise in spite of her opinions. I am not going to add to the present surplus of widows."

This man has one other interesting thought about retired men: "It seems to me there are just two classes of retired people. Those who have the their resources to make a new life, amuse themselves, keep interested in many things, and look ahead as opposed to those who do not have these heights. I know of no case where a man has developed these facilities after retiring.

The relationship of a man and his wife goes through many stages — the honeymoon; the diapers and 2 A.M. feedings; the time he is glued to business success, the physical changes of middle age; and finally retirement.

All required adjustments, and perhaps retirement requires more than any of the others. Because here the two people, for the first time since their wedding, make a major change in their exposure to each other. Many wives now love their husbands at breakfast and in the evening can get an overdose when they have them all day long. Many husbands like-

A FULL-TIME PARTNER

But it is more than this personal exposure. A wife who through forty-odd years has developed a peaceful pattern for operating her home discovers, when her husband retires, that she is no longer the full arbiter of her day or her home. She has a full-time partner who helps decide everything. And the man, having lost what orientation his work-day provided him with, must seek to reorient himself to mundane things as the visit of the mailman and the repair of an oven.

Readjustment of the highest order must be made by a man and his wife when retirement arrives. When it becomes hard, the man falls back on the wisdom and patience he has acquired by age 65 and, compromises — and lets his wife have her way.

It behooves all people in their early sixties — but particularly the husband — to blueprint the arrangements for which the husband and wife will live in their late-forties after retirement. Blueprint the dishes, the cooking and the bed-making for your sure. Blueprint the evenings in which the husband will no longer be away from a days work, the afternoons on which the wife has taken her naps.

A wife's judgment on retirement living after a long career, is nearly always good and perhaps better than that of a man making the decision. She has gone into a job. Also the man comes into the wife's world — not the other way around — when the man retires. Still, the man's judgment must go into the decisions that are made, if he is not to drive a way. The best way for his judgment to have play is to write out in detail plans of retirement just what is best.

Eugene Lang Speaks on Music At Y's Men's

The regular weekly dinner meeting of the Y's Men's Club was held in the YMCA auditorium on Thursday evening.

President elect John Hayman was in charge.

Y's man Orville Matthews opened the meeting with a brief sermonette based on Psalm 91, which was most helpful as we thought provoking.

The speaker for the evening, Eugene Lang, was introduced by Harold Speaker in his usual witty manner. Mr. Lang's subject was music and explained that some of the best music was produced by the men in the 18th Century such as such composers as Beethoven, Liszt, Smetana, Schumann and others. Some composers wrote through inspiration and others by creative beauty. Music is liked by everyone, civilized or uncivilized and plays an important part in every person's life. Mr. Lang who has made such an extensive study of music gave very interesting life histories of many of these composers of the 18th century that proved most interesting to the club members and visitors.

Y's man Wes Scarrow expressed the thanks to the speaker on behalf of the club. Y's man Bert Hiles acted as Sergt.-at-Arms. The club welcomed several visitors to the meeting.

IN MEMORIAM

CLARKE. — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, Harold A. Clarke, who passed away suddenly on April 13th, 1958.

Life did we think that morn,
When the day would bring
The blow the dark, the shock severe,
To lose the one we love so dear.
To-day we mourn and sadly ponder,
Why always bring regret,
But the hearts who loved you dearest
Are the ones who never forget.
Sadly missed by wife, Helen and family.

HARRISON. — In loving memory of a dear son, Terry Glen, who passed away one year April 14th, 1960.
There is a mother who misses you dearly,
And a father the time long since you left,
And we think of you daily and hourly,
But try to be brave and content.
But the tears that we shed in silence,
And we breathe a sigh of regret,
For you were ours, and we cherished you yet.
Always remembered and forget,
—Never forgotten by Mum and Dad and children.

Civil Service Subject of Talk By Commission Chairman

The civil service is possibly the greatest influence upon the complex structure of present day democratic society members of the Belleville branch of the Civil Service Association of Ontario were told yesterday evening at the Club Canara by D. J. Collins, chairman of the Civil Service Commission of Ontario. Because of this fact, civil servants must realize that their activities and abilities are of the highest order to earn the respect and confidence of the public, the Queen's University graduate urged.

In discussing the responsibilities of a civil servant the former deputy minister of Ontario's Department of Transport cautioned that in the administration of the enactments of the legislature a civil servant must be alert to protect the rights of the individual citizen from undue influence or control by minority groups whose selfish interests must be discouraged in order to preserve the best interests of the entire citizenry. Of this important factor each civil servant must be constantly and more increasingly aware said Mr. Collins.

In the varied tasks, the execution of which has been requested by the public, numerous government departments have been established, the former RCAF pilot noted. Within these various departments are personnel who have obtained a unique knowledge and training pertinent to the discharge of their duties. This knowledge and ability to fit each to one common task, the fair enforcement of the rules and acts as laid down by the legislature, which task should eventually lead to providing the citizens of the province with a sober and fuller way of life the speaker advised.

Mr. Collins suggested to the 350-odd provincial civil servants present that government administration of today was probably 100 years behind the achievements of current scientists comparatively speaking.

A WAY OF LIFE

It therefore behooves each civil servant to constantly strive towards improving himself individually in his particular job and to increase the efficiency of his department generally the commission chairman proposed. A career in the civil service is a way of life, Mr. Collins stated, adding that as each member of that service strives to serve the public more efficiently and effectively he will be raising the status of his position to one of equal importance with any other vocation in modern society.

Amongst the guests present to hear Mr. Collins' address were W. E. "Bill" Sandercock, M.L.A. for West Hastings; Les Grills, M.P. for Hastings South; Clarke Rollins, M.L.A. for East Hastings, and Mr. Vierold Mace, president of the Civil Service Association for Ontario.

Rosser Robson, sheriff of Hastings County, proposed the toast to the province, to which Mr. Sandercock replied. Those present were welcomed on behalf of the City of Belleville by Deputy Mayor Robert Templer. Mr. J. G. Demeza, superintendent of the Ontario School for the Deaf, introduced the guest speaker, and Sgt. Cec Kirkwood of the local Ontario Provincial Police detachment expressed the appreciation of those present to Mr. Collins.

Russell Whitfield of the Department of Lands and Forests, Tweed, president of the local branch conducted the program which concluded with some entertainment consisting of feats of legerdemain by The Bradshaws and several accordion selections. A social gathering and dance was held afterwards.

Dr. Boyd Upper Presents Paper

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario Liberal Association's two - day annual convention opened Fri. with 13 policy meetings aimed at a variety of subjects from education to municipal affairs.

In the education committee, delegates heard a paper by Dr. Boyd Upper, executive officer of the Ontario Liberal Party, charging that Premier Frost's government had undermined education by lowering teachers' standards and was failing to provide adequate financial aid to students.

Dr. Upper said Ontario's approach to education was "self-condemned" because it was geared to preparing students for university work, while only three out of every 100 students who entered grade one ever reached university.

Bridge Street United Church Launches Campaign to Raise $200,000 Building Fund

An enthusiastic supper meeting Wednesday evening marked the opening of a campaign to raise $200,000 for adding approximately 10,000 square feet additional floor space in an expanding Christian Education program. Plans for providing the needed accomodation have received final approval, estimates of costs have been prepared, and all necessary authorizations have been secured to proceed with the canvass of the congregation.

It is proposed to erect a two-storey extension along Bridge Street west of the present edifice and connected thereto, thence northerly a sufficient distance to include a chapel having its front entrance from Church Street. The additional space will provide twelve new classrooms, convenient nursery and crib rooms, a sizable all-purpose room, a comfortable ladies' parlor, and modern office and kitchen facilities. The whole design is intended to enable the ministers, staff and all departments, to function much more effectively than is possible at present.

More than 100 canvassers sat down to a supper prior to receiving final directions for conducting the campaign. As chairman of the Building Fund Finance Committee, Mr. A. S. Robb welcomed all present, in words that suggested confidence in the project.

PROGRESS TRACED

He traced the progress made to date, and cited the program that lay ahead. Mr. Robb paid tribute to the work of Campaign Director J. G. Gurnett, and his associates, for the immense task accomplished in so short a time, and called on Mr. Gurnett to explain the "mechanics" of the campaign. The consecrated cards, the weekly envelopes, and recommended procedures, were discussed in detail, together with suggestions and answers to questions. Mr. Gurnett acknowledged the tremendous assistance they had received from the many workers from all the congregation who had come to the church after a day to help with the typing and mailing of the various items of literature sent to all church members, and prepared for the canvassers.

Mr. J. G. Demeza followed with information as to the needs of the church for additional accommodation, and made a plea to continue the good work of the church which had been an important a factor in the community life of Belleville since 1816. The pioneers of those early years had developed Bridge Street Church into an active and virile organization working for the good of the community; the had spent a full time in a present campaign committee endeavor to remember them in the best lay-out and equipment; the congregation would now be asked to contribute funds required for the tools with which to carry on a good job so well begun.

EXTRA SPACE NEEDED

Mr. Glenn Shaver emphasized the need for additional space to improve the Christian education program for the young folk. Present living conditions are so different from those of a few years ago that some degree of religious education is essential in the complete education of a girl or boy.

The proposed improvement in Christian Education facilities should enable the teachers and officers of the Sunday School to do much better work, with less confusion and difficulty. Mr. Shaver said that the cost of the building extension would be shared by many who would welcome the opportunity to contribute towards the objective of the congregation—more and better training in Christian Education.

Rev. H. M. Davis added his assurance that the proposed project was vital to the successful work of the church, especially the girls and boys. Modern conditions could be met by modern methods, which called for modern facilities. He expressed himself as very pleased with the progress of the finance committee's work, and intimated that he would express his views on the need for additional facilities in his sermon next Sunday, which incidentally would be the 139th anniversary of Bridge Street Sunday school. At the close of his remarks Mr. Davis asked all to stand while he formally committed the canvassers to their duties in the matter of collecting funds. The campaign is scheduled to commence April 16th, and to conclude April 30th.

Mr. Douglas Burr expressed the appreciation of the campaign committee, and all present for the wonderful supper the ladies of Bridge St. W.A. had provided on the occasion of commencing such an important project in the history of the church.

Liberal Policy Defined

The attack by Maurice Lamontagne on the economic theories of James Coyne, governor of the Bank of Canada, certainly should help to clear the air. Not that the average citizen is likely to be able to judge between Mr. Coyne and Mr. Lamontagne — although perhaps in the months that lie ahead there will be sufficient interchange of opinion between the supporters of these opposing positions to enable the voter to understand more clearly just what the squabble is all about. The immediate result of Mr. Lamontagne's address to the Liberal Businessmen's Club in Toronto, though, is certain to be an interpretation of the official Liberal position as one opposed to Mr. Coyne's proposals.

Mr. Lamontagne is economic adviser to Hon. Lester Pearson, leader of the Liberal Party, and it would appear unlikely that he would have forthrightly attacked Mr. Coyne's position without informing his chief of his intention to do so. Failing any immediate disclaimer from Mr. Pearson, the natural conclusion is that Mr. Lamontagne's views, if not the settled policy of the Liberal Party, at least reveal the trend of thinking within the upper echelons. We are not so sure, though, that it is equally true, as Mr. Lamontagne suggests, that the terms of Hon. Donald Fleming's "baby budget" in December mean that the Progressive Conservatives are espousing Mr. Coyne's cause.

Mr. Coyne is not precisely beloved amongst the rank and file of the party in power. A Liberal appointee, he is regarded as the author of the so-called "tight-money" policy which Hon. Walter Harris, then minister of finance, so vigorously defended against Conservative attacks prior to the overthrow of the St. Laurent government.

Whether Mr. Lamontagne's present criticism of Mr. Coyne represents a change in Liberal policy is not so clear to the layman. Mr. Coyne has denied that the Bank of Canada is following a true "tight money" policy and, indeed, most of his recent addresses appear concerned with the source of capital and the use to which it is put than to the actual amount which is injected into the country's economic bloodstream.

In one sense, Mr. Lamontagne's remarks may be interpreted as being in the old Liberal tradition of asking of free trade — or as free trade as is feasible — but on the other hand it is probably in error to regard Mr. Coyne's advocacy of greater self-sufficiency as a stand for protection.

A Contrast in Methods

A striking contrast between the personalities of Hazen Argue, CCF House Leader in the Commons, and Premier T. C. Douglas, head of Saskatchewan's CCF government, is provided by their reaction to the reservation of royal assent to a provincial bill by Lieutenant-Governor F. L. Bastedo.

Since both these men are prominently mentioned as possible leaders of the Federal New Party, the contrast between their methods is doubly interesting.

Mr. Argue has issued a statement calling for the Lieutenant-Governor's resignation.

Premier Douglas has said, "we do not want to argue with the Lieutenant-Governor." Instead he will press the Federal Government for a decision, provincial legislation on which royal assent has been reserved by a Lieutenant-Governor being referred to the Governor-General, which in effect means the Federal Cabinet, for action.

Mr. Bastedo, of course, was appointed by the Federal Government. Said Mr. Douglas: "Mr. Diefenbaker has a tiger by the tail."

It is evident that, by refraining from criticism, Mr. Douglas is hopeful that Mr. Diefenbaker, and not he, will reap all the scars which may result until, and after, he figures how to let go of said tail.

Under such circumstances, Mr. Douglas may well be a little less than happy with Mr. Argue's intervention. Mr. Argue, on the other hand, unable to play the role of the injured party as can Premier Douglas, may have decided that for him it is a case of nothing ventured, nothing won and that his own personal political fortunes demanded he inject himself into the controversy in some manner.

Mr. Bastedo's reservation of assent was based on certain grounds, doubt as to the validity of the bill and doubt as to whether it was in the public interest. Had he stood on the first ground alone, he might have been safer, although even there it can argued that the question of validity is one for the courts to decide. But when he concerns himself with the public interest, Mr. Bastedo is claiming for himself, as a representative of the Crown, a right of decision which the Crown itself long ago relinquished in Britain.

Jap Husbands Fear Wives

By Hessell Tiltman in the Manchester Guardian

According to a Japanese magazine survery, of 2,000 husbands under 40 questioned more than half are quoted as being "afraid" of their wives.

The survery further indicated that 82 per cent of the husbands left their wives to make all decisions on purchases costing more than 1,000 yen, and that nearly all their wives' judgment even on smaller items.

About 85 per cent polish their own shoes and 75 per cent said their wives left them to sleep on when they plan to stay out after 10 p.m.

* * *

All of which goes to confirm what knowing folk in that country of changes have come to Japanese family life since the termination of Japan's feudal era, though only in the case of a minority of the people.

There is a sharp distinction between today's social habits and ideas of middle and city dwellers and intellectuals and the working class in the cities and small townships.

This distinction is also sharp between husbands of, say, 30 years of age and the older generation. The family system is still very much in existence in farming and rural communities.

* * *

There is today far more equality in the homes of scientific people and intellectuals between husbands and wives because of, upon the new constitution. In the early post-war years both husbands and wives often had to work to secure an adequate family income. And it naturally followed that when wives were working, husbands had to suffer some domestic assistance in the home — particularly as household help became scarcer.

Before the war husbands and sons were told: "The kitchen is not the place for you." Even in homes had maids, and wives and servants took complete care of household tasks.

* * *

Even when life settled down to the new pattern, wives continued to go out of the home more and more, forming women's associations — unknown in pre-war days — whose main factor encouraging women to get outside the home regularly.

In many ways, Japanese women have embraced more modern ideas and assimilated habits with city husbands carrying parcels — and even babies — when out shopping with their wives.

Typifying the new trend, there is in Tokyo today a Kyuki-Kai — literally an "afraid of wives" society. Although modest only in fun by a noted political commentator, such an organization would have been unthinkable even 15 years ago.

Silly Query Is Discarded

Detroit Free Press

Another indication of the march of each succeeding sense of President Kennedy's outlook was an announcement that the Labor Department has abandoned a questionnaire that asked workers how they visited whether they were coming to America for immoral purposes.

The Administration made no bones about why they were eliminating the prudish inquiry. They admitted with refreshing candor it was because the questionnaire offended many potential visitors.

They went to attract more foreign tourists and their spending money, not scare them away. Accordingly our consulates abroad will be instructed to drop the ing the controversial questionare dealing with the personal habits of prospective visitors.

Please don't get us wrong. This newspaper is against immorality. It is also against unofficial snooping.

Nobody but an imbecile could think that questionnaires are common harbors immoral purposes, by asking him. And nobody but an idiot supposes that anyone so planned on visiting the U.S. to exercise immorality.

We pointed earlier when we dealt with the difficulties facing visitors to the United Sates that Mr. Kennedy would be brisk about getting rid of them. That has been even more brisk than we had anticipated.

225 Letters Average Mail

Ottawa Journal

The average Canadian, man, woman or child, receives 225 letters in a year. That is among figures found in the answers to a booklet published by the Post Office Department.

These four billion letters provide employment for 40,000 people handling, sorting and delivery. There are more than 11,000 post offices. Volume of mail has increased by 50 per cent in the last 10 years. In the same period the number of revenue per miles 81 per cent and Post Office staff has increased 13 per cent.

There are about 5,000 city letter carriers. Rural mail carriers cover 130,000 miles of country roads. Their total travel is the equivalent of 86 times the distance between the earth and the moon.

Letters are sorted electronically, whisked about in automatic conveyors and sped on their way by jet airplane, snowmobile or dogsled.

If we remember to mail them.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR EARL L. DOUGLASS

LIFE COMES THROUGH DYING

The Greeks had a very naive idea of salvation. Human life, they averred, is a sort of two-story affair — body below, mind above. Rise above the body into the purity of the mind, and all will be well. But, of course, all is not well because the mind is not divorced from the body.

Two hundred years or more ago the gospel of progress came in. It was greatly reinforced one hundred years later by the theory of evolution. According to this theory, man is evolving into something. Give him time a chance and he will go on and on from triumph to triumph. All of this, of course, has been disproved by two world wars and the double-state of modern life.

Christianity teaches that the trouble with the world is that man's life is not properly organized. It is organized about self; it must be organized about God if it is to develop as it should. The Christian remedy is death — death of self and that reversal of life which comes from an unselfish surrender to God; to duty; and to the needs of the world. Jesus expressed it when he said, "Except a grain of wheat fall into the earth and die it abideth by itself alone; but if it die it beareth much fruit."

Souvenirs Are Imported

Guelph Mercury

It is to be assumed that if we in Canada wish to sell our wheat abroad, that we must be prepared to buy some of the products of those with whom we trade. Why some of our imports, designed to please local provincial or national appeal, may bear the stamp of Made-in-Japan country, however, appears puzzling.

"We in Canada, have heard a great deal about our Canadian 'know-how' in industry," says the Woodstock Sentinel-Review, "yet we do not appear to be capable, as a nation of large scale, to make souvenirs or typically Canadian merchandise, which will be a real memento.

"Surely there are opportunities for manufacturing, even on a small scale, items in metals, plastics and wood which would be somewhat more typical of our land. Even the souvenir enterprise has done much to improve the strictly Quebec character of the items sold in the stores.

"What then do we have for Ontario? We see imported chinaware, blankets and silver. Our souvenirs, to a large extent, also imported. Our artistry and our ingenuity, apparently, has not yet reached the point of producing an adequate variety of souvenirs and other gift items which would be distinctly Ontario and have an appeal as such."

It does seem strange when we see the number of souvenirs of many beauty spots and places of historical interest in Ontario, and find them marked as made in some other country, from which Captain Shaughan Graham will succeed Miss Richardson as manager here and Mr. Jack Hinchey will be assistant.

Speyside Marmalade

St. Thomas Times-Journal

Toast and marmalade are almost universal breakfast fare and a Scottish firm has put on the market a marmalade that is unique.

It is made from the thick juice of Seville oranges and sugar, cut into small pieces and sorted in casks that once contained Speyside whisky that impregnated the wood. Left in the casks for several years, the marmalade absorbs the whisky flavor. It is then acepted out of the casks, whisked and put into jars.

We predict quite a demand for Highland malt marmalade.

Silent Defended

Dayton Journal Herald

"The happy marriage," writes a Rutgers professor, "has room for privileged silences, for a room of one's own, even if that room is only in the mind."

The words rest softly on the ear. They are like silence, itself, golden.

And more, they must be comforting to many. For as Andrew Montague explains in his book Gadding Abroad, the husband who comes home at night and talks not of his day at the office still loves his wife. When all is done, there isn't always something to be said.

We don't know how far Prof. Montague's defence of the silent husband will spread. It may go unheralded, even unheard, in many households. It's too bad. Peace is always quiet.

Words Alter Meanings

BBC London Letter

The meaning of many words tends to change with the passage of years, and it has been said that this is more so with "liberal" than any other language. Speaking about some of these changes in talk heard recent recently in the BBC General Overseas Service, the biographer Maurice Cranston insisted the word 'indifferent' as it occurs in the sixteenth-century prayer still used in the Church of England which petitions God to "defend us from all indifferency" — council 'mercy' and 'impartiality' rather than 'justice'. In that context it is, of course, used in its original sense of 'impartiality', whereas the general twentieth century tends to mean 'half-hearted' or 'only moderately well.'

Thackeray's collection of humorous essays entitled 'The Snobs', and published only about a hundred years ago, provided another example. Cranston said in Thackeray's day a 'snob' was just a 'fellow' or 'chap', and was in fact a Cambridge slang word for 'any Tom, Dick or Harry'. It had nothing to do with the modern meaning of a person of social pride and down on those less fashionable or well born.

Another, another instance, rice Cranston said that nowadays a man had to be very interested to be called 'liberal' whether his political views were Right or Left. 'Nice' is not now always such a nice name. In seventeenth-century English it means says of logic: 'lathe not a most profane and liberal science'. Cranston said that he is not asking if logic is not a most profane and liberal science; he is asking if he is not a licentious and immoral counsellor; he is asking if he is not a licentious and immoral counsellor; he is asking if he is not a licentious and immoral counsellor

A Lift For Living

Put Life to Its Highest Use

By DR. RALPH W. SOCKMAN

Yonder is a schoolboy moving restlessly about the house. It is Saturday, and it is raining. First he stares out of the window. Then he turns on the TV, dials a program or two and switches it off. He kicks the door shut and throws himself on his bed, staring vacantly at the ceiling. After watching him a while his mothers says to herself, "John doesn't know what to do with himself today." He has himself on his hands. He has time on his hands. And he doesn't know how to use it.

The years pass. The boy has grown to manhood. A war comes along and he enlists. For three years or so he is regimented into a vast organization. He takes orders or perhaps gives them. Then the war ends, and he returns to civilian life. He looks around him and sees the various professions seemingly pretty well filled. Some of the things which people are so busy with seem foolish and pointless to him. What shall he do with himself?

More years pass. The young man has now turned 65. He has passed the deadline for industrial employment. He says he feels as young as ever and some times he acts even younger. He has some years ahead of him. He does not know how many. He still has himself on his hands still wonders what to do with himself.

A RECURRING PROBLEM

It is a recurring problem with many answers. We can only begin to approach them here. One or two guiding principles might help.

Remember first, we do not own ourselves, we are not completely free to do as we please. A lad was once brought before his school principal for discipline. He said: "Why can't I go to the devil if I want to? I have a right to live my own life as long as I don't hurt anybody else." "No," says Saint Paul. "You are not your own; you were bought with a price." Each of us represents a valuable investment made by parents, friends, teachers, even God Himself.

In view of these principles a person is a waster who lives like a certain woman I know. She rises late, loafs all day and is nearly a nervous wreck when her husband returns from his office at night. When she leaves her expensive apartment it is usually for a beauty salon or a doctor's office. She does nothing for others. She does not even consider her husband's comfort but drags him out to dinner when he would prefer to eat at home.

A DISILLUSIONED MAN

Or I think of a fellow who inherited two or three million dollars. He attended four colleges and finished none. He married four times. He lost one wife by death and three by divorce. He lives now in a mansion, a sour, disillusioned man of sixty-five.

"Is it worth while?" is as important a question as "Is it right?" If a thing is not worth doing, it is not right to do. Time is too valuable to be wasted on the trivial and the frivolous.

Life is too precious not to be put to its highest use. Aristotle's principle was to examine the structure of anything and then use it for what it was made for. I can use the toe of my shoe to poke a fire, but that is not what shoes are made for and they suffer when so used. A man can be used as a pack animal or to pull a rickshaw, but a man is not made to be a beast of burden and when so used, his mind and spirit suffer.

Hear, Arnold Toynbee — eminent historian — not a preacher: "Man at work can be happy and spiritually healthy only if his tasks that he is working in God's world for God's glory through doing what is God's will."

Expects to Do Most of Work At Night

TORONTO (CP) — Ester Dover, a 200-pound mother of two, feels confident about her new job as Metropolitan Toronto's first woman bailiff's assistant.

Mrs. Dover, 50, wife of a parvalined process server, says she will do most of her work at night because "that's when the husbands are home and I don't mind. It's fair to scare a lone housewife but to death."

She emphatically discounts the idea of a bailiff as an impersonal evictor.

"I try to talk to persons in trouble, if they want to take half their furniture, I want to make some arrangement with them to pay the back rent.

"If the furniture has to be taken out of the house, I personally feel the job's a failure."

Before going to Canada about four years ago she worked as a secretary in England and once ran a children's wear store. Before being granted the license as bailiff she was a secretary and process server.

"I guess my experience thought this business could use a woman's touch," she said.

Said Magistrate C. A. Thorburn of the Metro licensing commission:

"It's a great thing. If anybody could rush into my house, I'd like it to be a woman."

L.O.L. 2599 Holds Meet

POINT ANNE — The L.O.L. 2599 held its regular meeting in the Orange Hall, in Point Anne with a good attendance of members. Past Master, Fred Mather, presided his son Milton, Master, with the Past Master's jewel.

After a few brief remarks for the good of the Order, Lodge was closed.

Miami Beach's Fountainbleau Tops All the Resort Hotels

By Shirley and Bob Sloane

Miami Beach, Fla. — Except for a handful of hotels — some of which, like the old Shepherd of Cairo, now belong to the ages — none has ever become so much of a legend in its own time as the Fountainbleau.

And except for a few stories about it, such as solid gold plumbing fixtures and having a bellhop at a quarter to pick up the dime you dropped in the lobby, most of the legend is true.

Few people spell its name correctly and fewer still pronounce it right (Fountain blew is the most common miscarriage), and there are those who believe its name derived from the fountains that "blow" on the property). But the newest are those who can afford to stay in the world's highest priced hotel.

The cheapest room in the house during the high winter season just past was $37 a day — the cheapest suite a split over single or double occupancy, $50 — and the most one up to $60 a day and a four-room corner suite will cost you $225 — not for a day but per month, sport. A cabana, which is a bedroom complete with a telephone, shower and a pitcher of ice, goes for a mere $25 a day.

With more than 1,000 rooms, the Fountainbleau is the world's largest resort hotel. It should also go without saying at this point that it is the most expensive, having cost some $33,000,000 to build in 1954. It was the year Miami Beach's incredible hotel boom reached a peak never known before or since. There is reason to believe that it overdid it a bit because competitors despaired of ever surpassing its lavishness.

But it was also a few years before Amerigenia were worried about what would happen if the Russians got a man in space before we did. Their entire national system surpassed our. The postwar honeymoon was still on, and the Fontainebleau became its headquarters.

Its unique curved sun wing stirred architectural circles. So did the complete absence of the hotel's name from its facade. Its replica of the palace's garden, statuary and lakes studded with marble walls, silk draperies, statuary and ornate furniture ranging from Louis XV to and Renaissance to modern, started conversations about taste that are still going on.

But the Fontainebleau became the first to beat Miami Beach's annual this-year's-hotel boast. Each year tales are told of the new business which offers were cutting theirs and turning to the Fontainebleau's architect and designer, Morris Lapidus, for dramatic achievement.

Most hotel men agree that the phenomenon of the Fontainebleau and Lapidus will never be the man who conceived, built and owns mostly — owns it, Ben Novack.

Ben Novack's personality is almost the antithesis of his creation's. Far from a starry-eyed visionary genius, he is a hardnosed businessman whose office is the smallest hot-least ornate room in the hotel. His chief distinguishing features are four telephones on a desk piled with papers. Nearly all these papers contain figures representing dollars.

MIAMI BEACH STANDARDS

Strangely enough, Novack never had any idea of building the world's most elaborate hotel. "All my experience and knowledge of the hotel business had come from Miami Beach," he says, "and I knew only that I wanted to build a fine hotel by Miami Beach standards."

For what he charges, Novack knows he can afford to spare no expense and overlook no detail. It is this attitude to which most observers attribute the hotel's success. Novack has been known to pop into one of the kitchens and show an employee how to slice smoked salmon.

With a native shrewdness too seldom employed by American hotel men, he knows that Americans are willing to pay well, but only when they get their money's worth.

When he were in Manager Duke Stewart's office, a green room clerk came in to explain that the lady in 802 had accidentally broken her window and wanted the repair charge put on her bill.

"For goodness' sake," said Stewart, "send that maid to get someone up to see if she's hurt and get the window fixed immediately. It's probably our fault it broke in the first place."

And in the basement shopping arcade you can buy a $200 beaded bag, a five-figure diamond ring, or an identical portrait of yourself that makes you look like an angel in heaven, surrounded by fleecy clouds.

That, apparently, is the way the Fontainebleau wants its guests to feel.

The Living Lord' Topic at St. Columba

The first group of the Presbyterian Women of St. Columba Church held their regular monthly meeting at the Church Building on Farley Ave. The president Mrs. F. VanRompaey opened the meeting with prayer, after which Mrs. S. Milbolland read the Scripture.

During the business reports were read and received. Several plans were discussed, among them the banner to be held in the fall.

It was decided that the next meeting would be in the form of a "Bring and Buy Auction Sale."

Mrs. L. Williamson spoke upon the mission work for the month of April, and introduced the guest speaker of the evening, the Rev. Norman Hutchinson, whose topic was "the Living Lord".

Mrs. William Bowles thanked the speaker.

It was announced that Miss Ruby Walker of Toronto, will be the guest speaker at a Presbyterial Presbyterian and Women in Belleville later this month. Her subject will be "Women and World Women".

Mrs. S. Mulholland gave a reading. Mrs. Wilcox and Welfare Committee and Miss A. Logan reported on the Thankoffering.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. A. Woods and a social hour was enjoyed.

This - - - and That

By HARRIET STEVENS

We are now precisely at the mid-point of April and what an odd month it has been so far—odd and unpredictable. In a sonnet entitled 'Acquaintance' by David Morton we read:—

All that we know of April is her way
Of coming on the world through gentle springs,
Turning the hedge a whitening line of gray,
Staining the grass with shivered golden things.

That does not sound exactly like our April. Cyril Connolly called the turn more correctly when he said, "Spring is a call to action, hence to disillusion, therefore April is called "the cruellest month".

The month had also been referred to in these words — "the sweet small clumsy feet of April" also, "How grimy April comes again." In an Ode to Disappointment, a poet calls the passing scene "a peevish April day." Shakespeare himself wrote: "O how this spring of love resembleth the uncertainty glory of an April day."

April is again called 'cruelest' (spelled with one 'l' this time) by T. S. Eliot in 'The Waste Land,' with these words:
April is the cruelest month, breeding

Lilacs out of dead land, mixing Memory and desire, stirring Dull roots with spring rain.

There is one mention of April that is only for women when she says, "In April 1911, in search of the Fountain of Youth. The first English play Will ever printed was cast in April 1653 when the Drury Lane Theatre opened. Women were first admitted to examinations at Oxford, England, in April, 1884; in 1915 the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom was founded at the Hague during June Address as president.

That list seems to be enough, but very likely every month could have's similar list of important events. If April does seem especially honored, maybe it is because it begins with April Fools' Day.

Love Your Enemies

By ALMA MASON

It is easy to love those who love us. Do we find it easy to love those who despitefully use us? Jesus said — "Love your enemies. Do good to them which hate you. Bless them that curse you and pray for them which despitefully use you; for if ye love them which love you, what thank have ye for sinners also love those that love them. Love ye your enemies and do good and lend hoping for nothing again and your reward shall be great."

To love one's enemies and finally — convert them into friends — one must use a certain type of super salesmanship. A certain salesman selling an intangible product, remarked that he had to sell himself to most of his customers before they would believe in and purchase his product. He said that his greatest source of satisfaction was derived, not from accomplishing a sale but from breaking down the skepticism or prejudice of his customer. Before he could complete a sale, he had to first convince his customer of his personal integrity; of his very real desire to be of sincere service.

Sometimes it might be wise and also Christian to feel ourselves to be enemies, converted enemy could prove to be a warm and sincere friend; could become a new person with a finer and broader outlook on life. Sometimes in the act of administering a barrage of love will lift a load from the rankling conception of the fundamental good latent in all humanity.

When an enemy finds we are not on opposing sides but in interest in directing hostility towards us. When he is ultimately convinced that what we're selling is love, not hatred, he will then wide the gateway to his heart.

When we love an enemy and teach him to love us, all miserable and corrupt shackles fall away from our souls. The most resonant music of life that was muted within us, will swing into full harmony with the Divine Symphony.

I stretched a timid hand to cool
The embers of your hate,
But, grim and stern, a sentinel
Stood guard inside your gate.

I used the magnet of my smile
Against your fortress tall,
It crumbled into worthless dust
Against your stone fast wall.

Un daunted, I returned with love,
All that my arms could hold;
With patience, humble and sublime,
I wrapped it fold by fold.

Around the key that locked your door;
Then, suddenly, within,
The portals of your softened heart
Flung wide and let me in.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Mr. O. L. — It's her first year at college. He's getting her there.

Harried — I have problems! I can't explain or discuss with anyone.

Mr. O. L. — Harried's mother died two years ago. Harried was 16 then and still in high school. Left with the aid of her older sister and brother-in-law, her teachers and friends, she persisted in her studies, but with the cruel fate that engulfed her and it's mother, and one of a devoted wife.

Now, however, I feel helpless to cope with her new found vision over courses which are too hard, friends who are too scarce, and dates which are too few and far between. My other children didn't go to college, so she won't listen to their advice. I want the Dean or someone on the campus to take her in hand. But she says no one can possibly understand her feelings. She does nothing but sulk and cry. . . .

Harriet L. — There are certain problems I cannot discuss. I must work out alone. I can't discuss them with anyone. Dad. He shouldn't feel bad about that because the truth is, I couldn't discuss them with Mother in that department. sweet and patient as she was. And my brother and sister can't help me keep up with the other girls scholastically and socially.

I'm coming to feel I don't belong in college at all. It's a struggle for Dad to send me. He'd decided this is what I want, so he had hoped for the best. But Mother wouldn't want me to stay where I'm headed straight for the booby-prize. I must decide whether to change colleges, or quit taking and go to work. This is all wrong.

The Council — Harriet has been through some giant size leaps and her latest was swimming. Most colleges have special personnel, called Dean of Girls, house mother, guidance counsellor, etc. who are trained to bolster the wobbly newcomer until she regains her own legs and attains equilibrium.

Single-handedly, Harriet is trying to absorb crucial disheartenes in her life which call for the aid, through supportive counselling, of experts. The loss of her mother, the transplanting from home and family to a strange town, the sudden "adolescence" as a young adult when she is hard put to adjust to without the right sort of tailor-made help.

Her reluctance to seek help suggests that she may have a deep-seated, some guilt feelings. All the more reason to hurry to the guidance office. There, a wise, non-judging, straight-thinking adviser can help her to see them tangled with her friends, term papers, and dates in true perspective.

Lest Harriet thinks she's unique in having serious problems, the report from the University of Michigan that Windsor is very set to regulate their mental health clinic each year, exploding the "myth" of the happy, carefree collegian. Mental disturbances on the campus are not confined to "under-dispossed" and their seriousness is "underrated." It is claimed.

We urge Harriet to "sign up" for aid, even if there's a waiting list. Her problems are big, being is therapeutic. Mr. L. will be relieved to know help is on the way, and Harriet will not be left with a Herculean task of choosing between those hired hulls — help to want self-understanding and self-approbation.

Stories of Famous Hymns

GO TO DARK GETHSEMANE

Go to dark Gethsemane,
Ye that feel the tempter's power
Your Redeemer's conflict see;
Watch with Him one bitter hour;
Turn not from His griefs away;
Learn of Jesus Christ to pray.

Calvary's mournful mountain climb;
There, adoring at His feet,
Mark that mighty sin of time,
God's own sacrifice complete:
"It is finished!", hear Him cry;
Learn of Jesus Christ to die.

Early hasten to the tomb,
Where they laid His breathless clay;
All is solitude and gloom:
Who hath taken Him away?
Christ is risen! . He meets our eyes:
Saviour, teach us so to rise.

The Christian who accepts James Montgomery's invitation to share Christ's experiences at Gethsemane will quickly feel that he is close beside the Saviour as he goes from one disciple to another in his moving hymn.

Every hymnal believes the pilgrim to Gethsemane should learn a number of things during his journey. In the first stanza he suggests that he learn to pray. In the second stanza (not given here) he urges that he learn to bear the cross in the third that he learn to die and in the final verse that he watch the full impact of the triumph of Christ's resurrection.

The original version of the hymn appeared in 1820; the verses which appear above were published in 1825 as a revised version.

No roll of English hymn writers is complete without the name of James Montgomery. He was born at Irvine, Ayrshire, Scotland in 1771 and grew up in a deeply spiritual environment. His father was a Moravian minister and James joined a church during his student days at Fulneck, England.

Later on he became unhappy in his faith and drifted away from the church but this, happily, was but a temporary experience and when he was 43 he returned to the Christian fold. The return was for him a very moving occasion and he wrote a poem to commemorate the event.

Second Glance

By Viva Richmond Graham

"For they too are gatherers of fruit and frankincense, and that which they bring though fashioned of dreams, is raiment and food for your soul." — Kahlil Gibran.

• • •

"Of all the various groups with whom I've been privileged to work, none has been more rewarding and satisfying, than those devoted to the blind. People with impaired sight are remarkably cheerful, bright and maintain a positive attitude which always amazes me. I always received far more from them, than I ever could give . . ."

Such statement was made by a Belleville friend, the other day, and her remarks will be echoed and re-echoed, in Egypt, where due to the love and devotion of a blind man, the Arab literature has just acquired, officially, a new author. His name is William Shakespeare.

The surprising part, is, though this is the victory of more than a score of Arabian scholars, translators and critics in Cairo, the driving force has been 31-year-old Dr. Taha Hussein, author, critic and educator, who has been blind since he was a three years old. But he has "read" Shakespeare many times in English, French and German translations, and is considered the most eminent literary figure in Modern Egypt.

He finally decided Shakespeare should be in Arabic and as a chairman of the Cultural Committee of the Arab League, he found his opportunity. He was given $30,000 to cover the costs of translation and editing, and thus for the first time, Shakespeare's comedies, tragedies are making their entrance into the Arab world.

Political leaders nearly used this five year project which dormantly survived the crisis, when Britain, France and Israel troops attacked Sinai and the Suez Canal. Now, the fact is a little dramatic since the British Ambassador is only now being accepted for the first time since 1956.

But, the devotion and love of a blind man for Shakespeare has been the means by which the bard of Stratford-on-Avon is "in solid" with the first complete, authentic and unabridged Arabic translation of his plays. The last play translated is Hamlet. Already a number of people have brought out four volumes a month. The translations each six plays.—Henry IV (Parts I, II and III.) "Titus Andronicus" "Julius Caesar" and "Richard III." Remaining volumes are expected to come off the press over the next year.

The complete set, in a limited edition will be available and the government has already ordered 10,000 bound sets for distribution in libraries, schools, and universities. But what delights the backers of the enterprise mostly that a good Arabic set will be available to the masses for the first time in paperback at a popular price of 40 piastres ($1.10) — a theatre play volume.

Among the problems that had to be overcome in making this dream-come-true, was the controversy over whether Shakespeare should be translated into classical or colloquial Arabic. For example, one Egyptian critic ed Norman Ashour, a Cairo doctor, who wanted the plays brought to the "Arab in the street." Dr. Hussein, however, with most of the scholars, holding him, argued that colloquial Arabic did not compare with Shakespeare, although the English, himself, used prose in some sometimes used might sound "vulgar" to certain people."

Dr. Hussein has put that while President Nasser uses classical Arabic in most of his speeches, he occasionally drops into colloquial speech for effect. Even Dr. Hussein has used colloquial language in some of his novels addressed to the "man in the street" ing. But Dr. Hussein made the point that the man in the street understands classical Arabic perfectly and that all classic translations would be understood by Arabs in other countries, each of which has its own dialect. Dr. Hussein has stated that the translations must be done in verse.

In an interview Dr. Hussein was asked why Arabic, which has produced fine poetry and literary expression should be translated. Handling Shakespearean verse, and he answered:

"I know it is hard to explain, but I just know we produced no worth-while Shakespeare in Arabic verse."

Thus, at last, has the great English poet received unexpressible of human emotion" found the hearts of people in western civilization, guided by the love of a blind Egyptian for the works of William Shakespeare.

Young Couple Honored by Community

STIRLING — The neighbors on Mill and Baker Streets in Stirling gathered recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Haggerty and tendered the newly married young couple, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bunnett (nee Marient Haggerty) a presentation party.

The Rev. R. G. Fletcher was master of ceremonies. Readings were given by Miss Nancy Wilson, Mrs. Elizabeth Foster and Mrs. Ernest Wansborough. Messrs. Allan Fletcher and Kenneth Myers rendered a guitar and clarinet duet. The former gave a clarinet solo and the latter an accordion solo.

Mrs. Jack Ackers read an address and Mrs. Norman Ray and Mrs. Kenneth Myers made the presentation of a stop-up table, satin cushion and ash tray.

The recipients voiced thanks for the party and the gifts.

Refreshments were served and a social half-hour enjoyed.

Readers' Saturday Column

QUESTION:

Would you please explain the sweetbreads are so much trouble seems to be a misconception among a number of people as to what part of the animal they represent and can they be prepared other than breaded and fried, which is a most delightful fare in my opinion . . . Erma K.

ANSWER:

Sweetbread is the thymus gland of calf or lamb. Sometimes sweetbread from young beef is available and quite good. The sweetbread is in two parts, sometimes sold separately. The heart sweetbread (the "caught-in-the-throat" is the better, the throat sweetbread (the other half) being less compact. One pair of sweetbreads (without additions) will serve 4 people. They are always precooked before preparation. As soon as you bring them home soak them for 5 minutes in cold water, peel off thin membrane, covering carefully to retain shape. Cover with cold water to which you have added 1 tablespoon salt and 1 tablespoon lemon juice or vinegar and simmer 15 minutes. Drain and chill in cold water. This treatment firms the sweetbread and keeps it fresh, for it spoils readily.

CRUMBED SWEETBREAD:

1 lb. sweetbread, parboiled, chilled and sliced, 1 egg, 1 tablespoons milk, 3 cup fine dry bread or cracker crumbs, salt and pepper, 1-4 cup butter or margarine, parsley.

Beat egg, stir in milk. Dip sliced sweetbread in the egg mixture, then into crumbs to coat. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Heat butter or margarine in frying pan until hot, lay in the crumbed sweetbread and brown to a light golden brown on both sides. Remove to hot platter.

CREAMED SWEETBREAD:

2 pairs sweetbreads (approx. 1 lb), 1-4 cup butter, 1-3 cup flour, 3 cups milk, salt and pepper to taste toast or patty shells, parsley or paprika.

Prepare sweetbreads as above. When cool, cut into uniform 1" cubes. Melt butter on top of a double boiler over direct heat. Blend in flour, then gradually add the milk, stirring constantly until thick. Add sweetbreads. When ready to serve, add the sweetbread and continue to cook over hot water until heated through. Serve on toast over crisp toast or patty shells. Garnish with chopped parsley or dash of paprika.

Note: One sliced hard-cooked eggs or 1-3 lb. sautéed sliced mushrooms may be added to the creamed mixture.

NOTE:

Cooked sweetbread may be sliced and used in salads as you would use chicken meat.

A vote of thanks to the program of the year was taken. The best one was the February pot-luck supper, at which time Mrs. Wallis, well known auctioneer, auctioned off articles of all life, also an inspiring address by district president, Mrs. R. Tucker. A mammoth pot-luck in June meeting when fish members were taken on a tour of the old court house by Mr. R. Robson.

Mrs. Ellsworth expressed the pleasure of electing as president this past year, and congratulated Mrs. Tucker on her new officers. Mrs. Tucker declared all offices vacant and Mrs. Meale took the minutes of the installation.

QUESTION BOX

Question — Please have a column about who can, and who does, give a bridal shower. I know it is not proper for a bride's mother to give one, but can a member of the bride groom do so? What about other members, both near and far? I read your column every day and like it very much. — Mrs. H. R., Penticton, B.C.

Answer — I have answered this question so many times that it is obvious that until the circumstance "hits home" nobody pays any attention to the rules we've set. No relative of the bride or bridegroom should ever give a shower, for the reason is that guests attending such a function are obliged to bring gifts. Relatives of either of the families should not ask people to bring gifts to one of their own family. Friends of the bride should give the shower in this manner.

Question — May I bride carry a bouquet of colored flowers when she is dressed in a white, full-length wedding gown? My daughter loves red roses and wants to carry them, but I've been told when she is married next month, she is a very formal wedding and it just doesn't seem right to me. — Mrs. B. E. F., Chicago, Ill.

Answer — It most certainly can! Aside from the fact that it is traditional for a bride to carry flowers, I think a bouquet of red roses would look against the white of her wedding gown.

Question — Perhaps you can help me with a problem. I am going to be married in May and my father has decorated to give me uncle and an older brother who would also give me away? If it turns out that my uncle is the correct person, I would not want to hurt my brother, but I certainly don't want my uncle anyone.. Mrs. M. B., Fairhaven, N. J.

Answer — You Uncle should be the one to give you away and I am sure that you will offend anyone, even if you do not have your brother as an usher. It is perfectly proper for the uncle to act in this capacity and it is not a "must" that he be the one to give the bride away.

Successful Living

By Doris Clark

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

Ex-Mental Patient Holds Job

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS: — A few weeks ago I hired a young man who had just come out of a mental hospital because the social worker asked me to. She said he had made a good recovery and there was every chance that he would make a good employee.

His work seems to be O.K. but he is awfully silent. He hardly talks to anyone and when they speak to him he looks nervous, almost alarmed. I have never told anyone about his illness but I think they think he is queer. I feel as if I'm walking on eggs. It would be terrible if anything happened him while he was working for us. — JUMPY TOO.

DEAR JUMPY TOO: — You mean he might be like Humpty Dumpty and fall to pieces?

From what you say I doubt it. After a big shock like mental illness, it just takes a long time to get sociable and easy with people again, that's all. When I did my social work thesis on Ex-patients of Mental Hospitals, I found that individuals who were discharged from hospitals as able to work continued to improve in their work environment for as long as 10 months or a year or two. The work itself had important therapeutic value. They felt better to be useful and as they achieved things, morale and mental health improved.

This is NOT really so strange. We all get a boost out of feeling useful or doing a job well — and this makes for mental health. Keep on with your young man; give him encouragement and confidence and he will react by giving you more than your money's worth of work and loyalty.

DEAR DORIS: — My business partner died of a coronary. People said he "never learned to play."

In contrast, a client seems to play all the time. His work day is short. He knocks off for golf early in summer; he takes a winter holiday; his wife and he are always giving parties.

I grew up to work hard and this kind of carrying on seems pointless. Is this what is meant by "learning to play?" — GRINDSTONE.

DEAR GRINDSTONE: — It could be. In any case your client is still alive and apparently enjoying himself. Probably if you followed him around during the day you would find he knows how to work, too, or he wouldn't be able to afford the holidays and parties.

Recreation and play are not pointless, but necessary. The tensions of today are often far more than the human frame should have to stand. Work — especially the sedentary kind — is likely to key us up, and if we stay in this state of emergency for long periods, the body may rebel. Hence, headaches, excessive fatigue, stomach upsets, coronaries and many other dire results. In "The Stress of Life" Hans Selye shows just how bad tensions can be for us.

If you haven't learned to play, take this warning seriously. For you, "play" may take the form of reading, hobby like carpentry, music, a sport like golf, or curling, community service, sociability with friends, or going for walks. Or birdwatching or finger painting: If you see your zest for life slipping or feel inordinately tired or bored, find a way to play and go to it! Everything will improve when you do.

Scouting activities

By CHRIS F. LEDGAY

ANNUAL SCOUTERS-COUNCIL GET-TOGETHER

What may well be described as an outstanding event took place this week at the Manor when Scouters and committeemen, their wives, husbands and guests, shared in a fine banquet and dance.

Credit for the evening must go to W. O. (Bud) Walters who arranged and chaired the program.

Despite the once-operative weather, and the failure of the lights at a crucial time the 230 in attendance welcomed this opportunity to get together. The ladies each received a floral favor as they entered.

Council secretary Jack Hodgson sought to thank the Scouters for their sacrificial enthusiastic leadership, paying tribute also to the wives and husbands without whose patient understanding Scouting could not carry on. ADC Wm. Sweet replied to the toast, thanking Council for this opportunity to have their unsung partners present on this occasion.

Chairman Walters introduced the head table, comprised of those serving Scouting as district council executive officers and district staff, with their wives and husbands: secretary J. W. Hodgson; president, L. G. Monteith; treasurer, F. L. Andrews; vice-president, W. O. Walters; past president, F. J. Lancaster; District Commissioner P. L. Alcock; ADC's W. H. Sweet, Mrs. C. D. Ashley, D. D. Hickson and R. Williamson.

The district commissioner then spoke, calling on Mrs. Ashley (ADC Training) to present Basic A certificates to A. M. Green, 13th, and L. C. Kellett, 11th; Pathfinder Aleka certificates to J. I. Dodge, 17th; F. A. Noble and P. J. Lally, 3rd; W. G. H. Haggerty, 11th and G. A. Beale, 17th. He commended these and many others who are advancing their Scouting knowledge through training courses. He announced the next such courses for both Pack and Troop leaders being held April 24-28 with some 45 expected. He then reviewed recent developments and changes in leadership among different groups. The district commissioner also expressed the appreciation of the Scouters on the excellence of this occasion.

President Lloyd Monteith stated that the large attendance of Scouters and their "Scouting widows or widowers" was most gratifying and that it was a privilege to show Council's high regard for their continued efforts. He dwelt on the field of handicapped Scouting, remarking that Belleville was well established in one phase of this with the excellent packs and troops operating at the School for the Deaf. He praised Frank Lancaster for his fine work as group contact chairman in the expected sponsorship of Cubs by the School for Retarded Children in Belleville. While this will be a wonderful step, he also asked groups to be mindful of other forms of handicaps which existed.

ADC Don Hickson presented the challenge of Covering. He noted certain changes which could be made in Scouting practices to hold the older boys but insisted that the principles laid out by B-P applied in this changing age. He urged pack and troop Scouters to think and think Covering with its theme of "Service." He stressed the value of an active, interesting outdoor program to help boys through the difficulties of adolescence.

Through the kindness of several local merchants "Friends of Scouting." It was possible to present a considerable number of fine door and dance prizes.

A program of dancing, with music provided by Tom Thorne's orchestra, concluded a most enjoyable evening.

We thank Mr. Jack Hodgson for this report.

CAMPBELLFORD

'Gardening' Topic at Rotary Club

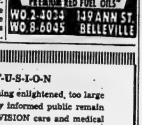
CAMPBELLFORD — Mr. George Palliser was the guest speaker at the Campbellford Rotary Club, when he contrasted some modern practices in gardening with those of some years ago.

The trend of modern times is to purchase plants half grown in a greenhouse, enabling the gardener to have comparatively fast results.

The flourist stocks his seeds just after Christmas, preparatory to the spring plant trade. The slower-growing plants are started first, great care being exercised in conditioning them so they will be strong, healthy and blight resistant when ready for market. The hazards of greenhouse growth are similar to those in a garden, so plants must be dusted, fumigated and sprayed by the grower.

BEST GARDEN CONDITIONER

In this area, generally speaking, the soil is heavy and short of phosphorous. The best conditioner for soil is peat moss, which when spread 4 inches deep and dug into six inches of the soil, with milliorganite added, gives many maximum results. Weeds are increased multiplied by the addition of manures unless they are treated by heat to temperatures between 160 and 200 degrees higher than 200 degrees would render them useless.



In purchasing garden plants the buyer should remember the best looking plants are not always the best. They should be hardened to withstand the winds of outdoors growing. Above all, the gardener should not overcrowd his plants. Ample room for growth must be allowed. Mr. Palliser recommended a number of patent sprays for various purposes.

He recommended that a few bags of lime in the fall in cleaning up the garden would save many hours in the spring. Tomato stocks and tomato plants should be burned to destroy insects which inject live in them all winter.

The speaker was introduced by Gordon Whitehorne and thanked by Gordon Oder.

Spring Care for Your Plants

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

New Easter plants should be isolated from your present plants until you have examined them closely for plant insects. Look for red spider, mealy bug or white fly.

Use a mild dust or spray for red spider, or white fly. A touch of alcohol on both pests will kill mealy bugs. These are little waxy pests that look like white batten in leaf joints.

Cut flowers and potted plants in bloom will last much longer if kept in a cool room out of direct sun. Cut off half an inch of stem each day in cut flowers, and wash thoroughly and dry vase before filling with fresh water each day. There are tablets to disolve in water to prolong the life of cut flowers. Keep temperatures well below 70 degrees. When these are used the water is not changed during the life of the flowers.

Azaleas need plenty of water, 60 degrees temperature and east window. Clivarsia — water frequently, 65 degrees temp. Discard plant after bloom is finished.

Cyclamen, water from bottom by setting pot in a pan of tepid water, 60 degrees. Sink pot in semi-shade and keep watered through summer. It may live and bloom again next winter if brought in before frost.

Easter lily, keep cool, out of direct sun. Plant bulb out in garden and it may bloom again in August and again next year.

Foliage plants usually need less light than flowering plants keep them cool. Sun lvies one hour a day to keep them in good color. Sponge or spray leaves to keep them clean and healthy.

CRAB GRASS CONTROL

Now is the time to apply preemergence crab grass control. Spray thoroughly. Any missed spots will flow up in new crab grass plants in May.

If you do neglect this chore there is also a post emergence crab grass spray. Use both carefully according to directions

Feed lawns to keep the plants strong. They will have a better chance to compete with crab grass.

Get those tender annuals into flats or pots now, better still plant three seeds in peat fiber pots. When they have their second pair of leaves nip off the two weaker plants and allow the strongest to grow. Long term plants such as snaps and carnations should be started in February or buy the plants. You can start asters, petunias, dahlias, marigolds, both African and French, nasturtiums, annual phlox, zinnias, straw flowers and stocks.

If you are using flats or large pots fill the lower half with good soil and cover with an inch or two of ground peat moss, or vermiculite. Plant seeds in this, keep moist but not wet. Cover until seeds sprout then set in good light. Avoid crowding and keep cool. Crowding and high temperatures make for soft growth. Set out pots or flats on mild days late in May. Accustom gradually harden off by leaving covered outdoors cool nights in May and uncovered on warm nights. The plants will be ready to set out in mid-or late May and should be compact sturdy small plants.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Its been a long time since the Old Lady of the Moira let her hair down and feuded, fussed and fought, sportswise, with any organization that represented Kingston.

In fact not since senior baseball went into a state of coma, and outright professionalism paved a parting of the hockey ways, have these these two ancient rivals been at each other's throat, so to speak.

Now, if an idea of Marse Robert Temple, chief baby of the Belleville Bobcats burgeons into bloom, the mildewed gauntlet will be dragged into the open and tossed into the softball amphitheatre.

The boss Bengal of the Cats, his team already in the five-club circuit of the Belleville District Softball League, is seeking an interlocking home-and-home series with each of the five clubs of the Kingston Amateur Softball Association.

And word has it, that if this is favorable to the KASA squads, the new Joyce Real Estate entry in the BDSL may go forth and do likewise. Four of the KASA teams are from the Limestone City, the other from Brockville.

Mr. Temple and Bobcats manager Bill Old attended the annual meeting of the KASA the other night and "propositioned" the 1961 executive which by the way is again headed by my old friend Harold Langabeer.

The Temple-Joyce suggestion was not greeted with a unanimous opening of the arms by the Kingston body. Representatives of three clubs expressed willingness to go along with the idea. The other Kingston team and Brockville looked askance at the proposition.

Paul (Whig Standard) Rimstead tells me the discussion was lengthy and nothing of a definite nature emerged from the sittings. The KASA will issue a statement of "for or formed" in ten days.

"Playing a home-and-home series with the Kingston teams would not interfere with the schedule of the Belleville District circuit," Mr. Temple told this corner yesterday afternoon. "It means the Cats and the Joyces would play one game a week with the eastern clubs. One week they would be here, the next in Kingston or Brockville."

The Bobcats object believes that with lights here and the fine facilities of the Fair Grounds available, the KASA teams would prove an added attraction for fans of the city and district.

"They would create more interest in softball here and with all games played under the lights there would be a marked increase at the box office."

A Kingston report of the meeting stated that points would count in the KASA and the Belleville teams would use their points picked up in the series to decide the final finish of the Cats and Joyces in the BDS league. However I imagine the executive of the local league may have something to say about that.

Temple suggested at the meeting that if not all Kingston teams fell in with the idea a special series with a trophy could be arranged. He felt whichever Kingston team were interested could go ahead with the plan. However the two dissenting teams Brockville and Kingston Ace Motors, said they would go along with the idea if that is what their league wanted.

I do not know if the Bobcats and Joyces need the sanction of the Belleville District executive to play the proposed series with Kingston, but the local body may have something to say regarding the points question.

And in case somebody raises the question, OASA president Don Lee said today that the matter was strictly a leagues affair. The governing body has no jurisdiction.

Incidentally Bob Temple said that the proposed Kingston series could be the forerunner to a first in softball history, the formation of an Eastern Ontario circuit composed of teams from Belleville, Kingston, Peterborough, Oshawa and others.

The series will likely be discussed at the meeting of the Belleville District League scheduled for tomorrow afternoon when the schedule is to be finalized.

Hawks' Power Wilts Wings In Balfour Breaks Arm

CHICAGO (CP)—The doughty Chicago Black Hawks unleashed a terrific third period drive Friday night to whip Detroit Red Wings 6-3 and pull to within one game of their first Stanley Cup in 23 years.

The Hawks, given "a real blasting" by coach Rudy Pilous between the second and third periods for twice blowing one-goal leads, came out fighting the third and pelted 24 shots on Detroit goalie Terry Sawchuk—three slipping past him.

The win gave them a 3-2 lead in games in the best-of-seven series with the sixth contest in Detroit Sunday. If the pattern of the teams doing all their winning on home ice prevails Sunday — meaning Detroit would square the series—the seventh and deciding game will be played in Chicago Tuesday.

The victory set up cries of "just one more, just one more" when the jubilant Hawk clattered into their dressing room.

But the shouting died down when word came that Murray Balfour suffered a fractured left forearm and will be out for the rest of the series.

FELL INTO POST

Balfour, rich winger on the Hawks' No. 1 line with Bobby Hull and Bill (Red Hay, spilled heavily into the goal post in the third period when thrown off balance after being tripped by Detroit's Howie Young.

Pilous said he "gave 'em hell" before the third period got under way, "I just wanted to find out if this is an honest hockey club or not," he related to reporters after the game.

"They took criticism like thoroughbreds and came back to win it," added general manager Tommy Ivan.

The Hawks had the stimulation, skating and their power that forced the Red Wings into almost complete disorganization at the finish after the two teams had slugged it out to a 3-3 tie after the second period.

Stan Mikita, 21-year-old sophomore centre, was the big gun in Chicago's offensive burst in the third. He scored twice and set up the other for defenceman Pierre Pilote.

Balfour scored in the first and again in the second. Ron Murphy added the other Chicago tally.

For the Red Wings, it was Leo Lafleur, Gordie Howe and Vic Stasiuk doing the stopping.

The hectic struggle, before 16,666 screaming fans in the stuffy Chicago Stadium, brought about six outbreaks of fighting.

Defenceman Pete Goegan of the Wings and Hay slugged it out in the second period, each drawing major penalties from referee Frank Udvari for fighting. For a while a general melee threatened as players shoved and kicked as the linesmen jumped in to stop the principals.

BOO UDVARI

Udvari — the man criticized by Chicago fans after the fifth game in Detroit Wednesday—was roundly booed when he appeared on the ice before the game. An orange peel was tossed at him.

Pilous, fined $200 by President Clarence Campbell of the National Hockey League for his caustic outcry against Udvari's officiating Wednesday, indicated he wasn't happy with the referee's work Friday night.

But some of his players quickly piped up. "Watch it, Rudy or you'll bet fined again."

Pilous' old remark sarcastically: "Well, they finally got Gordie Howe with a penalty. He was holding so long it looked as if he wanted a ride up the ice."

Detroit coach Sid Abel, asked about Udvari's refereeing, said with a wry smile: "I have no comments to make about the officiating."

In addition to Balfour, the Hawks lost a couple of lesser casualties, Defenceman Dollard St. Laurent came out of the game with a wrenched knee and Hay had six stitches put in a cut over his left eye.

A fourth spot on the team was left open. Don Fontana of Toronto, the country's No. 2 player, is still considered the main contender although pressure of business obliged him to retire from international tennis several months ago.

Giants Take Third Straight

Unbeaten Redlegs Trump Cards

They'll Do It Every Time — By Jimmy Hatlo

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

There's no club like the Philadelphia Phillies to give Mike McCormick a fresh start.

The young, left - hander, last year's earned run leader in the National League, had given up a winning home run by Pittsburgh's Bill Virdon on his first pitch when he appeared in relief in Tuesday's opener. But Friday night, as a starter, McCormick was back at the old stand, out-dueling Art Mahaffey in a double three-hitter as San Francisco Giants defeated the Phils 3-0.

McCormick, 22, practically has made a career of shackling the Phillies. This was his fifth three-hit job, and the Phils have been the victims in three of them. It also was McCormick's fifth shutout, fifth against Philadelphia.

It was the Giants' third straight success and left them all alone in second place behind Cincinnati. The Reds remained unbeaten, winning their third with a five-run ninth inning at St. Louis for a 7-3 decision. Pittsburgh rapped Los Angeles 10-2, and Chicago Cubs tame their first 3-2 over Milwaukee, on Sammy Taylor's two-run, two-out homer in the ninth.

McCormick, now 12-5 against the Phils as he starts his sixth season with the Giants, walked two, struck out five and didn't allow a hit for the first seven batters he faced before the sixth inning with a single. The Phils had reached second and third with one out in the seventh, after singles by Tony Taylor and Clay Dalrymple Smith and a sacrifice, but McCormick walked Pancho Herrera intentionally, loading the bases, and then got Cal Neeman to hit into an inning-ending first double play.

The Giants had almost as long a wait with Mahaffey, a 22-year-old right-hander.

Art walked the first two Giants to run in the first inning after three walks, one intentional, and a shutout on Tommy Davis' eighth-inning homer, and then lost a shot at his first complete game in the majors when an error and two singles loaded the bases with none out in the ninth.

Dodger Clem Labine saved it in his first appearance against his old mates. He struck out Maury Wills and Junior Gilliam before Davis, driving in all the runs Los Angeles runs, blooped a two - run single. Then Duke Snider grounded to second for the final out.

The Reds trailed 3-0 until Wally Post walloped a 500-foot homer with a man on against Cutr Simmons in the sixth, then went to work on losing reliever Al Cicotte and Bob Tiefenauer in the ninth. Ed Bailey's double, Stan Musial's bunted single tied it 3-3 and Ed Kasko's single won it for reliever Bill Henry. Stan Musial homered for the Cards.

A single by Al Heist came ahead of Taylor's winning shot on a 3-2 pitch by Milwaukee's Bob Buhl. Don Elston was in relief, after homers by Frank Bolling and Hank Aaron had given the Braves the lead against Bob Anderson.

Softball Readies for New Season

If softball doesn't go over with a bang in Belleville and its surrounding areas this season, it certainly should not be because of a lack of organization.

No less than four separate meetings, three softball and one of the umpires are scheduled on Sunday and Monday of this coming week.

The Bay of Quinte Umpires' Association is slated to meet Sunday afternoon at the CNRA Park at two o'clock. All members of the Association, as well as any others who would like to take up umpiring are urged to attend.

Just one hour later, at 3.00 p.m at the West Moira Street Firehall, the Belleville and District Softball League will convene to finalize plans for the new season.

This is the loop's entry deadline meeting and it is important that all clubs be represented, along with their $25 entry fee. Teams expected to enter are Belleville Bobcats, Belleville Joyce Real Estate, Trenton Hallman's, Colonial Merchants, ACAF Flyers and Picton Welts.

Monday night, Allan Sills, softball representative of the Belleville Minor Sports Association, has called a meeting at the Recreation Centre at 8.00 o'clock. All persons interested in organizing or coaching minor teams are invited to attend.

And earlier in the evening, at 7.00 p.m., the Belleville Commercial Softball League will hold a meeting at the home of Bob Blaid, 133 West Bridge Street. All teams are asked to send a representative.

Liston Threatens 'Quits'!

Wants New Manager

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Sonny Liston, No. 1 challenger for Floyd Patterson's heavyweight title, threatened Friday to quit the ring unless Joseph (Pep) Barone steps out as his manager.

"I'm asking Pep to give up his contract with me so I can get a title fight," Liston said.

Patterson several times has said he won't defend against Liston until the Philadelphia heavyweight divorces himself from some of Liston's title champion claims have a financial interest in Liston.

"The way it is now," says Liston, "Patterson won't fight me because of the men he says are behind Pep."

A U.S. Senate subcommittee last winter said Frank Palermo and Frankie Carbo, were undercover managers of Liston and described Barone as a front man for them.

Liston, winner of 354 of 35 fights, says he won't allow Barone of Allentown, Pa., to sell the contract.

"I want Pep to give it to me for nothing," the Negro fighter says.

"We're good friends and I think he'll do it. I'll get me another manager who can help me land a fight with Patterson."

Tiger Hurler One-Hits White Sox

By ED WILEY
Associated Press Staff Writer

Little more than a week ago Frank Lary was the biggest mystery of spring training for Detroit Tigers. Rolled upon as one of the stars of the club, he had a 10.06 earned run average and had been tagged for 17 runs in one stretch of seven exhibition innings.

Lary was still a mystery Friday, but it was Chicago White Sox, not the Tigers, who were looking for the answer. The sturdy righthander pitched the first one-hitter of his career for a 7-0 breeze in his first regular season appearance.

Lary came within an inch of pitching a no-hitter. The only hit was a scratch single off shortstop Chico Fernandez's glove by Jim Landis in the third inning.

In other American League games, Minnesota Twins remained unbeaten with a 3-2 decision at Baltimore over Baltimore Orioles and Washington Senators won their first, spilling Cleveland Indians, 5-3.

Lary, just turned 30, walked only two batters, one in the first after Landis's hit before giving up a pass to pitch-hitter Earl Torgeson in the ninth — and struck out five. He faced 30 men, three over the minimum, before squaring his career record against the White Sox at 13-13.

It also was Lary's first shutout against the White Sox, who went down behind Frank Baumann, last year's earned run leader. The Chicago southpaw, who won Monday's opener in relief at Washington, was belted for five hits and three runs in the first-two innings with Al Kaline's double bringing in the run Lary needed in the first. Bob Shaw then gave up the other four Detroit runs in the third inning, two on Rocky Colavito's first home run.

Camilo Pascual gave the wins their second victory with a five-hit job against the Orioles. The curve-balling righthander walked two and struck out 12, losing a shutout on Jackie Brandt's two-run triple in the fifth. Zoilo Versalles doubled and scored on Harmon Killebrew's single off Jack Fisher in the opening inning for the Twins, then drove in Billy Gardner, who had doubled, with the tie-breaking clincher in the seventh.

A single by Geno Woodling, a walk and a single by Danny O'Connell gave Washington the decisive run against Cleveland righthander Gary Bell and left no doubt that these are indeed a new bunch of Senators. Bell had won seven in a row, going back to July 15, 1958.

Joe McClain, 27, a right-hander making his first major league appearance, beat the Indians with a five-hitter. McClain drove in the first run with a double, walked none, struck out three and had a shutout until the eighth.

Stanley Cup Payoffs

And the Hours Are Good

CHICAGO (CP)—Members of the team winning the Stanley Cup will receive approximately $3,000 each and those of the runner-up team approximately $2,000. The amounts included winnings in the semi-finals.

For the final the unit for the winner is $1,750 and for the loser $750, a difference of $1,000.

Units in the semi-finals are $1,250 for each winner and $750 for each loser.

The National Hockey League guarantees a total of $175,000 before reaching the playoffs, the amount is fixed and players' shares are not based on percentages of gates or profits or other considerations.

The league's contribution is in units of 18 to each participating club. Thus, the contribution to each team winning a semi-final is $22,500, or 18 units of $1,250 each; to semi-final losers $13,500 each in 18 units of $750. By the same unit distribution the cup-winning team gets $31,500 and the runnerup $13,500, making the estimated individual amounts $1,750 and $750, respectively.

If the teams wish to vary the 18 units splits—such as a contribution of 20 units to losers, a smaller amount to a recently-acquired player—that is a matter for the teams themselves to decide.

Three Games Down

Amherst Not Yet Out

GALT (CP) — Amherts Ramblers, trailing Galt Terriers 3-0 in the Eastern Canada Allan Cup finals, haven't given up yet.

But they admit they'll need a greatly improved brand of hockey to perform the impossible — win four straight on the road.

"We'll need four games of perfect hockey," said playing coach Jacquet Monette who has been starring goal for the Ramblers all season.

The Ramblers will get their first comeback change here tonight. They'll be the visitors for the fourth game of the best-of-seven series.

The winner will face western champion Winnipeg Maroons in the Canadian final which will be played in the East.

"We must stay on the ice, says Monette who has stopped 119 shots as his club has bowed 5-3, 5-0 and 4-3. In the third game Thursday Ramblers incurred 11 minors, three majors, a 10-minute misconduct penalty and a game misconduct for their part in a wild, rough game.

BRAWL IN SECOND

Most of those penalties were packed into a 20-minute pugnacious 23 - minute second - period brawl, which overshot the mark on the penalty box and involved police. Both teams were warned that a repetition of the second period play could cause expulsion from the playoffs.

Two new neutral referees have been authorized for the fourth game here. CAHA president Jack Roxburgh of Simcoe, Ont., are from Montreal and replace Charlie Knox and Dick Munn of Montreal who worked the first three games.

Both clubs have agreed that the ice surface should be resurfaced in the first two games, the third - game explosion may never have occurred.

Monette thinks his club can play better. Sam Gregory and Frank Torrington, for instance, have been playing pretty well, but they could be better, the coach said. "They usually average five or six shots on goal each period but they're not getting them here."

LARRY TWO EVEN

Terriers, undefeated in a 10-game playoff march to the championship, are the class of the nal, have been playing without two regular forwards. Left winger Gerry Allen returned in the third game of the series and there is possibility that captain Buch Martin will play in the fourth game.

The cast of Martin's injured left foot—a broken bone and four-stitch cut — was removed Friday and he skated for the first time in more than a week. The big centre re-enlisted in the club's leading scorer was injured in the second game of the all - Ontario finals against Houyn-Noranda.

FORT ERIE (CP) — First Minister, ranked as one of North America's best two-year-olds in 1960 when he won the Flash Stakes and the Grand Union Hotel Stakes at Saratoga, captured the feature race here Friday.

The gelding was ridden by Charlie Boland and defeated Mr. Brooks by 2½ lengths. Birewood was third.

First Minister paid $4.20, $2.50 and $2.10 when he won the Track Rhythm for a quinella of $9.60.

There was a spectacular spill at the finish of the third race. Jockey Jerry Fliri, ridden by Jack Arterburn, slid in the deep mud as he asked for the finish line. The two-year-old filly took a complete flip through the air and Arterburn as thrown over her head. The mud saved the jockey who was unharmed.

How, Where To Check For Leaks

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

Poor cooling system circulation — due to rust, scale, sludge and corrosion — is the common cause of overheating (and, of course, the resulting low gas mileage), but loss of water is often the most baffling.

Occasionally it's merely a question of overfilling which results in loss through the radiator overflow. Keep the water level an inch or two below the filler pipe neck, to avoid this. Radiator leakage due to cracks or holes can often be traced via the white (lime) stains which show up on the core.

When checking, also make sure that the petcock at the bottom is fully closed and water tight. Split, cracked, rotted hose and loose connections are frequent offenders, too. Other leakage suspects include the water pump, expansion plugs and heater connections. Should you have reason to fear that a condition such as loose cylinder bolts, head warpage, cracks, etc., is possible, let your mechanic make the inspection.

From J. V.: "My power steering is acting up. On and off, it seems that full manual effort is needed to steer, and there is also a rattling noise which, I think is from the steering system."

(A) It sounds very much like insufficient hydraulic fluid, or possibly air in the system.

H. M. writes: "When I casually mentioned to a service station attendant that my car was hard to start but only on cold mornings, he said it wasn't setting the automatic choke properly. Can you translate this for me?

(A) Depress the gas pedal once before attempting to start. This will give a shot of fuel so that carburetor gets a rich enough mixture for cold engine starting.

* * *

R. M. asks: "The fan belt on my '59 car, which I bought last Fall, is so tight there is no slack at all. Would this be the wrong size, or do belts shrink?

(A) It must be the wrong size if it is too tight. Belts do tend to stretch rather than shrink.

From I. C.: "High engine heat causes scorching of parts and breakdown of engine oil, poor gas mileage and vapor lock. Why then do you say that a hot engine is better?

(A) You are speaking of extremely high temperatures. Our point is that an engine which tends to run cool — or is rarely driven at speeds to reach 180 degrees or higher — encourages rapid, sludge formation, which is the engines worst enemy.

* * *

From F. W.: "Just a week ago, my new '61 sedan was delivered. I've already had it back to the dealer to correct the carb setting and a brake squeal. They adjusted the carburetor but said the brake squeal will soon disappear by itself. Will it?"

(A) The dealer is probably right. New car brake squeal is usually caused by high spots which soon wear down and get quiet.

A year ago, a part-time newspaper man figured he had a "big scoop" when he wrote that Garibaldi Park in British Columbia would be one of the 1968 Winter Olympic Games. "I did it more as a joke at the time," says Dave Matthews of Vancouver, who makes his living as a dental technician.

Joke or not, it has developed into serious business, so much so that this wilderness 75 miles north of Vancouver has a good chance of having its bid sent to the International Olympic Committee. The IOC has the final word on such matters and it will make its decision known early in 1962.

Canada isn't the only country in the running. It has been reported that Japan and Germany would like to stage the 1968 Games.

Canada never has held a Winter or Summer Games. There would be some lively discussion when the Canadian Olympic Association meets in Toronto next Saturday to consider bids from Garibaldi and Banff - Lake Louise.

MAY DEFER DECISION

Under the rules, the COA must make its recommendation to the international committee. But don't count on the COA making up its mind next week. There's a strong rumor going around that the B.C. group would like the COA to defer its decision a year.

High - pressure groups from the Garibaldi and Banff committees have popped up in Eastern Canada in the last few weeks. Among their luggage were briefs, and models of their sites.

They tub - thumped in such places as Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto. They talked to federal government officials, newspaper, radio and television types.

Who will get the nod from the COA? That is anybody's guess but the Garibaldi Park site has received strong support from A. Sidney Dawes of Montreal, Canadian member of the IOC.

Dawes and Matthews surveyed the area after the 1960 Winter Games in Squaw Valley, Calif., and Dawes found it "highly desirable."

At the 1960 annual meeting of the Canadian Olympic Association, members of the Banff-Lake Louise squirmed and fidgeted in their seats while Dawes spoke in glowing terms of the Garibaldi site for nearly half an hour.

He didn't mention Banff-Lake Louise.

Dawes is a powerful member in Canadian Olympic affairs but whether or not he'll be able to swing it for British Columbia remains to be seen.

Jim Worrall, 40-year-old Toronto lawyer, is expected to succeed Ken Farmer of Montreal as COA president next Saturday.

"I'm open - minded on this whole thing," says Worrall. "All I want to see is Canada put in a serious bid and that it be the best possible we can make."

Fibber McGee, Molly Show High Point in Radio History

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The passing of Marian Jordan last week was a personal loss to the many who remember the Fibber McGee and Molly show as a high point in radio history.

Mrs. Jordan and her breezy husband Jim created 1001 millions of homes every Tuesday night for almost 20 years, not as entertainers but as warm friends. Today's youngsters, fed on the violence and manufactured comedy of the visual medium, might wonder why their elders listened in such numbers to Fibber McGee and Molly.

The answer is a commodity hard to find nowadays: Humor. The humor laughs came not from the sick or brassy comedy of night clubs. The laughs were from the heartland of America — indeed, the Jordans were both from Peoria, Ill.

The format differed from other comedy shows, which were largely off - shoots from vaudeville. Fibber McGee and Molly was the first successful situation comedy, an art form that has since been overdone in TV.

The situation in Fibber McGee and Molly could be the simplest. Perhaps Fibber would set out to tune the piano, and Molly sage counsel of Molly. He would persist in his bumbling way despite the interruption of a verbal Niagara.

The "bong-bong" of the door chimes at 79 Wistful Vista would announce each arrival. There would be Gildersleeve of the rumbling chuckle, played by Hal Peary, And the Old Timer, originated by Cliff Arquette, with his familiar Wallace Wimple, dose by Bill Thompson. And Gale Gordon's Mayor Latrivia was a masterpiece of mounting ire, ending with a splutter and a tense "McGee!" Arthur Q. Bryan's Doc Gamble was a master heckler.

IN CAME TEENY

Molly was generally for Fibber's side, alternately chiding and calming him. But once during the show she would disappear into one of the kitchens. That would signal the arrival of Teeny, the 4-year-old moppet. That was Marian's other role.

Don Quinn, who collaborated with Paul Fairman and Jack Leslie in writing McGee, said Mrs. Jordan's "We never were too specific on the show. Nobody ever knew whether 79 Wistful Vista was a street or a block. Nobody knew what Fibber did for a living. We preferred to let the audience paint its own scenery.

"It seems to the television generation that it's necessary to do the audience's I.Q — imagination quotient."

Fibber McGee and Molly did, and that's why it remains so vivid in the imaginations of those of us who heard it." (

HEART EXPLODED

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — John Anderson, 18, a high school runner, collapsed and died Friday after completing a 220-yard run. Anderson was stricken after finishing third in the four-man practice race. Hospital officials described Anderson's death as due to a heart explosion."

However, you must early teach that one has to pioneer and take a chance once in a while in order to have real success in life. Give training in sports to bring out that spirit of advancement and adventure in the subconscious.

Monday, April 17, 1961.

General Tendencies: Until noon you need to be very careful you do not upset conditions that have proven satisfactory in the past. And you somehow can find safe new and more practical methods by which to gain more income and revenue. Then in the evening a lighter and happier vein is struck by the planets to delight, please you.

Aries (March 21 to April 19): It is best to be wise and attend to important work until 3 p.m. and make big headway in your career. Then the remainder of the day and evening are fine for having lots of fun with your best friends. Use logic, not emotions.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20): If you actually carry through with your own plans and work, you will avoid that irate member of family who could be quite a problem to you until late afternoon. P.M. Find for stilling down and planning ahead to increase income.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21): Important you are most careful with the car driving or just in conversation until middle part of afternoon and not get into trouble. The rest of the day is very pleasant, however, and you get your desires. Be with good friends, be sociable.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21): You know that you do not have enough capital for what you want to do in A.M. so do not worry about it, but get yourself nicely dressed and health improved. Then quietly go about buttering up good friends who are influential.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21): Do nothing that will ruin your reputation in A.M. and don't demand anything from higher-ups. Later, connect yourself with social affairs in the company of good friends and have a good time. Plan a nice party and forget worries.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Try not to get involved in some get-rich-quick scheme that is worthless in A.M. Study the proven instead. You can easily get the support you need for any practical ideas from inspiring higher-ups who have a nose for profit.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23): Comrades may be quite disappointing in A.M. and even authorities cannot please you in handling your affairs. Rowever later you meet someone who will be just the right person to solve everything problem-wise.

Scorpio (Oct. 33 to Nov. 21): Be absolutely neutral in any altercation between a partner and a higher-up, or you can get into real trouble. Make it a point the remainder of the day that you devote your time to the one you love and be very considerate, kind.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Though you may want to delve into new outlets, meet new people until the middle of the afternoon, it is best you first do the work that is important at this time. Then the remainder of day and evening is still open for that.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Close ties and usual advisors do not agree at all in A.M. as to how you should proceed in business matters. Make no decisions but carry through later with the work that awaits your attention. You make big headway regardless.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Don't permit that matter of loyalty to divide associate and family ties irreparably. Use diplomacy and show your true regard for all and thus you save the situation and can talk about entire relations throughout. Be jolly.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20): Be most careful while out driving and be sure you think before you speak, too. After 3 P.M. try to be safely at home with close ties and tonight you can entertain lightly so that this turns into a most happy time for you.

If your child is born today . . he, or she, will be one of those individuals during early life who will appear to have no regard for the feelings of others whatsoever and go merrily along taking what is wanted. Early learn, that one person is but a part of a long-established civilized social order and that learning to conform is the first step toward success. Then the life evolves into a very fine one and the great writer, lecturer, teacher, sales-person are all here.

SLEEP WORK

Humans can be conditioned to work while asleep—flipping a switch with their hands when given an electric shock.

Volunteers kept awake from 36 to 40 hours, then permitted to fall asleep, still responded to the shock. Apparently, organized behavior can occur during any stage of sleep" report psychologists John T. Hammack and Allen H. Grands of Walter Reed Army Research Institute. This questions the idea sleep is a state of unconsciousness different from wakefulness, they said. Sleep proves to be a more complicated thing than had been thought.

WAR AND CHEMISTS

Instant coffee, incendiary rockets, substitutes for drugs and dyes and improved materials for photography were a chemists' contributions during war.

But these were all contributed during the American Civil War, by chemists on both sides, says Dr. Wyndham D. Miles of the National Archives, Washington.

powder and incendiary materials. Miles reports in Chemical and Engineering News.

Southern chemists found new ways of providing essential raw materials, worked on substitutes for scarce drugs and dyes, prepared increasingly dirty rockets filled with "liquid damnation," and rockets were reported used at least once against Northern troops'

SUPER-DENSE STARS

Armenian astrophysicists report they have established that some small but superdense stars consist mostly of heavy elementary particles known as hyperons.

Hyperons are among the particles produced when atomic nuclei are smashed by powerful accelerators, but they exist for only millionths of a second. But they become stable in the super - dense stars, report Viktor Ambartsumyan and Georgiy Saakyan. Hyperon stars are 100,000 times smaller than the sun, but their total mass is almost equal to the sun's. The Soviet news agency Tass says the astrophysicists find these stars consist of a main hyperon nucleus, a neutron layer, and an outward envelope of atomic nuclei.

HEAVY LOSSES

Dense smoke sprang up and loud explosions sounded as he flew in for his third attack. The plane then flew seaward at low level.

Millimamen on guard duty emptied their sub-machine guns at the plane as it flew over the residential areas en route to the sea.

Explosions continued at Camp Borden for more than an hour, as stores of munitions went off.

One eyewitness said an attacks were made to cover a commando landing at Mariel, a seaport town 30 miles west of Havana and the center of much traffic for Soviet ships arriving in Cuba. Official sources said they could not confirm the report.

One eyewitness said an attacking plane at Havana was shot down. He said the plane trailed smoke and appeared to crash, but other sources said it recovered and flew off.

Three bomb explosions were heard in the suburbs of Havana Friday night just as a Cuban government leader was telling a rally:

"If any enemy of the revolution is caught with a bomb-throwing out an act to terrorize him, you capture him and we will execute him."

The official, Labor Minister Augusto Martinez, spoke at a fund-raising rally on the site of a burned-out department store.

Former Nazi Officer Admits Ordering Deaths

BOCHUM, West Germany (Reuters) — Former Nazi officer Heinrich Hamman has confessed to ordering the shooting of 2,000 Jewish men, women and children at Neu - Sandowa, Poland, the Bochum prosecutor's office said Friday.

Hamman, who has been detained since last May, was head of the Nazis security police office at Neu - Sandez, near Krakow during the Second World War.

The prosecutor's office said he shot some of the Jews himself, and admitted that others died of torture. He also confessed to an interrogating judge that he ordered the deportation to extermination camps of about 12,000 - 14,000 persons in the Neu-Sandezs ghetto.

LIBERALS MUST

whether Canada should require nuclear weapons and yet it had no intelligence unit that would be almost useless without its own clear warheads.

"I have noted be a more important decision facing people than that," he added.

Earlier, the more than 300 accredited delegates passed a resolution calling for a minimum wage of $1.25 an hour for both male and female workers in industry.

The resolution called also for research into unemployment and is a "social responsibility" and that the government should take the lead in finding practical solutions.

Only one other resolution came before the plenary session Friday and was passed. It said that a liberal government would ensure the full use of Canada's productive capacity, including control of money supply, deficit financing when necessary, and the lowering of interest rates "to restore the economy to high levels of production and employment."

WILL FORWARD

Most of today will be devoted to the plenary session. Although none of the resolutions are binding, they will be forwarded to the national and Ontario Liberal headquarters for possible inclusion in future Liberal policy.

One resolution to be presented calls for Ontario's Attorney-General Dana Porter to launch a full-scale enquiry into "organized crime syndicates."

In the annual elections, Royce Frith of Toronto was re-elected president. Vice-presidents elected Other officers are Dan Lang of Toronto, treasurer; Anthony Vannini of Sault Ste. Marie, both Conrad of Brockville and Ben Schachter of Brantford, vice-presidents.

In his presidential report, Mr. Frith said the PC party was being organized across Canada, but the question Liberals should be asking was "are we picking up the ground as they lose it?"

Bruce Powe, OLA executive director, urged Liberals to be more imaginative in their research for candidates to run in the next election. He said he wanted to win 45 seats in Ontario.

Ontario Liberal Leader John Wintermeyer will speak at the noon luncheon.

YURI APPROVES

kilograms (about 198 pounds) before the flight said his weight is now "about the same."

Radio contact between his space ship and the earth was important, he said, "to receive certain tasks, and so that I would feel in contact with my country, the people and the Communist party."

Reporters handed in written questions, and Yuri asked about a dozen of them out without identifying the questioner.

There was no chance during the two - hour televised press conference to ask questions from the floor.

Here is an example of Yuri's press conference technique, worthy of the most adroit politician:

He opened the question-and-answer period by saying many questions had been asked about his descent and return to earth. He said he would lump them all together and answer them as one question.

MYSTERY REPLY

This was his answer:

"Many techniques for landing have been developed in our country. One is the parachute technique. In this flight we employed the following: The pilot was in the cabin, the landing apparatus was extinguished and the successful of all systems developed for this flight."

Reporters tried to draw him out on how soon Soviet astronauts are being trained in the Soviet Union.

He smiled and said: "Space pilots are being trained and have been trained already for out serious flights in outer space."

He said the Soviet Union plans many more space flights to conquer outer space.

"Personally, I want to do a lot more space flying," Gagarin said.

"We plan to . . . conquer outer space."

Soviet scientists who approved Maj. Gagarin said the data from his space flight would be published as it is processed.

Dr. Nesmeyanov, head of the Soviet Academy of Medicine said Gagarin was being a scientific worker and actually coauthor of the medical program."

Paris said the space suit worn by Gagarin had protectors incorporated in it that shield doctors on the ground to measure the spacemen's respiration, pulse rate and other factors.

Paris said the flight had proved that the theory was right "man will be able to do his normal work and suffer no physical damage."

Alexander N. Nesmeyanov, president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, said no preliminary manned space flights were made "and Yuri Gagarin is the first to make such a flight."

Deryabin said Gagarin's landing space capsule, Gagarin said:

"The sky looked quite black the stars were brighter and the earth had a beautiful hue."

He said visibility was excellent at heights ranging between 175 and 300 kilometers (109 to 186 miles).

He had a view of the sun's rays passing through the earth's atmosphere," he continued.

"Then, suddenly, the color was a light orange."

South Africa which led to its decision to leave the Commonwealth family.

Mr. Mboya said he also asked the prime minister that Canada support efforts by African states at the United Nations to bring about an impartial inquiry into conditions in the Portuguese colonies of Angola and Mozambique.

He gave no indication what Mr. Diefenbaker's reaction was to either this suggestion or to Mr. Mboya's observations concerning South Africa.

Mr. Mboya met the Canadian prime minister shortly after arriving in Ottawa Friday morning from Toronto for a one-day visit.

He was scheduled to leave Ottawa today for New York and Washington.

WOULD EDUCATE HERE

Mr. Mboya was in Canada primarily to promote his schemes for bringing young Africans to this country for study in universities and high schools.

In addition to Mr. Diefenbaker, he conferred with External Affairs Minister Green, officials of the external affairs department and officials of Canada's external aid office.

Friday night he was guest of honor at a dinner given by the Canadian government.

Mr. Mboya all but said he thinks Canadian Thompsons should be excluded from the United Nations force in The Congo. It seemed obvious that only diplomats of pretty strained him from taking the plunge.

He told his press conference it was his general view that "in order to avoid cold war complications," The Congo contingent should be made up of Africans.

HAVE MISGIVINGS

He also said many Africans have misgivings about the American idea of a peace corps to help emerging nations. There were fears in Africa that President Kennedy's plan to send Americans into the underdeveloped countries to impart skills and technical knowledge might be used "to extend the cold war," he said earlier in an address to the Canadian club of Ottawa.

"Why should Africans be pro-East or pro-West, anti-East or anti-West?" he asked. "Why should this be the only standard for judging us?

"Most African states want to avoid any kind of involvement. We want to be able to devote our resources and efforts to the economic development of our countries. We prefer to be just friends — not to be judged as friends of one camp simply by reason of being enemies of the other camp."

CASTRO BATTLES INVASION BY REBELS

Court Upholds Israel's Right To Try Eichmann

Accused Pleads Not Guilty to 15 Counts

JERUSALEM — Adolf Eichmann pleaded not guilty today to all 15 counts in the Israeli indictment accusing him of directing the extermination of 6,000,000 European Jews.

Then Attorney-General Gideon Hausner opened his case with the words:

"Six million prosecutors stand here with me."

Eichmann entered his plea after the special three - judge court rejected the defence challenge of Israel's right to try the former Gestapo officer.

Standing with Prussian stiffness in the glass-enclosed prisoners' dock, Eichmann averted his eyes from the gallery of the crowded court during the 10 minutes it took Supreme Court Justice Moshe Landau to ask him how he pleaded on each count.

LIKE A TWITCH

Eichmann's lips twitched occasionally. A tomb-like silence hung over the court room, broken only by Landau's voice and Eichmann's replies.

"You heard the indictment on the first day of this hearing," the president said.

"Jawohl," Eichmann replied, firmly.

"Do you admit the first count in the indictment?"

"In the spirit of the indictment, I am not guilty," Eichmann replied, his voice steady and low-pitched.

PLEADS NOT GUILTY

Then, count after count, the president's question and Eichmann's answer were identical:

"Do you plead guilty or not guilty?"

"In the spirit of the indictment, I am not guilty."

Eichmann stared at the judges, his gaze never wavering.

Although all the judges speak German, each of Eichmann's identical answers was translated in English, the official language of the court, and each of Landau's question was translated into German for the prisoner.

RULED AGAINST

Earlier the judges ruled against arguments by West German defence lawyer Robert Servatius that they are prejudiced and the court is not competent to try Eichmann. They also said the method of Eichmann's arrest — kidnapping and spiriting him 11 months ago is irrelevant.

The defence had argued that the Israeli law of 1950, under which Eichmann is charged, is not just because Eichmann's alleged crimes were committed long before the law was written. The judges also rejected the plea that Eichmann had been acting under orders from the Nazi state.

VOICE WAVERS

Hausner, in a voice shaking with feeling, began his opening statement by saying:

"When I stand before you, judges of Israel, to accuse Adolf Eichmann, I do not stand here alone.

"Here with me stand six million accusers.

"But alas they cannot rise and level a finger at the man in the prisoner's dock."

He said they had died at Aus-

ONT. LIBERALS URGE ORGANIZED CRIME PROBE

Leader Denies He Is Resigning

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Liberal Association has urged a royal commission investigation of "organized crime syndicates in Ontario."

Some 700 delegates at the closing session of the annual meeting Saturday gave unanimous support to the resolution. Stanton Hogg of Toronto, a former assistant Crown attorney, said Ontario gangsters belong to churches and contribute to charity without fear. "Investigate and get involved with police and high officials."

He said the only action gangsters could not fight would be a royal commission investigation. The gangsters, he said, have publications men at their elbow.

"It's a bad order relating to sacrifice-gun sonsocune," he said.

The meeting was also unanimous in its support of Liberal Leader John Wintermeyer who said he will win the next provincial election without sacrificing principle for political expediency.

He denied newspaper reports that he was planning to resign the leadership.

"I go back to the end. . . I am in this to victory," he said.

He accused premier Frost's progressive Conservative government of spending 18 years retaining the status quo while the provincial debt increased, municipalities became involved in maladministration and industry retreated from rising taxes.

MOVED RESOLUTION

Tom O'Neill, Liberal candidate for Toronto St. David in the last federal election, moved the resolution on crime from the floor: he said certain crime syndicates had started to move into Ontario and "our attorney-general sits back and does nothing."

The meeting also passed resolutions calling for increased penalties for drivers convicted of impaired driving and operating a vehicle while their licences were under suspension. They also urged that the annual $5 fee on the unsatisfied judgment fund by drivers unable to prove their have insurance coverage be increased to $30 roughly.

Another resolution urged immediate additional inquiries as recommended by the Eastview report—the result of a municipal affairs department investigation in the Liberal operation of the Ottawa suburb.

Also in municipal affairs, they asked provision for penalties when a councillor or municipally-appointed board knowingly votes on a matter when they might be a "conflict of interest."

Included in 21 resolutions on education were calls for immediate improved academic qualifications for teachers; one urging a six-month program of Near-freezing temperatures are reported over most of Ontario. Little warming is indicated for Tuesday, but precipitation should taper off to local showers and drizzle.

Treasury Chief Asks Sweeping Taxation Powers

LONDON (Reuters) — Treasury chief Selwyn Lloyd today requested sweeping taxation powers to control spending by the British public.

Lloyd, submitting his first budget as chancellor of the exchequer before a crowded House of Commons, asked that he be empowered to raise or lower all main customs and excise duties and purchase taxes at any time of the year.

The maximum increase or decrease would be 10 per cent of existing rates, he said.

Lloyd, who wants a further method to stimulate or restrict the British economy with a reasonably rapid and widespread effect.

Lloyd presented Parliament with a £5,000,000,000 ($14,000,000,000) budget, the highest in British history.

INSECURE FOUNDATION

In proposing the tax changes, he said Britain had a year of widespread prosperity last year but it was based on an insufficiently secure foundation.

The changes would be designed to give government regulation instead of direct parliamentary vote. But the special powers would expire Aug. 31, 1962, unless the next budget submitted authorized them.

Lloyd said protective and anti - dumping duties, involving international obligations, would be excluded from the new measure.

It would cover duties on such commodities as alcohol, tobacco and petroleum which now yield about £2,300,000,000 ($6,440,000,000) from an annual expenditure of about £7,500,000,000 ($21,000,000,000) by the public.

Thus a 10-per-cent increase on purchase taxes would yield a surcharge or rebate of £230,000 ($644,000) either way for a total expenditure of £1,288,000,000).

TAX EMPLOYERS

Lloyd also announced a proposed 2½ per cent surcharge on employers amounting to a maximum of £4 ($11.20) per employee per week. This should draw a maximum £200,000,000 ($560,000,000) from the economy per year, he said.

Its purpose would be to act as an incentive to economize on the use of manpower when there is a chronic shortage of labor, he said.

Defence was the biggest single £1,655,600,000 ($4,635,680,000) in the 1961-1962 financial year.

Cuba Charges U.S. Armed, Financed Invading Force

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—Cuban Foreign Minister Raul Roa charged today that Cuba had been invaded by mercenary forces armed and financed by the United States. He said the invaders came from Guatemala.

The Cuban foreign minister made his declaration immediately after the 99-nation committee convened. He asked that the invasion be considered on an urgent basis.

Roa had been scheduled to deliver an hour-long speech attacking the United States for alleged plans of aggression against the regime of Premier Fidel Castro.

He already had laid before the committee a charge that the United States was responsible for Saturday's dawn airfield bombings.

Roa gave no details of the Cuban findings, but he used the word "invasion" to describe the operation. He delivered a detailed indictment of both the United States and Guatemala for alleged plotting to overthrow the Castro government.

He said the Kennedy administration has continued and increased what he called "crimes and depredations" against Cuba. He charged, specifically that Guatemala and the United States were training Cuban refugees as subversives and saboteurs.

It was obvious as he proceeded that he was reading a speech prepared in advance and dealing with previous Cuban complaints against the United States, but he injected frequent references to the new crisis.

Roa accused President Eisenhower of backing anti - Castro elements and declared: "As you see, the Democratic administration is still planning acts of aggression."

The committee first heard the

UN Again Demands Belgians And Mercenaries Quit Congo

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — A of a two-week debate on The new attempt to weed out foreign intervention in The Congo and encourage Congolese leaders to make a fresh try at peace has been approved by the United Nations General Assembly.

In a series of votes Saturday night, the 99-member assembly again demanded the withdrawal from The Congo of Belgian military and political personnel, as well as all foreign mercenaries.

It stopped short, however, of setting a deadline or of threatening sanctions.

Although further speeches are scheduled for late today by countries that wish to explain their votes, the balloting Saturday was considered the climax

Russia Objects to Details Of Laos Cease-Fire Plan

LONDON (AP) — The Soviet Union rejected some details of the Western proposal for a cease-fire in Laos but kept the door open for further negotiations, a foreign office spokesman said today.

The spokesman declined to give the substance of the note, delivered Sunday in Moscow, but made clear that Britain and the Soviet Union won't be joining right away in calling for a cease-fire to suspend the fighting between the Western-backed Laotian government of Prince Boun Oum and the leftist Pathet Lao guerrillas.

The spokesman said further contacts with the Soviet government would be required and that meanwhile Britain is consulting with the United States, France and Commonwealth countries.

"Until we have completed discussions with our allies and have received replies to our enquiries," the spokesman said, "we can give no indication as to our views on how the note is to be regarded."

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko handed the reply to British Ambassador Sir Frank Roberts shortly after the arrival in Moscow of Prince Souvanna Phouma, the Laotian neutralist whom the Russians recognize as the legal premier of Laos.

Souvanna, on a world tour to drum up support for a peaceful but well-divided Southeast Asian kingdom, conferred today with Khrushchev and First Deputy Premier Alexei Kosygin.

The question of the Kremlin's had delayed answering Britain's proposals of March 23 that Russia join Britain in calling for a cease-fire in Laos, that the international truce commission of 1954 be revived and that a conference of 14 powers be called to arrange for a unified, neutral Laos.

The chief stumbling block was the Western insistence that a cease-fire must precede any major conference on Laos. Other Communist countries have been arguing for an immediate international conference to work out a cease-fire, an arrangement strongly opposed by the United States.

The Soviet Union, in its first reaction to the British proposal, agreed in principle that a ceasefire should be called but hedged on the timing. The West was suspicious that the Russians were delaying so that the pro-Communist Pathet Lao rebels in Laos could gain as much territory as possible before being brought in the conference table.

Kasavubu Says Congolese Govt. Willing to Co-operate With UN

LEOPOLDVILLE (Reuters)—President Joseph Kasavubu formally declared today that the Congolese government is willing to co-operate with the United Nations.

The statement was the first of its kind since UN and Congolese troops clashed at the port of Matadi early in March. It was interpreted as a move by Kasavubu to ease the strained relations with the world body.

Kasavubu took the unusual step of summoning the diplomatic corps and the press to his residence.

At separate sessions he read a statement in which he revealed that he had reached an agreement with UN Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold under which The Congo would accept the Security Council resolutions of Feb. 21 authorizing UN forces to intervene in situations threatening civil war.

The resolution also offered UN aid in reorganizing and retraining the Congolese armed forces.

Kasavubu said today that the UN would help the Congolese to train technical and administrative personnel, and also in reorganizing the army—but he insisted that each stage of the reorganization would be under his own authority.

He said he hopes that the presence of UN troops in The Congo will become unnecessary within a few months, and that the UN also will be able to reduce its civilian technicians.

THREE STABLE HANDS, HORSES DIE IN BLAZE

Seventy Trotters Led to Safety

CHICAGO (AP) — Three stable hands and 42 horses died in a wind - whipped early morning fire which destroyed two stables at Maywood Park Trotting Sunday in west suburban Melrose Park.

Two persons were injured and more than 70 horses were led to safety from the blazing and threatened barns.

Winds up to 30 miles an hour fanned flames through a under of straw bedding and hay. One of the dead — four stables was levelled before fire men arrived.

Nathan Allen, president of the Maywood Park Trotting Association, estimated damage to the building and equipment at $100,000. There was no immediate estimate of the loss in animals.

Cause of the fire was not determined. Police said there was no evidence of arson.

The victims were 19-year-old trotting driver from West Allis, Wis., said he was awakened by sirens from Patricia Callahan, 47, a stable hand from Morrison, Ill. Callahan was one of those who died.

Others who died were tentatively identified as Del W. Logue, 51, of Shelbyville, Ill., and Arthur Dean Vogel, 36, of Lincoln, Ill.

Several Bomb Scares Fail To Materialize

MONTREAL (CP) — Several bomb scares — including a threat against National Liberal Leader Lester Pearson — kept Montreal police busy Sunday night.

Police rushed to the east-end Show Mart, where Mr. Pearson was addressing a celebration of the 13th anniversary of the founding of the state of Israel, after an anonymous caller said a bomb had been planted in the hall.

No bomb was found and the 1,500 people attending the celebration were not disturbed.

At about the same time, police forces, presently observing the film Operation Eichmann, received similar calls.

A search of the theatres failed to yield a bomb.

There were also calls to anti - semetic prankisters.

Fall 300 Feet

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two men were killed Sunday night when their car crashed through a barricade in Stanley Park and fell 300 feet to the rocks below.

A city police beat recovered the bodies of the victims.

They were not identified immediately.

FEVER KILLS THOUSANDS

ABDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — An epidemic of yellow fever in southwestern Ethiopia is reported unofficially to have killed several thousand persons. A U.S. Navy medical team is expected here soon with vaccines to join in the fight. The West German government already has contributed financial support to the campaign and other countries are also expected to help.

Cubans In Exile Claim Landings At Three Points

Castro Says Invaders Land by Air and Sea

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Invaders landed by air and sea in Cuba's southern Las Villas province today and now are battling government troops, Premier Fidel Castro announced today.

Castro said the attack was launched by "mercenaries organized by the imperialistic government of the United States."

He said the attackers had landed at several points but that was not specific as to their locations.

The announcement by Castro was heard over the Cuban radio.

Castro said government troops were advancing and are sure of victory. He ordered the country in a state of alert and called on the citizens to maintain order and discipline.

HAVANA (AP)—Premier Fidel Castro's troops today reported to be battling a rebel invasion force of unknown size on the north coast of Cuba today.

The military duty officer at Castro's headquarters said "powerful fighting" was going on between "government defenders and an insurgent force of exiles" at Playa Larga, on the south coast of Matanzas province.

The office gave no other details.

Playa Larga (Long Beach) is near the Cienaga Oriental, a gulf and swamp area that Castro's trying to convert into a fish and resort area. Jaguay la Grande is just north of there.

MAY BE SMALL

Although the officer at Jaguay la Grande could not estimate of the landing force, his report that only "some fighting" was going on was taken as an indication that the force was small.

In New York, the president of the rebel provisional government, Dr. Jose Miro Cardona, said that "before dawn Cuban patriots in the cities and in the hills began the battle to liberate our homeland from the despotic rule of Fidel Castro and rid Cuba of international communism's cruel oppression."

At the time Miro Cardona issued his statement, however, the only attack on Cuban territory was the only unusual activity reported. Government troops have battling scattered bands of insurgents in the Escambray Mountains of south central Cuba for months.

CHALLENGE U.S.

On the home front meanwhile, Castro challenged the U.S. government to back up its claim that Sunday night's air force pilots made the strafing and bombing attack on two military airfields Saturday. Castro demanded that President Kennedy bring the two pilots who flew to Miami and Key West after the attack before the United Nations.

Speaking at burial services Sunday for seven of the eight persons killed in the air raid, Castro accused the U.S. government of financing the dawn air attack. He likened it to the Nazi bombing of Spain.

At his most violent pitch in months, the Cuban premier charged that American aggressions against Cuba were born of resentment because "we have made a socialist revolution right

Almost Everyone But Liz Taylor Bets She'll Win First Oscar

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) Almost everyone in Hollywood but that Elizabeth Taylor will win her first Oscar tonight is overlooked but Dot Reader isn't herself.

"I'm not betting on it," Miss Taylor told a reporter, "but I'll be there just the same.

She admits she's feeling a little squeamish as the zero hour approaches for Hollywood's 33rd annual Academy Award show.

The competition looks tougher than ever," said Liz, who has been nominated four times in a row.

The two - hour awards show, telecast over ABC-TV, gets under way at 10:30 p.m. EST from the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium. Bob Hope will be master of ceremonies.

According to most polls, only the big-eyed actress is sure of men. It's a down - to - the - wire race between Jack Lemmon and Burt Lancaster for best actor. The same goes for Sal Mineo and Peter Ustinov for best supporting actor.

Among the supporting actresses, Shirley Jones, like Miss Taylor, is rated a shoo-in. It will be a big night for Liz.

WASHINGTON (CP) — Cuban exiles said today the big push to overthrow Fidel Castro's regime apparently is under way. They had reports of invasions at three points.

The exiles said some of the anti-Castro forces already in Cuba have been in regular communication with opposition telephone communications were groups outside the island. Before telephone communications were cut between the United States and Cuba early today, code messages reported that invasion groups hit opposite ends of the island nation, Saturday night, both without opposition, the refugee sources said.

A third invasion group apparently hit the south coast of Cuba in Matanzas province at Playa Larga, on Cochinos Bay. That sector ran into sheer opposition from Castro forces, but is making progress, the sources added. The exiles claimed many of Castro's militia men, and of his army and navy, have joined invaders and that Santiago, major city on the eastern end of Cuba, already is in the invaders' hands.

Official sources here, both at the Pentagon and at the state department, said they had no information to confirm or abandon the Cuba other than news reports.

U.S. BASE NORMAL

Navy officers at Guantanamo Bay, U.S. base on Cuba's southeast coast, said the base was operating normally. Cuba's government-in-exile in Cuba's south Oriente province, Dr. Jose Miro Cardona, appeared Sunday from New York and said he would make a statement issued in New York today was prepared in advance of violence breaking out. Censors known publicly that the invasion was on.

The exiles said there have been unconfirmed reports of street fighting in Santiago, between defectors from Castro's forces and militiamen, police and soldiers.

The landing at Playa Larga sector of Cochinos Bay, close to the naval station at Cienfuegos on the south coast, the exiles' forces has always been questioned.

The other two reported landings, about which there was no word, are in Pinar del Rio province, in the west end of the island.

Informed Cubans said the re-

Scouting activities

By CHRIS LEGGAT

The 8th Belleville Boy Scout Auxiliary met on April 14th in the Tabernacle Church parlors.

Following minutes, correspondence, reports and business the meeting was turned over to Dr. Ivan Hees, Akela of Pack A Cubs, who for 20 minutes transported the mothers to the Jungle and Cubbing. He told of the organization in 1907 in England, of the Scout movement when Lord Baden-Powell, following his return from the Boer War, approached the King of England with his plan of a Scouting program for 12 and 14-year-old boys.

This was begun and soon Baden-Powell realized there a need of a program for younger boys and Cubbing in the world. Now there are at least eight million Cubs and Scouts in the world.

Rudyard Kipling's Jungle Book forms the basis of Cub training and the imagination of an eight-year-old readily fits him for the games and tasks and ceremonies of the one and one-half hour weekly meetings.

Dr. Reed stressed the importance of Scouts character building and said the good deed must be the goal and the badges should never command.

The leaders feel that the boy they help most is the boy who is home for each week a bit insecure in the family or among his associates. It is the lonely boy who has lost one or both parents.

Dr. Reed explained that at home or at Cubs parents and Scouters should never command a boy with another, who has attained higher honors. Praise for each one's best.

The president, Mrs. Winstanley, thanked the kind and minded the mothers of the potluck supper for all auxiliaries in the Belleville district. May 10th, at Eastminster United Church and the next meeting June 9th for the 8th Belleville Auxiliary.

Scout Mizpah closed the meeting and a social half hour followed.

Many thanks Mrs. Miles for a very interesting report.

OUR 53RD YEAR

Parade Before U.S. Consulate

TORONTO (CP) — A placard-waving crowd of about 150 demonstrators paraded in front of the United States consulate here today to protest U.S. air raids and bombings in Cuba.

The demonstration was watched by a handful of policemen and newspaper men.

The group was led by Vernel Olson, chairman of the Fair Play for Cuba committee, who formed the marchers by military aircraft as "nothing less than a flagrant act of aggression on a member nation of the United Nations."

He said the committee was formed 10 weeks ago to oppose counter-revolutionary attacks now being organized against the Cuban people."

CUBA CHARGES

Cuban charge Saturday afternoon in an angry speech by Roa. Castro followed up Sunday with his challenge at a Havana funeral oration for victims of the bombings.

STEVENSON DENIES

U.S. Ambassador Adlai Stevenson categorically denied Saturday that the U.S. had anything to do with the bombings. He said he knew two B-26 Invader aircraft that landed in Florida were manned by defectors from Castro's own air force.

"These pilots and certain other crew members have apparently defected from Castro's tyranny," Stevenson said, displaying a photograph of one of the bombers with Cuban Air Force markings.

"No United States personnel participated. No United States government airplanes of any kind participated. These two pilots flew to the Florida Everglades were Castro's own air force planes and according to the pilots, they took off from Castro's own air force fields."

Stevenson also said President Kennedy pledged last week there would be intervention by U.S. forces in Cuba "under any conditions" but Roa said this was denied and, in fact, the U.S. had been plotting to equip and finance an invasion of Cuba for more than a year.

SIDES WITH CUBA

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Valerian Zorin quickly sided with Roa, saying that "with one single word from the United States not one plane would have bombed Cuba." The fact was that this word was never spoken.

Guatemala's Gustavo Galvez denied accusations by Roa and Castro that the bombing planes of Second World War vintage have been taken off from Guatemala and flown on to the U.S. because they were unable to return to them.

The new developments appear to have dictated efforts to keep the tone of debate at the assembly — scheduled to finish its session Friday — moderate, without stressing cold war issues.

Canada's shipbuilding industry has fluctuated up and down during the last 11 years and this year it appears headed for a decline.

Graph shows total tonnage and number of steel ships, excluding naval vessels, built in 15 yards across Canada from 1950 to 1960. Tonnage increased to 103,840 in 1954 from 39,459 in 1950 but dropped sharply to 15,935 in 30,707.

Total tonnage built reached a record 137,419 in 50 commercial ships. So far this year there are only 10 ships on order or under construction in Canada's yards. (CP Newsmap).

Tues. Afternoon Ladies League Holds Banquet

The first annual banquet of the Tuesday Afternoon Ladies' League was held recently at the Quinte Hotel on Front Street. This league was formed last fall for the purpose of assisting new bowlers and is comprised of about three-quarters of last year's girls who never bowled before.

Mrs. Dorothy Mary Fletcher introduced the head table: Mr. N. Stefan, Labatt's representative, who presented the beautiful Labatt Trophy to the league to be presented each year to the team having the highest standing. This year the Polka Dots explained by Capt. Willis received this honor.

Each player on this team was presented with a small trophy by Bill Bateman of the Bowl-O-Drome at the request of the league. The high average trophy donated by Goldie's Small Service was presented to Mary Hawkshaw by Thelma Fitzgibbon, secretary of the league. The high triple trophy to Thelma Fitzgibbon and the high single trophy to Mardy Whiteman. Both of these trophies were donated by the Vogue Beauty Salon and were presented by Muriel Sargeant, manager. Each in the order of standing was given a corsage.

Mrs. Mary Fletcher was then presented with a train case by Ruth Pringle, who on behalf of all the ladies thanked Mary for her work during the season. The election of vice-president D. Wills was added to the name of the officers as last season. Door prizes donated by C. Cunningham's Jewel Box, B. Bateman and N. Stefan were won by M. Fletcher, E. Chaplin and Mrs. Wood.

A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Harwood and her committee for the lovely turkey dinner which they prepared.

All of the ladies then joined in a lively game of Court Whist for the rest of the evening and by the comments everyone has enjoyed this season very well.

Officers for next season are: president — M. Fletcher; vice-president — D. Wills; secretary — T. Fitzgibbon and treasurer — M. Sargeant.

Spring Storm Hits Mid-West

CHICAGO (AP)—A crippling spring snowstorm, sweeping out of the northern plains with all the fury of a mid-winter blizzard, stopped the midwest-ern U.S. today.

The heavy wet snow, whipped by strong winds, smothered the region from Minnesota and the Dakotas across the Mississippi valley.

The storm, which started in some areas Saturday night, increased in intensity today. Fresh snow measured up to more than 15¼ feet in northern Minnesota. Drifts piled up to 20 feet in some areas.

At least 18 deaths were attributed to the stormy weather, mostly in traffic accidents on icy and snow-covered highways, with two of the deaths caused by heavy rains east of the snow-belt.

Thousands of cars and motorists were stranded. Airports and arterial roads were blocked. Schools in many areas were closed in Minnesota and Illinois.

Major highways in the eastern Dakotas and Minnesota were blocked. Some 20 inches of snow was reported in Duluth and in the iron range district.

Rigors of Winter Hard on Lawns

What did the winter do to your lawn? Some lawns are starred by brown patches where the snow mould. This fungus becomes active at near-freezing temperatures when there is excessive moisture on the ground due to melting snow. The result is dead turf, which looks like cotton, usually appears as the snow is melting. When grass is killed, it turns brown and becomes matted, according to lawn specialists with the Ontario Department of Agriculture. When a good drainage reduces the problem, the best control for snow mould is the practice anything that will dry out the lawn quickly in the spring. Break up the cotton-like growth with a stiff broom or rake and prevent debris which might harbor moisture.

Winterkilling, another lawn scourge, may be due to cold, drying winds; lack of snow cover under conditions of severe cold; alternating high and low temperatures; ice and water damage, especially in depressions; constant traffic on frozen turf; ice formation on unfrozen soil, such as skating rinks made on lawns.

U.S. and Canada Facing Genuine Trade Problem

CLEVELAND (CP)—Postmaster-General William Hamilton said here today that "a genuine problem" exists in the economic relations between Canada and the United States that must be faced by both countries.

He pointed out that in 1959 Canada paid a total of some $5,600,000,000 to the U.S. for goods, travel, dividends, freight and shipping while the United States paid Canada only $4,400,000,000.

He told the Sales Executives Clubs of Cleveland, Ohio, that 1957 figures show that United States interests controlled 44 per cent of our manufacturing, 71 per cent of petroleum and gas, natural gas and 32 per cent of mining and smelting.

"Such a situation might be more easily understood if we were an underdeveloped, little industrialized nation with a low standard of living."

IN MEMORIAM

DRUMMOND.—In loving memory of a member of Tabernacle Robert Charles (Bobby) Drummond, died suddenly, April 18th, 1960.

Now long and lonely year has passed.

Since our great sorrow fell!
The shock that we received that day
Will always stay.
We were not ready to part with you,
When we are sad and lonely,
We often think of you,
We seem to hear him whisper,
Cheer up dear ones, I'm near you.
Each time we see your photos,
You seem to smile and say,
Don't cry, I'm only sleeping,
We'll meet again some day.
Sadly missed and always remembered by his mother, brothers and sisters Jack, Gordon and brothers Jimmy and Robin.

Days African Govt. Numbered Says Paper

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — South Africa's largest newspaper warned Sunday that the days of Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd's all-white supremacy government are numbered and the question facing South Africa "is not if it is going to be changed."

The Rand Daily Mail Sunday Times, bitterly critical of Verwoerd's apartheid (racial segregation) policy, said that the prime minister's statements that time will prove his racial policies correct are:

"One comes to the conclusion that Verwoerd is now moving in a political dream world of his own, a world of illusion and unreality . . . It cannot last."

The Sunday Times reported Negroes are planning a three-day general strike to protest segregation when South Africa becomes a republic May 31.

Dredging Barge Torn From Its Moorings

ST. THOMAS, Ont. (CP)—A 600-ton dredging barge was torn from its moorings at nearby Port Stanley Sunday when gale force winds piled high waves on the harbor.

The barge, owned by Ontario Marine and Dredging Company, Toronto, ran almost to the King George VI lift bridge before it was secured by a tug and tied up in shelter.

Two other barges moored together were in danger of breaking loose until workmen using cutting torches freed one of the barges and set it to rest in sheltered moorings.

Fishing nets were taken past the bridge and lashed to trees and private docks as winds blowing up to 65 miles an hour lashed the harbor.

Several trees were toppled. The storm caused brief interruptions in hydro service over a wide area of Elgin county.

More than an inch of rain fell in the area overnight.

NEW YORK (AP)—The Columbia Broadcasting System, reporting from Miami, said at 7 a.m. EST today that several hundred rebel troops have invaded two Cuban provinces and that separate co - ordinated action at the eastern end of 401 waves hit a third province, Matanzas.

BC Proposes Holiday for Former P.M.

OTTAWA (CP)—A mid-February statutory holiday to honor Sir John A. Macdonald, Canada's first prime minister, is proposed in a bill sponsored by Jack Wratten (PC—Brantford).

Mr. Wratten said the holiday would emphasize the fact that Canada has had great statesmen in its history and would foster a spirit of Canadianism. Children learned about Washington and Lincoln and their birthdays were observed in the United States, but nothing was done to emphasize Macdonald's role in shaping Confederation, he said.

Macdonald was born in Glasgow on Jan. 11, 1815, but Mr. Wratten said this date came too close to the Christmas - New Year's season.

John A. Macdonald Day would be observed on the first Monday after Feb. 15 each year.

Macdonald died June 6, 1891.

New Worlds and the Old One

The two greatest achievements of twentieth century man, to date, have been the splitting of the atom and the shattering of the bonds of gravity.

So intertwined are all major developments in today's fast-moving world that it is not only possible, but actually rewarding to link an editorial on Major Yuri Gagarin's orbit of the earth with a discussion of Lord Bertrand Russell's campaign for nuclear disarmament. Both comments appeared in the same issue of the Montreal Gazette.

Not only Gagarin's orbit of the earth but other space achievements by Russia and by the U.S. "reveal over and over again the extent to which two countries have become pre-eminent in the present world," observes the Gazette. "No other country has the wealth to copy these achievements. In the most advanced realms of the application of scientific knowledge, these two countries are drawing further and further ahead of every other nation."

That this view may be the basis of official U.S. foreign policy is suggested by items in a recent issue of "U. S. News and World Report." Says one article, 'One U.S. official reacting to de Gaulle's criticism of the U.S. declared: 'Other nations now worry more about what they think of the U.S. than about what we think of them. It is about time to restore the balance'."

Whether this statement will bear careful analysis is open to question. Is not worrying about what one thinks of the U.S. a form of worrying about what the U.S. thinks of us?

What the U.S. thinks is, of course, of monumental importance, only matched by the importance of what Soviet Russia thinks. What Lord Russell thinks of them is simple to define—they are both mad. Drummond Burgess, in an article on Lord Russell's Nuclear Disarmament Movement and his recent book, "Common Sense and Nuclear Warfare," says that Russell thinks "it not believe that an agreement to disarm or to reduce armament is the most important problem in the field of international relations, nor that it must come first. "Disarmament," writes Russell, "must result from better relations between the East and West, and cannot, by itself, be a cause of such better relations."

"What needs to be done," writes Russell, "is first of all, psychological. There must be a change of mood and a change of aim, and this must occur on both sides if it is to achieve its purpose."

This all sounds reasonable. What does Burgess find to quarrel with? It is what he considers Russell's Utopianism, "the desire to bring perfection to an imperfect world is implicit in the entire argument that he presents on nuclear weapons." "Only a change in human nature," argues Burgess, "would bring the instant utopia he (Russell) has in mind and while he proclaims the necessity of this, he remains the impressimf that his proclamation is a hollow one, and that in himself he knows it is impossible."

It is this pessimism, says Burgess, that leads Russell, and others with similar ideas, to the ultimate conclusion of their arguments; unilateral disarmament, or surrender—"by the West of course, not by the East."

Three things need to be said about this.

Why the surprise that those in the West who believe unilateral disarmament urge that it be the West which disarms? Are they not thereby displaying their belief that the West is less mad than the East?

Secondly, is this belief that the West is more likely to disarm than the East not open to grave question? If we consider, as Russell does, that intelligent men will prefer surrender to destruction of the race, and if we grant that leaders of great countries are likely to be men of intelligence, would it not be wise for an intelligent head of a totalitarian state to enforce his will on his people than for the equally intelligent head of a democratic state to overcome the flood of opposition which would meet any such proposal?

Thirdly, is not the pre-eminence of two nations, to which the Gazette referred, limited to space achievement? Is not the existence of Communist China as effective a barrier against any unilateral disarmament by Russia, supposing Khrushchev should ever wish to follow such a course, as our western free speech is an effective barrier against any such policy being adopted by the U.S.?

And so we face a stone wall in any search for a sure and certain road to safety. But at the same time, perhaps we ought to realise the fallacy of suggesting, as Burgess does, that unilateral disarmament would not increase the chances of the survival of the race. It would not—whether it should be purchased at such a high price as surrender is another question entirely.

Fear Is Poor Foundation For Morality

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Not long ago, I flew down to Dallas to take part in a symposium sponsored by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare. The subject was "Youth and the Society We Live In," and the audience was made up of public health officers, social workers, educators, and the like.

This was part of a three-day conference on the growing venereal disease problem in the United States. Not only is the rate of VD increasing (despite a simple and inexpensive cure), but it is increasing mostly in the teenage bracket. About one-fourth of all cases involve persons under 20 years old.

When, a few years ago, it was discovered that VD could be promptly and effectively cured, general panic and fear were restrained by fear of infection. Then, after the first painful bitter dreams "noworse than a bad cold," and the net result of this medical advance was to create an attitude of sexual nonchalance and indifference.

I think the same thing will happen with the new oral contraceptive. When the fear of pregnancy is removed, girls will tend to engage more and more freely in pre-marital experimentation. Such scientific advance relaxes the moral order further.

Now I happen to think that fear is not a valid motivation for morality. The boy who does not steal because he is afraid of getting caught is not a thief; when he feels he will not be caught, he will steal with impunity. Any good and permanent is based on love and intelligence, which are distinctly human qualities. One does not on fear, a trail we share with all the animals.

Our problem with young people, as I see it, is not to frighten them, but to help them see that sex is a part of the whole personality, and cannot be just a physical act. It is to make them understand that emotional and social reasons make pre-marital sex impermanent.

Sex as a toy, I think, should be shifted from the moral to the personal plane. What is "bad" about promiscuity is that it is always a sign of some deeper disorder in the person. Normally, most promiscuous women are timid, not bold, and promiscuous men are immature. Thus, they are unable to achieve any lasting relationship in life, because they are driven by unconscious needs, like the alcoholic, they are not free.

The old moral restraints have already been given away entirely, and our young people are living in a kind of moral vacuum." That vacuum must be filled by a realistic program of training in the needs. Venereal disease is not basically a physical or a medical problem, but a symptom of our psychic distress in a world of changing values.

Misinformed About North

Fort William Times-Journal

Unfortunately there still remains a great deal of misinformation about the terrain between White River and the Manitoba border, and many Canadians living east and west — some of them occupying seats in parliament — still think Northwestern Ontario is located in a land of rocks and bidding land of rocks and barren trees. Many are unaware of the thousands of beautiful placid lakes, the hundreds of square miles of fertile farm land, and the elbow room for a vast expansion of industry.

The drop in the retail price of lumber since last week will be welcome news to many local housewives who possibly may have been caused some worry in the effort to balance the kitchen budget. Late last week butter was retailing at 28 cents per pound in local groceries, but on Saturday the price dropped one cent and again on Monday a two cent drop came into effect with the new price being 25 cents per pound. Wholesale prices have also dropped accordingly, with local creameries quoting 24 cents for No. 1 solids.

The blacksmith shop on Pinnacle Street operated for many years by George Ruttan is to be torn down to make room for a parking lot. The building is an old landmark having been built about fifty years ago by the late Barney Fox. It was first used for the building goes into the Graham Cold Storage Plant. In 1865 it was moved to its present location and Mr. Ruttan took it over in 1903 and has run a smithy there since that time. When he first started in business there were twenty or more blacksmiths in Belleville; Jackson Brothers and William Clarke being the veterans. The share of the purchase price of the Province all $35,000 . . . was paid over on Saturday; the Prince Edward County share $30,000 . . . has been paid over today, and the balance of the $65,000 at Belleville's share with interest at 7 per cent from the 1st of April, and payable within one year from that date was satisfactorily arranged. Old Letters Fine Reading

B B C London Letter

The choice of books to read on a long journey is often a bit of a problem. Whether to take something really solid, or a collection of magazines and paperbacks? To readers, editors and producer Lance Sieveking it seems the best thing to do is "Whenever I am going on a journey," he explained in the "Life and Letters" series broadcast in the BBC Gegiaral Overseas Service, "I always put one of the trunks in the stables and take out handfuls of old letters and throw them in. You see, I have over twenty trunks full of letters and documents. There are among them all the letters that were ever written to certain friends of my family during two centuries. They include all the letters I was ever received in my life; for I, like my parents and grand parents never threw anything away. I never know what my turn up, so I keep my letter from my cousin, Gerard Manly Hopkins in the 1880's, or from an ancestor in the 1780's, or from a boy with a vivid description of personality. I have very first Italian postage stamp on the addressed side of the folded paper. Or a letter from a friend of my boyhood, killed, as they nearly all were, in the 1914-18 war. Yes, that's imagine is fascinating, how absorbingly interesting and human and how very surprising they are! Especially those which begin: 'Please excuse me as soon as you've read it!'

Letter To The Editor

Suggests Extending Mothers' Allowance

Editor, Intelligencer:

As one who has had some experience in the welfare field, I read with interest your recent editorial comment concerning present laws inadequately support their children. Within recent years much social legislation has been introduced by the Province of Ontario to assist the parent with dependent children suddenly relieved of the financial support of the partnership parter. For the most part it is good legislation and serves a useful, constructive purpose. However, in my opinion, in one particular area, it is still lacking.

At the present time, in order for a mother with dependent children to qualify for allowances under the Mothers' and Dependents Children's Allowance Act, she must be a widow, or her husband must be certified insane, or she must be divorced from the husband, or deserted and have been awarded custody of the children, or her husband must be imprisoned in a penal institution for a continuous period of six months or more or her husband must have deserted her and not been heard from for six consecutive months.

It will be noted that, with one exception, the husband must be dead, or absent. There is, therefore, no provision at law for the bereaving, competent mother with dependent children whose husband deserts her and refuses to support — excepting that he may not leave the home. He may work sporadically or not at all, squander his unemployment insurance benefits, or if he has worked enough to be entitled to such benefits) regularly attend to none of his responsibilities or to fulfill any promise, like if any clothing, and generally, inflict untold hardship on the family which he has brought into the world with no thought of the future.

Some of our courts have taken the initiative and now bar desertion fathers from access to their families and, at the same time, order the payment of maintenance. Such orders do not, however such circumstances some of the more socially minded municipal welfare departments (and this includes Belleville) issue full welfare benefits and then attempt a reasonably adequate standard of living for the deserted mother, refusing to differentiate between a good mother and a bad father, thus subsidizing in such cases the equally inevitable.

Is there not, therefore, need for an extension of the present legislation so as to enable the competent mother with dependent children who is saddled with an incompetent husband, to qualify for allowances under the Mothers' and Dependent Children's Allowance Act. It is possible, under several pieces of provincial legislation, for a man to be declared incompetent. As it might be expected, in each instance, the process of law is specifically designed to safeguard the interests of the individual. Why then is it necessary for an employer the courts to declare a man to be an incompetent parent? Many children in the care of child-caring agencies today would be at home with brothers and sisters if, as a matter of methods, fad it been possible to provide, by legislation, for the home due to the unimpeded irresponsibility of the father.

Yours truly,
Bruce M. Kerr.

To Your Good Health

Your Chair May Contribute To Contracting Leg Cramps

By Joseph C. Molner, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner Please explain 'walking pneumonia'. — J. W."

It's a very mild case of pneumonia, just as you can have mild or mild cases of lots of things, from measles to the mopes to muscle cramps.

You can have a sore ankle — or be helplessly laid up with a sprain. Or have the sniffles, or hate the whole world because you have a hard cold.

"Pneumonia" is inflammation of the lung tissue. Maybe a little, maybe all, maybe a little. Walking pneumonia is a case mild enough for the patient, not necessarily wisely, to keep on going to work every day but he feels lousy.

Note to T. A. — Glaucoma is a condition which is not as a rule limited to one eye. Often all, you don't necessarily become near-sighted, or far-sighted, or whatever, in only one eye. However, since this condition has been detected in only one eye, I hope you should be pleased. Why? Because it means you have found trouble early rather than late and there is every reason to think that treatment can help. Your doctor, or make it more so slowly that you have no reason to be fearful. Don't neglect it — but don't be afraid.

Note To M.A. Could I offer myself or Medical Aid, M.A. IS NOT a governing body for hospitals any more than the American Medical Association can speak for doctors. So I would direct my suggestions accordingly.

How to get rid of leg cramps and foot pains? The answer may be found in a book by Dr. Molner in care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 138, Chicago Ill., for a copy of my leaflet. THE PACKSACK

BY GREGORY CLARK

One of the most popular downtown restaurants for lunch is in a department store, which makes it the ideal meeting place for businessmen and their wives. More than half the customtime gathering consists obviously of wives on shopping trips who have invited their downtown husbands to buy their lunch. Their couples are not merely in the thirty-year thirty age bracket.

Here is the result of a visual survey engaged in for the past three or four visits by my table mate and me.

In 60 per cent of the visible couples, the wife did nearly all the talking. In 15 per cent, there was conversation between them; they chatted together. In 15 per cent, the husband did most of the talking, and in these cases the wife was gratifying type of man. But the astonishing figure is the remaining 10 per cent. These were the couples who sat right through lunch and never spoke to each other, perfectly comfortable and at ease. They obviously enjoyed lunch and being together. But from start to finish, they never uttered a word to each other. Something? They seemed to be the happiest couples of them all.

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

A MESSAGE

This is a message of love, appreciation and thanks. Now to the countless letters, I receive, yearly, from readers of these talks. Many of these don't appear in newspapers, all over the U.S. and Canada, and over the U.K.

A source of pride to me for they have made it possible for me to make a comfortable living for readers.

Originally, I wrote the Talks only to encourage myself. I continued because other people said they enjoyed them. Today's writing has constituted the "dedicated" period of my life.

I am a rather lonely man and the Talks have been written at odd hours, in my office, at home, on vacations — wherever I happen to be. My little typewriter and I have been companions, though now I sometimes dictate my daily messages.

Never making any pretense to literary style, I write "simply," my aim has always been simply to help. I like to think of myself as an everyday messenger of helpful ideas and suggestions, to my kind-friends, in turn, have enriched my life beyond calculation.

I have also written my Talks for a secondary purpose — to help my readers to find joy and beauty. Money earned has gone mostly to pay for rare books and prints and collections of which, over recent years, I have been presenting to various colleges and museums.

I like to mention worthwhile books (not always the "best sellers") in my talks from in on my enjoyment and inspiration. I quote a great deal from great minds because I cannot "retell" telling others about what has thrilled me.

A very dear friend, whose memory will never fade, sent me this line: "Always write with life is that it takes up all our time;" with that has an inspirational note to it. But a reader recently sent this note that has made me feel very humble. She wrote:

"Mr. Adams, I hope you live forever." For her sake, I hope I may. To one and all, right now, I say: God bless you! There is always a light shining beyond the hills.

AL BRUNER, director of sales and marketing operations for CFTO-TV of Toronto, will be the guest speaker at the final regular meeting of the Belleville Sales and Advertising Club for the 1960-61 season. Mr. Bruner, former featured vocalist with the Wayne King show over the American CBC network, will be speaking on "TV of Tomorrow."

Now a resident of Willowdale, the guest speaker founded and developed radio station CJSP in Leamington, his home town, following his career as a singer, both in the United States and on the CBC radio network. He joined the staff of Toronto's independent television station CFTO-TV last year.

Tomorrow night's meeting, although the last of the regular monthly meetings for the local Sales-Ad Club, will not be the last of the season. In May, the annual Ladies' Night program, so successful in past years, will be featured as the wind-up show for this season's program.

Hot piston test reveals the ash-free secret of Shell X-100 Premium. Here's how Shell scientists can prove that Shell X-100 Premium leaves no additive ash. A simulated aluminum piston is heated and a few drops of conventional multi-grade motor oil dropped on it. As the picture on left shows, this oil leaves a deposit. This deposit is additive ash. When the test is repeated, as at right, with Shell X-100 Premium, all the oil vaporizes. It leaves no additive ash. This is important, because additive ash can contribute to engine knock and uneven performance.*

BREAKTHROUGH:

Suddenly Shell makes every other motor oil obsolete —with a revolutionary new formula which fights the five internal troubles that can shorten engine life

Shell's research on engine behaviour discloses five common internal troubles that can shorten the life of your car.

These troubles are additive ash, crankcase dirt, temperature changes, engine acid, and cooling system leaks. They all act silently and unseen.

Read how new X-100* Premium Motor Oil prolongs engine life by fighting all five troubles —and why Shell scientists can make this unique promise.

TODAY, every Shell dealer in Canada has new Shell X-100 Premium Motor Oil ready for your Spring oil change.

New Shell X-100 Premium is a true scientific breakthrough because it is the only motor oil available that protects your car simultaneously against these five internal troubles that can shorten engine life.

Do you know what these troubles are? If not, you owe it to your engine to read this advertisement. Ten minutes' time now can save you hours of trouble in the future.

Trouble #1—additive ash

Up to now, even the best premium motor oils were powerless to guard against additive ash—because they actually created it. While endeavouring to keep your crankcase shipshape, some of the ingredients in these oils contributed to the hard crust of ash inside your combustion chamber.

All other premium motor oils still have the same snag.

The trouble stems from the metallic additives used to prevent scuffing, dirt deposits, oxidation and so forth. These additives do what's expected of them, but with each stroke of the piston, they can leave a tiny amount of metallic salts in the combustion chamber where they burn and form additive ash.

This hard crusty ash, when allowed to build up, can seriously affect your car's performance—and can make it knock and run roughly.

New Shell X-100 Premium doesn't add to this problem—because it does not contain a single metallic additive.

No metal additives. No additive ash from motor oil. It's as simple as that.

Trouble #2—crankcase dirt

All engines accumulate crankcase dirt no matter how well they are protected by filters. The problem is to stop this dirt from getting together and forming sticky sludge which can clog your engine.

Most premium oils use a detergent additive to do the job. And they perform well. But, like other additives, most detergents are metallic and cause that old devil—ash.

Shell's solution is to replace detergent with a remarkable new ingredient known as a dispersant. Shell scientists call it Alkadine.®

Alkadine in new Shell X-100 Premium helps keep your engine clean by holding dirt particles apart. Thus they don't form sticky sludge. Some particles can be trapped by the oil filter; most are drained out when you change your oil.

Oddly enough, nobody yet knows exactly how Alkadine works. But the proof of the pudding is in the testing. After 1,200,000 miles of city driving, engines of test cars lubricated with Shell X-100 Premium showed so little sludge that it could hardly be measured.

Trouble #3—temperature changes

Many motor oils tend to become too thick when cold and too thin when hot.

New Shell X-100 Premium is an all-year oil. Here's how it works. Alkadine has a molecular structure that resembles a basket of eels.

This is new Shell X-100 Premium. Look for the white can with red letters. Your Shell service station now has it.

When the oil is cold, Alkadine's eel-like molecules curl up as if for comfort. In effect, they take up less space in the oil—and the oil flows freely through the tightest bearing, even on cold nights.

Conversely, when the Alkadine in new Shell X-100 Premium is hot, its molecules uncurl. They take up more room. And the oil resists thinning.

Thus, new Shell X-100 Premium eliminates trouble from sudden temperature changes. It lubricates just as efficiently in June as it does in January.

Trouble #4—engine acid

All automobile engines manufacture acid. This acid can do far more damage than friction. It can eat away at engine parts in much the way stomach acid can cause ulcers. Then you're really in trouble.

One way to combat engine acid is to make the oil alkaline. Many oils use this method. But here's what happens.

The neutralizing effect of alkaline oil inevitably gets weaker and weaker as engine acid eats up the alkalinity—till it eventually stops working completely. When this happens, your oil no longer gives you anti-acid protection.

Shell tackles this troublesome acid problem in a new and better way.

Shell X-100 Premium actually plates all engine surfaces with a thin chemical film. The metal literally adsorbs some of Shell X-100 Premium's protective qualities. Chemists call this phenomenon "chemisorption."

"Chemisorption" offers a longer-lasting protection against acid attack than any other method yet invented.

Trouble #5—cooling system leaks

Tiny anti-freeze leaks can play nasty tricks with many motor oils.

These oils can react chemically with permanent anti-freeze and form a horrible sludge which can actually bring an otherwise healthy engine to a standstill. Then you're on the way to a major repair bill.

New Shell X-100 Premium sets all such fears at rest. It resists reaction with any sort of anti-freeze. It shrugs it off. (Better get that leak fixed, anyhow, to keep your cooling system working.)

The additives in Shell X-100 Premium resist washing out with water, too. In some oils, additives can be lost to water leaks. In Shell X-100 Premium, they stay in the oil to protect your engine.

Astounding results from 5½ million-mile road test

Professional drivers put Shell X-100 Premium to a brutal test. They took $270,000 worth of automobiles and drove them relentlessly for 5½ million miles. Over highways, up mountain grades, around test tracks, over turnpikes—and through stop and go city traffic, the toughest test of all.

When Shell technicians tore the engines apart for inspection, here's what they found.

1. Wear was incredibly low. One car lubricated with Shell X-100 Premium still revealed the original tool markings on its rings—even after 70,000 miles at speeds of 60 to 100 mph.

The low wear with Shell X-100 Premium was verified over and over. In fact, when nine cars were driven at test track speeds for 70,000 to 100,000 miles, it was found that, from the standpoint of cylinder wear, the engines were good for another 100,000 miles.

2. Cleanliness ratings were tops. Pistons removed from a car lubricated with Shell X-100 Premium scored a rating of 9.5 out of a possible 10. A score of 9 is considered excellent.

3. Sludge was reduced to almost half the amount that lubrication experts consider to be acceptable.

4. Oil consumption records caused cheers. Cars lubricated with Shell X-100 Premium were driven at race track speeds for 100,000 miles, yet used only one quart every 1,800 miles.

On some tests, Shell X-100 Premium even out-performed expensive laboratory "reference oils." Shell X-100 Premium, fortunately, is neither expensive nor a laboratory oddity.

How much does Shell X-100 Premium cost?

If you drive an average of 10,000 miles per year, the switch to Shell X-100 Premium (with regular oil changes) will cost you only $7.20 more than ordinary oil—give or take a nickel. And probably nothing extra if you already use a premium grade.

Drive to your Shell service station and ask the dealer to change your oil while the engine is still hot. Be sure to ask for Shell X-100 Premium in the white can. It protects your engine from all five internal troubles listed above.

Julie London Has Dilemma About Scripts

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Sometimes a girl can sound too sexy for her own good.

That's Julie London's dilemma.

Album buyers know Julie as the girl with the bedroom voice, and apparently, do movie producers.

"Why can't I ever see scripts that other actresses get?" she asks.

"Everything they send me is pornographic," she laments. "I want to do Maid."

Julie is one of the better dramatic actresses in the business. She has built a mass audience — both in sound and looks — can overshadow dramatic talent in sometimes.

"They don't want me to act — they only talk. Why can't we get scripts with more depth in them?"

Julie says she never had any trouble getting good dramatic scripts before she became known as a sex symbol.

"I'm a stylist," she insists. "Not a singer. I sing low and lazy because I can't sing any higher."

But she underrates herself on that score. She is a top album seller for Liberty records, where her well-endowed figure often is displayed revealingly on covers.

One Liberty executive discloses an unusual sales appeal for Julie's albums.

"She is the only singer I know of," he says, "who can sell albums to men who don't own record players."

Neighbors' Aid Holds Euchre

2nd THURLOW— Mrs. Fred Mitchell and Mrs. Douglas Atkins were hostesses for the Neighbors' Aid euchre party at the aid hall recently; 19 tables were in play. Prizes were won by the following: ladies 1st — Mrs. O. Stratton, 2nd — Mrs. Garfield Hall; consolation — Mrs. Charles Wood; men's 1st — Mrs. C. Weaver, 2nd, Mr. Ross Stapley; consolation — Mr. C. Yorke. Lone hands — Mrs. Gordon Thompson received the requirements for a person to receive a pin from state to state. In Canada anyone who is a Canadian citizen and over 21 years of age may vote.

Mrs. H. Varcoe explained how an American president is elected, which must take place every four years.

First, the primaries are held in order to choose candidates. The next step is the National Party conventions where chandidates are chosen for president and vice-president in each party.

The men of the Electoral College are chosen next; they are not elected officials of either party, but made up of interested party members. An equal number of Democrats and Republicans are chosen in each state.

GENERAL ELECTION

The general election must always be held on the first Tuesday following the first Monday in November.

There are many types of ballots used in every state; some vote for their own party, others vote for the president. This is called the popular vote.

The actual voting for the president is done not by the public but by the 537 Electoral College members, who vote on January 6. The votes are counted and the vice-president announces the election of the president, who takes office on Jan. 20.

The speakers left the assembly with the question, Presidents or Prime Ministers?

Mrs. A. McDowell thanked the speakers for their interesting talk.

American vs. Canadian

An American senator is elected for two year terms and there are two from every state. The Canadian Senator is appointed for life and there are 103 senate seats in Canada. The House of Representatives has 435 seats and is elected on a two year basis. The House of Commons members are elected for five years or until Parliament is dissolved and there are only 265 seats. The Judiciary of the American government is made up of judges who are appointed and also many minor officials who are elected. The Canadian judges are appointed for life.

Mrs. M. Bedford also mentioned the requirements for a person to vote in Canada from state to state. In Canada anyone who is a Canadian citizen and over 21 years of age may vote.

The redingote skirt with lace edging ended in a slight sweep. The veil was of waist-length illusion tulle gathered into a matching scalloped crown, and she carried a mauve orchid and stephanotis.

Miss Beverly MacKenzie, twin sister of the bride, as maid of honour was the only attendant. She wore a short length lilac organza dress, the bodice fashioned with a Sweetheart neckline featuring self-toothy draped folds of organza, as did the bouffant skirt. Her headdress was a bow of matching veiling, topped with a velvet bow and streamers.

He can choose his own cabinet from men outside the Congress or Senate.

The Canadian Prime Minister, on the other hand, is the leader of the majority group in the House of Commons and his cabinet is made up of members from the House of Commons.

BARTLETT, Ill. (AP) — Cynthia Ann Orlando, who weighed two pounds when she was born 12 weeks prematurely Jan. 30 and given little hope of survival, has been given a clean bill of fine health. The infant weighed five pounds at birth, then dropped to 2 lbs. 13 oz. on Jan. 31. Alexandra Stewart, Montreal, Making Good in Movies

MONTREAL (CP) — Alexandra Stewart, the tall, lawny-haired 21-year-old who played Jordanna in the movie Exodus, has a difficulty acknowledging herself as an actress.

She says everything that has happened seems a little unreal since, fresh out of boarding school, she left Montreal four years ago for Paris.

There she planned to learn French, to take drawing lessons and to travel but, on the advice of a friend, decided to try to break into the modelling field.

The second place she went to, Elle Magazine "took me right away and put me on the cover." And if you start with Elle, "everyone else will use your picture," so she was soon deluged with offers; first for modelling and later for movies.

She has played in several French films including Les Mauvais Coups, with Simone Signoret. The Exodus role she was offered after director Otto Preminger saw her "tramping over the set of a Tarzan picture in East Africa."

LEARNED TO SIT

Of the Tarzan picture, she said: "It was a scream, but I had great fun doing it. Everything to see it."

During the course of her new career she has learned — besides "how to sit and smile under my face felt as though it was frozen" — water - skiing, deep-sea diving, and bull fighting.

She has watched bull fights in such famous arenas as Ernest Hemingway, Pablo Picasso and Orson Welles. She attempted herself with "some of the young bulls," while staying with friends in Spain and raised them.

Energetic and high - spirited, the Miss Stewart admitted necessary to the profession. "There is nothing more boring than filming," she sighed.

You waste so much time sitting waiting. You can't even read a book because there are so many hundreds of people around you."

Interviewed while visiting her own publicist, Alexandra — whose real name is Sandra — mentioned that she would like next to get back to Paris and film-making.

She said that until recently she would never have dared to think of herself as an actress and even now has not enough confidence in herself to believe her own publicity.

"But, you get caught up in this life. It's such a crazy world to see and do things you want."

Dorothy G. — She want talk about anything b u t clothes and cosmetics.

Gloria M. — She'd like me to turn into a frump like herself.

Dorothy G. — Gloria and I have been friends since childhood. As kids we played the same games, read the same books, enjoyed bike rides and picnics together. In high school we were both on the staff of the year-book — she the Art Editor, and I, the Managing Editor.

Now we commute downtown together to our jobs, and suddenly I cant talk to her without her flaring up at me. Ask her about a new book and she glares at me and changes the subject to a dress she's thinking of buying. Whereas before I could have lively discussions with her on many topics, now she sticks to the narrow one way street of clothes, make-up, hairdo, and "effects. Such shallowness in a bright girl is pathetic.

Gloria N. — Dotty believes in mind over matter which, to her, means nobody should notice her looks because she doesn't matter. How wrong she is! I don't want to tell her outright how annoying and embarrassing it is to be with someone whose hem is coming down, whose seams are twisted, fingernails chewed, coat buttons missing, and so on. Thats why I limit our talk to matter of appearance — hoping some of it will stick and he'll take the hint.

This period of my life has given me the first chance to look the way I've always wanted to. At last I have the money and the time to attend to proper grooming and to put together the most attractive "me I can. Dotty can do the same, instead, she hides in books.

The Council — Even your best friend won't tell you you shouldn't apply two Dorothy Sue come right out with it and say she's bored and disappointed with a Gloria that appears one day as a conversational fad-fan. And Gloria can tell Dorothy the reason, right from the clotheshorses mouth, for the disappointment.

Dorothy is more interested in the book than the cover, and Gloria's campaign is to show her the importance of both. We have with Gloria that appearance does matter, and greatly so in these fast moving days of fleeting contact. Dorothy must realize that a new acquaintance may quickly forget her name, but will peg her to certainly as a "girl with lipstick on her teeth."

The Pilgrim Fathers were right about a few basic truths, but they were wrong about frills and frivolities being sinful. It isn't virtue that keeps Dorothy slatternly and dowdy. It's a form of inverse snobbery, a feeling (perhaps unconsciously) that preoccupation with grooming and dress is okay for "the general run" but that she, the superior person, has better to use time and energy for the "important things in life." Actually, ma'ams, Dorthy can dress so as to be a slipper sight for those who behold her, rather than a shapeless rag bag.

Dorothy, by knowing she's attractive, will feel attractive, and through some mysterious hormonal action, shall become more attractive than ever. Reinforced by the smiles of approval from Gloria and others, she'll get much more out of those books she likes to talk about, too.

MODERN MANNERS

Cynthia Eagser Starr

DON'T FAIL TO EXPRESS APPRECIATION

Lack of time does not excuse lack of courtesy. You can always make the time, if you really want to. The "time lack" is usually used as an excuse to keep from doing something you didn't want to do in the first place, and want to put off doing just as long as you can!

To delay writing that thank-you note, or one of sympathy or appreciation, is to admit that you are either too lazy to exert yourself, or downright lacking in common courtesy. Don't you enjoy receiving a letter from someone when you are in one of the above circumstances? Don't you feel hurt, and make critical comments regarding those who fail to write you? Well put the shoe on the other foot, and remember that those who do not hear from you feel the same way!

To my way of thinking, one of the most important letters that should be written immediately, is that of expressing thanks to those who has in some way or another put himself out to please or to help us. When a recipient of a gift or flowers; after hospitality has been extended to you, or some kindness done for us all these should be acknowledged by a letter, or at least, a note.

"But it is so much simpler to telephone," you say! Depending on this instrument to relay your thanks is all right in cases. But I think a note is better. During recent years, the writing of letters has become almost a lost art! Chiefly because of the telephone. This has its uses, because there isn't one of us who won't say truthfully that we get a boost out of receiving written expressions of thanks.

Unfortunately, most of us either make a hurried phone call, or too often, put off until tomorrow, which never comes. Perhaps you have had the unpleasant experience of meeting someone to whom you owe appreciation, and have been forced to say "I meant to write, or call, and thank you." When this happens, you wish fervently that you could crawl away and hide! Knowing that you've been thoughtlessness and lack of courtesy has put you in this unpleasant spot, doesn't help any.

The point I am trying to make is: Never delay expressing your thanks when thanks are due. Do it immediately. Make that call or, preferably, write that letter. Don't put off until tomorrow, which never comes. Perhaps you have had the unpleasant experience of meeting someone to whom you owe appreciation, and have been forced to say "I meant to write, or call, and thank you." Question — The world is certainly full of a lot of new things. I just received an invitation and, for the lower right-hand corner, it says "Regrets Only" and at the bottom a telephone number. Isn't this a new idea? — Mrs. D. N. M., Newark, N. J.

Answer — Yes, it is new. It came into being to help the busy hostess try to get an immediate answer as to whether or not you are coming to her party. People are so remiss about acknowledging an invitation in writing, that this new idea has sprung up in the hope that people will call, when they won't take the time to write. Be sure to follow through. If you can't come, call her at once and tell her so!

Chill. Add fruit juices and water. Chill. Add ginger ale and sparkling white grape juice just before serving. (Note: If not available use plain white grape juice and soda water.) This is an excellent punch and highly recommended by me. If you are wedding-minded please clip this punch recipe now.

"Our church is a mighty army circling the globe. We are a Longhurst of Centre St. W.A. which vow is to keep with the message of the day.

GUEST SPEAKER

Mrs. Reid was introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. R. W. T. Middleton, who delivered an inspiring address entitled, She spoke of the odor of the ointment that Mary poured over Jesus' feet. "Sometimes we lose the fragrance in our hurry and bustle. So often we put off doing acts of kindness and thoughtfulness. Mary had not done this service when she said, she might not have had and her chance shortly after, Jesus was crucified."

Mrs. Middleton also spoke of the holiness of Jesus' last days, saying: we are familiar with the prayer of Jesus on the cross, 'Father forgive them for they know not what they do'; something unforgiveable we did not have another unspoken prayer, 'Father forgive Judas for he now knows what he has done. We wonder at the resurrection. Then she showed, we think, what would have happened if Jesus had not risen? We turn to Easter with confidence for Christ has risen indeed', Mrs. Bailey closed her address with prayer.

Mrs. Dickens thanked Mrs. Middleton for her thoughtful message.

After the meeting closed, a social half hour was enjoyed, lunch was served with Mrs. E. Flunder as convener.

JUVENILE COURT JUDGE — Mrs. Frank Chambers, judge of Toronto's juvenile court, is the mother of three grown children. A law graduate of Osgoode Hall, Toronto, Mrs. Chambers is planning to study for a degree in psychology. (CP Photo)

Parents Have Background To Lay Down Law to Family

TORONTO (CP) — When Mr. and Mrs. Frank Chambers find it necessary to lay down the law to their family, they have the background to do it.

Mr. Chambers, former Toronto alderman, is a Queen's Counsel. His wife Margaret worked as a lawyer for years until appointed a juvenile court judge here last December.

A quiet, shy little woman whose sympathetic nature is suited to her new job, Mrs. Chambers has varied interests, not the least of which are her three teen-aged children.

After a day in court, she can be found preparing dinner for her family and perhaps reviewing law in the evenings or playing chess and dreaming about the day when she will have time to work on a psychology degree and at gardening.

At one time she had wanted to become a doctor but her father discouraged her "with stories about being out in all weather, day and night."

It was while attending school in Paris in 1939 that her aunt predicted "that I would be a lawyer."

WON ARGUMENT

"We were driving in a carriage and we started to argue about whether or not horses should wear puttees. I guess I won."

She later received her law degree at Osgoode Hall "where she also met her husband."

Mrs. Chambers finds work at a juvenile court judge interesting but sometimes sad.

"Cases of car theft concerning young boys are brought up before me several times a week. Usually the families of the boys get card-but the boys are frustrated mechanics and take cars out for cruising.

"Another case that crops up again and again is of girls running away from home. I don't know why they want to sleep on a park bench or floor when nice warm beds at home. Usually family troubles are involved."

Judge Chambers is interested in travel and is looking forward to a drive to the Yukon this summer — provided she passes her driving test.

"Last year I tried my driving test and failed, but I'm ready to try again this year."

How do I save?

If there's a fool-proof way to save I've yet to hear of it. But one thing I do know: the "Royal's" 2-Account Plan makes saving a whole lot easier.

It works. Because with two separate accounts you can curb that natural urge to dip into your savings; you can actually see your savings grow.

Wedding in Watervliet

By Mary Moore

A cocktail of Sve of us drove to the eastern shore of Lake Watervliet, to Dora Jean Reed's cottage for a medieval-cinderella Miss Greenwood on Easter Saturday.

Dora Jean is Garny's and Joe's only daughter and only child. Of course we will remember Garny for she is an old friend from college days and a great favorite everywhere she finds you (through, me) many times before.

We arrived thirty-five minutes before the guests were to sit down to the rehearsal dinner for twenty-nine. The groom's parents, who live in Langley were the hosts but the dinner was at the home of Lucille Gilbert who is Garny's nearest and dearest neighbor.

The tables were a color picture. At each place was a fruit cup in a fluted orange skin shell. The place cards were decked with lemon-tucking little rings and white flower sprigs.

The main course of French fried broiler halves, tiny carrot rings, and Frenched bright green beans and sweet potatoes with orange in cases was served on blue willow ware. The pinwheel hot rolls were hot and the relishes were crisp and cold and included green and red watermelon pickle, jumbo green and black olives, cranberry jelly and celery. Dessert was a frozen angel food cake filled with tutti frutti ice cream.

Twinkling silverware and crystal were a delight to the eye and a constant reminder of the days with which every step of the wedding festivities had been planned by perfectionist Garny.

I had the fun of accompanying Garny to the church on Saturday morning for a last minute check on flowers and food, for the wedding was scheduled for 2.00 p.m. Watervliet, being a small town, provides very little in the way of professional services so skilled townspeople rallied round. I watched fascinated while a little women decorated the wedding cake with a tool she said a surgeons worthy of a Paris chef. As you know, at weddings in the United States the wedding cakes are made of white cake batter and this was big enough to serve two hundred.

Dora Jean is the darling of the townspeople and indeed to Garny she is a long time.

Pete reports that as she and her Dad stood at the church door her Dad whispered "Want to call it off Honey?" She smilingly whispered "Not on your life!" gave him a quick kiss and on that note they came down the aisle, radiant.

An Easter wedding tops all others for perfection of detail and filled the air and the altar. Indeed the whole wedding ceremony was for perfection and the holiness of Easter.

Following the ceremony two hundred guests descended to the church parlor where the Women's Association, had the refreshments ready. It had a heyday meeting old school and friends and Garny's family from Missouri.

I knew the recipe for the non-alcoholic punch would be coveted by many of you — but for the life of us we could not find the recipe card before I left. While we drove home through a snowstorm on Easter Sunday Garny dug and found it and I phoned her late Sunday evening to say we arrived safely and to copy the recipe over the phone.

WEDDING PUNCH:
(non-alcoholic).

This amount will serve 37 4-oz (punch-cup size) servings.

Two cups sugar, 4 cups water, 1 6-oz. can fresh frozen lemon juice, 1 6-oz. can fresh frozen orange juice, 4 1-3 cups water (this is a second amount of water for diluting frozen fruit juices as directed on can), 1 26-oz. bottle ginger ale, 1 2oz. bottle sparkling white grape juice. Make simple syrup by boiling together the sugar and water 1 minute.

Successful Living

Fiancee Laughs at Her Ways

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS: — My son is engaged to a young woman from Australia who is working in his office.

I don't object to the marriage, but I find it hard to take when she makes fun of our Canadian sayings and talks about the way they do things "down under". When we are in the same room or driving together in the car, she talks to my son; not to any of the family.

If she is going to high-hat us, she will make a poor daughter-in-law. What do you think? — MOTHER-OF-FOUR.

DEAR MOTHER-OF-FOUR: — Are you sure you have not been high-hatting her? Without intending to?

Chances are she is overwhelmed by her Canadian relations-to-be. She has thrown in her lot with you by accepting your son. Now she finds she must accept new traditions, new ways of eating and behaving — even new ways of talking. Wouldn't you protest sometimes?

Try seeing her side of it. She talks to your son because she knows she has his love. But if this girl is homesick, she needs understanding and mothering. Reach out for her and see if she doesn't respond.

Make yourself Mother-of-Five.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: — The Children's Aid put a four-year-old child in a foster home on our street. In a few weeks he was gone again, and I understand it was to another foster home. Then the couple took another one, and he was moved out in three months. Why do they keep popping children from one foster home to another? — NEIGHBOR.

DEAR NEIGHBOR: — They don't. It just looks that way.

The trained social workers of the Children's Aid Society know only too well that "each replacement repeats for the child the painful experience of separation". In other words it was trouble of some kind that made it necessary to disturb the little girl or boy by taking him out of his own home, and if he can get security and care with other parents, that is what he needs.

But situations have a way of changing. The foster mother finds the care too much for her, or the little boy clashes with the other children in the foster home. You can't always tell ahead that this will happen.

Then, too, the home he came from may have straightened things out and be ready to take him back, because this is what everybody is working for. So out he goes and home, with rejoicing. The neighbors may see the child go, but since the work is confidential, they are not likely to know the ins and outs of a situation which bring about a move. . .

TO J. K. R.: — You would be foolish to marry him for security. If you quarrel and your tastes are different, he sounds like a poor risk. As you say, "It's forever when your married".

Good for you for keeping the home fires burning! As long as you and your mother can provide what care your brothers and sisters need, the Children's Aid will not interfere. Talk it over with them. You have a right to work towards your own future and a part-time job might keep you in trim for a bigger job later on.

Meanwhile, the right man for you may come into your life. Keep believing in yourself and your future, and forget about the past.

Leader of Negro 'Muslim' Movement Gives Interview

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Surrounded by bodyguards, the leader of the Negro "Muslim" movement in the United States held what he called his first press conference Friday — and asked for a separate piece of the country, just for Negroes.

"If the government doesn't agree to that," said Elijah Muhammad, 63, "the government should ship us back to where we came from."

He said he spoke for some 200,000 Muslims and predicted virtually all of the 20,000,000 American Negroes would be members of the sect by 1970.

Muhammad — who said he was a worshipper of the Mohammedan God Allah — called the meeting to "dispell slanderous statements against me and my followers in the various presses and news items."

Among things he denied:

1. That Muslims teach black supremacy by "we're teaching that the righteous people will rule," he said).

2. That Muslims favor violent overthrow of the government.

3. That they ever attacked police ("the police attack us and then accuse us of attacking them").

4. That the group has an underground, training with modern weapons.

The Muslims have been described as fanatically anti-white and have been blamed by police for riots.

The Muslim brotherhood was founded in Detroit in the '30s. It is opposed to—and opposed by—other Negro organizations, including the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

MAY EXTEND LIMITS

CAPE TOWN (AP) — External Affairs Minister Eric Louw told parliament Friday South Africa is thinking of extending its territorial limits at sea. South African fishermen have demanded the limit be extended to 12 miles from three — like Iceland did — in order to keep out especially Russian fishing fleets which have been working off South Africa and south-west Africa.
